HUNT $350,000 LENT TO CARNEGIE TRUST

Inquiry Into Allegation That an Official Got It and Company Paid Back $100,000.

ROBIN'S SENTENCE PUT OFF

Month's Time to Allow New Sanity Hearing and Let Him Continue Disclosures—75 Bankers to Testify.

Joseph G. Robin will not be sentenced on March 27 for the self-confessed crime of stealing $27,000 from the Washington Savings Bank. Sentence will not be passed until April 27. The month's delay was granted yesterday by Justice Seabury of the Supreme Court, before whom Robin confessed, at a conference in his chambers in the County Court House with District Attorney Whitman, William Travers Jerome, and Samuel J. Goldsmith, counsel for Robin.

At this conference Justice Seabury decided upon a course of action which may play an important part in the final commitment of Robin. He told the lawyers that in order to satisfy himself as to the exact state of Robin's mind briefs incorporating the testimony of all the alienists and lay witnesses in the hearing before Judge Swann and a jury in General Sessions should be filed with him, together with whatever other testimony concerning Robin's sanity lawyers might be able to gather.

Whether this proceeding means the appointment of a commission to pass upon Robin's present state of mind or not could not be learned. That point may be decided later by Justice Seabury. His action in reopening the question of Robin's sanity was construed by many persons to mean that he will practically review the jury's decision finding Robin sane in spite of the testimony to the contrary of many eminent alienists.

Before this unexpected turn in Robin's case became known it was learned that the Grand Jury inquiry into the Carnegie Trust Company is aiming now to fix responsibility for a peculiar loan of $250,000 alleged to have been made by the old Van Norden Trust Company and the Nineteenth Ward Bank to a high official in the Carnegie Trust Company. This loan is considered by the official investigators as a transaction which may place at least one of the Carnegie Trust officials in a very embarrassing position.

According to information which has reached the investigators, the Carnegie Trust Company official negotiated first a loan of $350,000 from the Van Norden Trust and the Nineteenth Ward Bank, with the understanding that the borrower was the Carnegie Trust Company. The paper figuring in the deal was either a cashier's check or a draft.

When the borrowed money arrived at the Carnegie Trust Company certain employes of the institution were instructed to place the money to the high official's account, which was done, the Carnegie Trust Company receiving not a cent of the loan.

Not long after this, according to what the investigators learned, the Carnegie Trust Company, as an institution, paid $100,000 to the Van Norden Trust Company and the Nineteenth Ward Bank, thus shaving down the loan to $250,000. Officials of both the Van Norden Trust and the Nineteenth Ward Bank and employes of the Carnegie Trust Company, it is understood, are being examined in regard to this transaction.

Seventy-five Bankers Summoned.

The decision to postpone the passing of sentence on Robin was brought about partly through a request by Mr. Goldsmith and partly by the desire of District Attorney Whitman to have further time in which to place the full story of Robin before the Grand Jury. Mr. Whitman told Justice Seabury that the information Robin gave was of the utmost importance, so important that it had necessitated the summoning of about seventy-five high officials in some of the leading banks of New York City, in order that the transactions which are expected to lead ultimately to indictments can be run down. About seventeen banks and trust companies are represented by the seventy-five bankers who have been subpoenaed, and the tracing of the various transactions which have been described by Robin will take several weeks. The Grand Jury inquiry will not even be nearing completion on March 27, the day on which it had originally been planned by Justice Seabury to pass sentence on Robin.

It also came out yesterday that several links had been forged in a chain of evidence going toward implicating a city official with the affairs of the Cummins syndicate and their banking institutions. One link is still missing, and in summoning the seventy-five bank officials the investigators hope to supply it.

All yesterday afternoon the Grand Jury heard evidence bearing on the Carnegie Trust Company investigation. Several witnesses were examined, and book entries are also believed to have been exhibited by the investigators, and the significance of certain transactions made plain.

Following Trail to Other Banks.

The scope of the Grand Jury investigation has broadened so materially that the trail of questionable transactions is expected to lead into the affairs of nearly a score of banking institutions which advanced money to W. J. Cummins and his friends while they were in control of the Carnegie Trust and while that institution was having difficulty keeping its head above water.

Bradley Martin, Jr., was before the Grand Jury nearly an hour yesterday, and when he left E. R. Finch, a Director in the Nineteenth Ward Bank, was called to testify. John V. Coggey, formerly Commissioner of Corrections and a Director in the Nineteenth Ward Bank, was also a witness. Gustave Baumann, a Director in the Van Norden Trust Company, which became the Madison Trust Company, also testified. It is understood that yesterday's witnesses were questioned regarding the $250,000 loan.

The conference held by the District Attorney, Justice Seabury, Mr. Jerome, and Mr. Goldsmith took place after Mr. Whitman's appearance before the Grand Jury. It is believed that it was at the suggestion of Justice Seabury that Mr. Jerome was called into the conference. It was learned that all of the alienists, who testified before Judge Swann, would be asked to repeat their testimony before stenographers and that three transcripts of this testimony would be made, one for Justice Seabury, one for District Attorney Whitman, and one for Mr. Jerome. Similar transcripts will be made of the testimony of the laymen.

Matteawan or Sing Sing!

Just who will conduct the examination of the alienists and others has not been decided. Robin also will have something to say concerning his own mental state, and this, too, will be incorporated in the briefs. The purport of all this is evidently to enable Justice Seabury to reach his own conclusion concerning Robin's mental state, and it will doubtless decide, if Rob-

BRIDAL PAIR IN A RUNAWAY.

Louis Virkin of 947 Blake Avenue, Brooklyn, a Brownsville butcher, and his bride, who was Miss Eva Helford, began their wedded life yesterday in strenuous fashion. As they left Roosevelt Hall, Blake Avenue and Cleveland Street, where they were married, their coach, drawn by two horses, took fright at the fusillade of rice and old shoes and ran away. They dragged the bridal coach, streaming with white ribbons, and old shoes whirling about its rapidly revolving wheels so swiftly that Joseph Roman of 167 Osborn Street, the driver, was thrown from his seat. Landing in the gutter with his silk hat smashed and his clothes bedraggled, he rubbed several contusions as he scrambled to his feet.

Virkin, the bridegroom, opened one door of the coach and made an effort to grasp the reins, but his bride of a few minutes dragged him back into the vehicle, where both were tossed about like dice in a box.

Patrolman Arsman tried to stop the horses and was bowled over. Mounted Patrolman McKie spurred his horse in pursuit, and was close behind the coach when Patrolman Harvey J. Kiefer reached for the reins. Kiefer missed, but jumped on the rear of the coach, crawled up over the roof to the back of the off horse, but lost his balance and fell off before he could stop the team. But he held on to the reins and stopped the horses at Sheffield Avenue.

Mrs. Virkin said that Kiefer should receive a Carnegie medal and announced that when she returns from her wedding trip she will visit Mayor Gaynor and ask him that Kiefer be promoted.

METAL HARDER THAN STEEL.

New Composition Announced as Yellow as Gold and Almost Impenetrable.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 14.—A new composition metal, with the unfading yellow of gold and the hardness and impenetrability of Krupp steel, was announced to-day by Count Charles de Peloggio of Genoa and Theodore S. Scarla, also a Genoese, who has recently become a resident of Chicago. It is called radioro.

Count de Peloggio is a son of Count Peloggio of Genoa, owner of lead and silver mines in Sardinia, in Nevada, and in Central America. The younger Count is spending six months in the United States and in Central America, studying mining conditions here and investigating his father's properties. He thus describes the metal:

"First of all the color and brightness of the composition are unaffected by the atmosphere, by the ordinary acids, and even by fire. Its resemblance to gold is wonderful. By a series of examinations the hardness of the new composition as compared with Krupp steel has been established. The results announced at the Italian Navy Yard show that a layer of armor of radioro shows the same resistance to a projectile as steel a third again as thick.

"It is made from a number of metals, and, as its main constituent is a waste product in many processes, it is cheap and abundant as iron ore. Its uses will be almost infinite, as household utensils, heavy machinery, battleship armor, and even jewelry can be made from it."

LOST IN STEVENS CASTLE.

Jewels Supposed to Have Been Stolen Were Merely Mislaid in the Big House

Reports were current yesterday of a robbery at Stevens Castle, Hoboken. Down around Police Headquarters it was said that "articles of great value" had disappeared. Uptown at the clubs there were stories that the great gray castle overlooking the Hudson from the Hoboken promontory had been stripped of its heirlooms.

Col. E. A. Stevens explained last night that what had really happened was that some jewelry, valued at about $300 or $400, had been mislaid. It had since been recovered, he said, "found on a bed in one of the spare rooms."

Stevens castle, which has been the family home since the Revolutionary Treasurer of New Jersey's day, although rebuilt early in the nineteenth century, is the largest as well as the oldest residence in these parts. It has sixty-four rooms. Many of the sleeping rooms are each as big as a whole Harlem flat, and the Colonial 4-poster beds would cover the floor space of a "light housekeeping" apartment.

The jewelry was missing a week, although the search, Col. Stevens said last night, was pretty thorough, and made with the professional help of a burglary insurance man.

FIND NEW YORK DIFFERENT.

Why It Is Hard for Two British Officers to Get Away to Wenatchee, Wash.

Capt. Vernon Percy Smith and Capt. Alfred Hubert Harrison, two British officers who wear monocles and carry whangee canes, have been staying at the Waldorf-Astoria since last Friday trying to get away to Wenatchee, Wash. The sights of New York, however, have proved to be so attractive and so interesting, don't you know, as they both expressed it yesterday, that they have made the evenings and the next morning part of the same day. Six P. M. has been breakfast hour, and 1 A. M. dinner time, so that they have never been able to get up and catch the train for the West.

Capt. Smith said yesterday that they were going to bed at 11 o'clock last night so that they would be up and have breakfast in time to catch the Lake Shore Limited for Chicago at 5:30 P. M. to-day. Capt. Harrison, who was gazing through his monocle shudderingly at a man eating cheese and apple pie washed down with a glass of iced milk, said:

"One has to change one's habits when one is away from one's own country hasn't one, Percy?"

Two Storms May Meet Here To-day.

Special warnings reached the Weather Bureau in this city from Washington, at 10 o'clock last night, that storm signals had been ordered from Portland to Sandy Hook because of a storm off the Carolina Coast and another from the Northwest which had already reached Ontario. The outlook was for highest southeast winds becoming northwest by to-night, with rain or snow.

ALL EXPRESSMEN MAY BE CALLED OUT

General Strike Will Be Ordered If the Adams Company Won't Arbitrate.

DECIDED AT NIGHT MEETING

Company Refuses to See a Committee of Its Employes or to Make Any Terms with the Strikers.

At a stormy meeting of the Executive Councils of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters of New York and Jersey City in Chelsea Hall, 161 Eighth Avenue, lasting from 8 o'clock until midnight, it was decided last night that unless the Adams Express Company agreed to receive a committee of its striking drivers, with a view of settling the present difficulties, either by arbitration or otherwise, a general strike of all the drivers and helpers of every express company in this city and Jersey City will be called.

A representative of the Adams Express Company when informed early this morning of the action of the Executive Council said that he did not regard the new move as particularly serious. He said:

"We will continue to go ahead as we have since the strike began. We have been and are willing to meet our own men, but we will not treat with any outside organization. This has been our position all along."

The company has until this evening to meet the conditions imposed by the councils. If they reject the terms, a general strike will be called immediately. For the present the chauffeurs of the taxicab companies and other teamsters will not be affected. It also was agreed at last night's meeting to place William H. Ashton, General Organizer for the American Federation of Labor, in full charge of the present strike. Mr. Ashton had charge of the recent express drivers' strike. This takes the situation entirely out of the hands of Howard P. Biggs, Chairman of Local 487, who has been in charge thus far.

It was decided that every member of every union in the International Brotherhood in the city be assessed $1 a week as long as the strike lasts. This will mean an addition of about $22,000 a week to the treasury of the organization for the benefit of the strikers.

After the meeting Mr. Ashton explained that the agreement to call a general strike of express drivers and helpers unless the terms laid down were agreed to by the Adams Company had the indorsement of the American Federation of Labor officials. The strike, if it is called, he said, will be carried on more aggressively than the last one.

"I am to have full charge of the strike from now on," said Mr. Ashton, "and it will be a fight to a finish. There are many grievances which the strikers have and of which the public know nothing. We have gone slow in this matter, but the time has now come when the unions will have to act for their own self-preservation.

"The officials of the Adams company have steadfastly refused even to see delegations or committees from the strikers. If they refuse to see a committee to-morrow, nothing can prevent one of the worst strikes the city has seen. Just when the employes of the other express companies will be called out it is too early to say, but it will be within a few days."

Help First Was Refused.

Earlier in the day the Executive Committee of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters had not decided to call a general strike. The members of Local 487, composed entirely of Adams Company employes, had boasted that if General Agent Charles MacKay of the Adams Company refused to compromise they would appeal to the International Brotherhood of Teamsters to declare a general strike. They made the appeal, but at that time it fell upon unresponsive ears.

Another blow to the hopes of the strikers was dealt early in the day when a majority of the American Express Company employes, who compose the American Express Employes' Association, met in their clubrooms, 67 Madison Avenue, and passed resolutions repudiating the strike, and asking for the support of all in their efforts to preserve their liberty and their rights to earn a living.

The members of the association believe in the "open shop." In joining they resigned from the labor unions and agreed to have nothing more to do with them. It was said last night that if the Adams employes lose the present strike it will go a long way toward ending hope of establishing a union of the express drivers here. The resolutions of the American Express Employes' Association ran:

Whereas, This association and its members have no connection whatever with the Teamsters' Union, or any other labor organization, except the American Express Employers' Association.

Whereas, Efforts have already been made to intimidate or overawe and terrify certain of our members, be it

Resolved, That we hereby call upon our fellow-citizens of New York of whatever station of life to give us their moral support in the effort we are making to preserve our liberty, so that we may continue to work for the support of our families.

We have no grievance against the American, National, and Westcott Express Companies; we have no demands to make upon them, and inasmuch as we are dependent on the public for our livelihood, we would request that we be permitted to continue in the pursuit of same without molestation.

Officials of the Adams Company said yesterday that they were having no difficulty in keeping all their wagons moving. There is no longer accumulations of freight in their depots, they said, and everything was running just as smoothly as if there had been no strike whatever. Assaults had been made upon several strikebreaking drivers, they admitted, but said it did not interfere with the moving of the wagons.

Will Grant No Terms.

"It is useless for the strikers or their representatives to bother us about coming to terms," said an official of the Adams Company. "We have no terms to grant. If the strikers want to come back to work they are at liberty to do so. Their jobs are waiting for them, but we have no terms to offer. We do not intend to recognize the strike or the unions by dealing with committees or representatives.

"So far as we are concerned the strike is already over. We are moving our wagons promptly and we have no difficulty in securing plenty of drivers and helpers. The situation has cleared up in Brooklyn, Harlem, and Jersey City, and it is fast being straightened out in Manhattan. It appears that there is little or no prospect of a general strike of express drivers being called or a call being heeded if it is made.

"The employes of all the companies appear to be well satisfied with their treatment. As for our employes, the majority are not in sympathy with the strike, but

SEATS FOR 25,000 PERSONS

Receipts to be Given to City—Stover and Committee to Select Plays—'Joan of Arc' and 'Chantecler' Suggested.

Plans are under way for the presentation in New York, under city auspices, of open air dramatic spectacles to be given at a nominal admission fee. For the last two months Park Commissioner Stover and a representative of Charles Frohman have been working on plans for the out-of-door performance in one of the city parks this season or next of noteworthy drama and pageants not possible of production in an ordinary theatre. The purpose is to inaugurate a permanent civic policy of providing public entertainment of an educational nature to the people of the city.

The first of these performances, it is announced, will be under the direction and with the co-operation of Maude Adams, who has offered to appear in a historical pageant or al fresco Shakespearean production similar to the presentation of "Joan of Arc," at Harvard University, or of "As You Like It," at the University of California last Summer.

It was announced last night that the conferences that have been going on for some time between Mr. Frohman's representatives and Commissioner Stover have resulted in the Commissioner's acceptance of Mr. Frohman's and Miss Adams's offers of their services. No choice of a suitable location for the first performance has yet been made, but will probably be determined within a few days.

Thomas Hastings, of the firm of Carerre & Hastings, has offered to design and direct the building of the temporary structure for the accommodation of an audience of 25,000 persons. The choice of the play will mutually be agreed upon by Miss Adams and a committee headed by the Park Commissioner.

The following statement, in the form of a letter to the Commissioner, explains the origin and scope of the idea:

"Miss Maude Adams has long felt that the time is ready for awakening the public spirit in behalf of the public drama, and she desires to start the movement by bringing the drama to the people in great out-of-door performances. We are particularly fortunate in having in the present Park Commissioner a practical idealist who has long endeavored to realize the same plan and give it to the people of New York City as the permanent heritage of the people of this generation to the people of the following.

"The time is opportune to start the movement. Miss Adams, therefore, offers to the City of New York a production similar in size and magnificance to that of 'Joan of Arc,' which she presented at Harvard University two years ago, and of 'As You Like It,' which she presented at the University of California last year. This performance, we hope, will be merely the inception of a great out-of-door theatre, belonging to the people, such as they had in the classic ages at Athens and Rome. We believe that the scope of this new undertaking will be enormous. Certainly the most distinguished among American actors and actresses will be glad to give their services for an occasional performance, so that the public may be able to go and enjoy the plays and the dramatic productions of to-day.

"Just what drama Miss Adams will produce must be decided in conference between the Commissioner and herself, together with other public-spirited persons whom they choose to assist them. I would suggest 'Joan of Arc' or 'Chantecler'; but the suggestion that will rise from the mere announcement of the project may bring to mind some drama that will be even better. But those that I mention adapt themselves wonderfully to open air performances. The success of 'Joan of Arc' played in the out-of-doors is already proved by Miss Adams's performance at Harvard. Rostand's symbolic drama would be unusually picturesque in its natural setting, for all of its acts are laid in the open and two of its scenes in the midst of the wood. Then, too, I think 'Chantecler,' through its marvelous allegory, the greatest play, thus far, of the century.

"The idea is to have an admission of a nominal fee, as the project is designed entirely for the people of the city, poor and well-to-do alike. All receipts will be turned over to the city for whatever purpose the Commissioner may decide. We will, of course, meet the entire cost of the production, as we have in all special performances, so that the city will have no expense beyond the seating arrangements. There can be no doubt of the success of the projet. The parks are, after all, the great leisure home of the people, and Miss Adams desires to do her share in making that home complete."

WRUNG DAUGHTER'S NECK.

Mrs. Feltdrapple Declares She Killed Her Daughter and Tried Suicide.

CLINTON, Conn., March 14.—The burning of the home of Alfred T. Feltdrapple in Killingworth yesterday and the disappearance of his wife and three-year-old daughter, was explained by the finding late to-day of Mrs. Feltdrapple and her confession to the medical examiner that she "had wrung the neck of her daughter and locked her in the house." She did not remember, she said, anything about setting the house on fire.

After killing her child she said she attempted to kill herself by pounding her head with a hammer, and then tried to cut her throat, but the knife she had was too dull. Failing in these two attempts, she went to the Hammonasett River and jumped in, but the water was so cold, she said, she could not stand it, and went to the home of friends, three miles away.

An examination of the woman to-night by the medical examiner shows that the front part of her head and forehead is a mass of bruises, and that there are several long red marks on her throat, all of which seem to bear out her story.

It is the opinion of the medical examiner that the woman is insane, and she is being held for a Coroner's examination to-morrow.

DE LESSEPS WINNER OF LIBERTY FLIGHT

BITTER CONTROVERSY ENDED

Only Comfort for Friends of Dead American Who Made Fastest Time Is That Englishman Also Loses.

With the acceptance last night by the Board of Governors of the Aero Club of America of the ruling of the Federation Aeronautique Internationale, awarding to Count de Lesseps the $10,000 Statue of Liberty prize offered by Thomas Fortune Ryan for the fastest aeroplane flight around the statue from Belmont Park, the scene of the second international aviation tournament last October, the controversy raised by Claude Grahame-White, the English aviator, over the awarding of the prize was brought to a close.

The ruling of the Federation Aeronautique Internationale disqualifies Mr. White as well as the late John B. Moisant, who was popularly acclaimed the winner when it became known that his was the fastest time made by any of the three contestants.

Mr. Moisant was disqualified by the Federation Aeronautique Internationale for having failed to accomplish a continuous flight of one hour's duration prior to his entry in the Statue of Liberty flight. Mr. White was disqualified because a wing tip of his Blériot monoplane fouled pylon No. 5 as he was settling to the ground on the return from his flight. Count de Lesseps is accredited the winner, therefore, although the elapsed time of his flight was longer than that of either Mr. Moisant or Mr. White.

The controversy has been one which threatened to disrupt the friendly relations between the local aero governing body and the Federation Internationale. It has aroused more interest in aviation circles than any previous incident of aviation tournaments, and despite the acceptance by the Aero Club of America of the ruling of the international body there remain many aeronauts and folk interested in aeronautics who believe the prize should have gone to John B. Moisant.

That a controversy arose at all over the awarding of the prize was due to the conditions under which the race was flown. It is because they feel that these conditions have not been appreciated by the international body that many aeronauts express dissatisfaction with the verdict which gives the prize to Count de Lesseps.

One condition of the race was that each contestant qualify by making a preliminary flight of at least one hour's duration. Claude Grahame-White and Count de Lesseps made such qualifying flights. But of all the aviators gathered at Belmont Park who had announced an intention of competing for the Statue of Liberty prize these two alone fulfilled this stipulation.

Inclement weather prevented continued flying by any one except on the occasions seized by Grahame-White and Count de Lesseps. Others, unprepared to fly at that time, found the days slipping by without an opportunity to qualify. The day for the statue flight came and went with no attempt on the part of any one to compete for the $10,000 prize, so inclement was the weather. Although the postponement of the event had not been provided for in the conditions governing it, it was agreed, nevertheless, to permit a contest for the prize at a later and more favorable day, and at the same time it was understood generally that the clause requiring an hour's sustained flight would be waived in view of the continued bad weather.

It was under these conditions that the race was flown and won by John B. Moisant, who started last and whose reappearance after all hope of a victory by him had been abandoned drove the crowd into a frenzy of excitement. With the understanding that the sustained flight requirement had been waived, the judges of the meet at Belmont Park awarded the prize to Moisant. He was accepted everywhere as the winner, and had been acclaimed as such when Grahame-White entered a protest with the Aero Club of America. Previously Mr. White had demanded another chance to make better time around the Statue, and had proposed that both he and Moisant make the trial again, he in his 100 horse power Blériot, Moisant in the Blériot of only fifty horse power, in which he never even had sat until he started on the flight around the Statue.

When these proposals were rejected Grahame-White formally protested against the awarding of the prize to Moisant. The Aero Club referred his claims to the international body. Moisant said not a word. Up to the time of his death on Dec. 31, when he was crushed at New Orleans, he left his interests in the hands of the Aero Club, confident that the tacit waiving of the sustained flight clause would be made clear to the international body. That the Federation Aeronautique Internationale has ignored this detail of the flights was declared by Moisant's friends last night to be a keen disappointment to them.

"There is just one source of satisfaction in the whole affair," declared an amateur aeronaut last night. "Grahame-White, whose proposals immediately after the flight were considered unsportsmanlike, to say the least, will not receive the prize. It would be interesting to know what he will think of the decision which his own protest called forth."

This is the official report of the Board of Governors of the Aero Club of America:

That in accordance with the demand of the F. A. I. the following be the reclassification of the Statue of Liberty Prize: De Lesseps, winner; Moisant disqualified by vote of the F. A. I., Jan. 10, 1911, and Grahame-White disqualified for fouling Pylon 5.

That Mr. Grahame-White be informed of the reclassification and that in case he has any protest to file against the reclassification a hearing will be given him or his representative on demand.

That the above offer to Grahame-White be communicated to the Secretary of the F. A. I; the case be referred to the Law Committee for a complete and clear statement of the facts of the case in their chronological order, to be given our delegates at the next meeting of the F. A. I. to be read and made of record.

The above is a statement of the recommendations of the following committee, who were in charge of the preparation of the case before the F. A. I.: Robert J. Collier, Samuel Reber, Cortlandt Field Bishop, and Lyttleton Fox.

Comte Jacques de Lesseps was qualified under the rulings of the F. A. I. by a flight of more than one hour made in the first hourly altitude event on the 25th day of October, 1910. The duration of this flight is shown by the barograph record.

The findings of the international body were approved by these members of the Aero Club Board of Governors: Allan A. Ryan, President; Cortlandt Field Bishop, Charles Jerome Edwards, W. W. Miller, Llewelyn Fox; L. L. Gillespie, Sandel A. Valentine, Allan A. Hawley, James A. Blair, Jr., and Hart O. Berg, who represented the Aero Club in the controversy in Paris.

ARRESTS AFTER CONEY FIGHT

Inspector Dooley and Capt. Robinson of the Coney Island Station waited in the Brighton Beach Athletic Club, West Seventeenth Street and Surf Avenue, Coney Island, last night, until the last bout was finished by a knockout administered to John Barrett of Chicago by Edward Powers, a local boxer. Then they served John Doe warrants issued yesterday morning by Magistrate Dodd, in the Coney Island Court, on these two fighters and on Raymond Bliss and Dennis McGrath, who had taken part in the semi-final bout. None of the managers of the club was arrested.

OBERLIN, Ohio, March 14.—President King to-day announced four gifts to Oberlin College, amounting to $70,000, one of $50,000 being from a donor whose identity is withheld. This money will be used to erect a new administration building. Mr. and Mrs. George M. Clark of Chicago have given $10,000 toward a new dormitory for women. L. H. Severance of New York gives $5,000, and another gift of $5,000 comes from an anonymous friend.

The gifts announced to-day are a part of the new half million-dollar fund, the raising of which was started a year ago. This fund now amounts to $480,000.

H. P. WHITNEY'S FAST TRIP.

Special to The New York Times.

WAYCROSS, Ga., March 14.—In order to have a conference of fifteen minutes this afternoon with his uncle, Oliver H. Payne, who is at Thomasville, Harry Payne Whitney of New York made a 478-mile trip by special train to-day over the Florida East Coast and the Atlantic Coast Line at a speed of over a mile a minute. The 75 miles between Jacksonville and Waycross over the Atlantic Coast Line was made in 70 minutes, allowing for three stops. The special was composed of two cars, Mr. Whitney's Wanderer and a combination car.

To catch a through train to New York Mr. Whitney made the return trip by special to Waycross early to-night, covering a total distance of 625 miles.

The trip will cost Mr. Whitney over $700. He has been spending the Winter at Palm Beach.

CLUB FOR WOMEN SMOKERS.

New Boston Women's Club Won't Bar the Cigarette—Society Is Shocked.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., March 14.—The efforts of Mrs. Warner B. Leeds of New York to establish a new club for women in the quarters occupied by the British Tea Table at 280 Boylston Street, have caused a seething tempest in the Back Bay. It was announced that women would be allowed to smoke in the new club, and society is rapidly dividing into two factions, the smokers and the anti-smokers.

Benjamin C. Tower, Secretary of the new organization, which is to be known as the Assembly Tearoom Club, admitted to-day that women would be permitted to smoke if they so desired.

"Of course," he said, "we don't mean to advertise this sort of thing, but if the women members want to smoke, that is their own business, and they will be allowed to do so."

CAMBRIDGE DEMOCRATIC.

Party Wins Mayoralty for First Time in the History of the City.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 14.—For the first time in the history of the city the Democrats will be in complete control during the coming year. They have not only elected their candidate for Mayor to-day, but also the Principal Assessor, the entire eleven members of the Board of Aldermen and twelve out of twenty-two members of the Common Council. The victory was decisive in every instance.

Former Representative J. Edward Barry, Democrat, was elected Mayor, receiving 6,099 votes, a plurality of 740 over his nearest opponent, Principal Assessor Jeremiah F. Donovan, non-partisan. The third candidate, Edward B. James, President of the Board of Aldermen, who ran as an independent, received a trifle more than 1,100 votes.

JUMPED FROM ROOF TO DEATH

Antonio Sarro, who lives on the third floor of 342 East Forty-eighth Street, heard something falling past his windows last night, and, getting Policeman Bertrand of the East Fifty-first Street Station, he went into the yard. There he and Bertrand found the body of Mrs. Winnie Piedhida, who, with her aged husband, Vincent, had been visiting Mrs. Piedhida's son by a former marriage, James Gillen and his wife, of 344 East Forty-eighth Street.

It was evident that Mrs. Piedhida had fallen or jumped from the roof, and detectives learned that at 7 o'clock she and her son had quarreled and the woman left the house, saying she was going down to see the janitress. When she did not return at 9 o'clock, the family went to bed, thinking that she would return presently.

The police believe that the woman jumped from the roof.

FOOT CLUNG TO MAINE TURRET

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, March 14.—In the course of to-day's operations for raising the Maine, charred portions of a shoe and foot bones were found incrusted upon the main forward turret top of the sunken vessel.

The engineers' force also succeeded in pulling up the sheet anchor, which had obstructed the driving piles.

MAY MOVE ARMY TO MEXICAN BORDER

PLAN CONCERTED MOVEMENT

Special to The New York Times.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, March 14.—Information received here to-day by telephone from Eagle Pass, on the Mexican border, conveyed information which makes it seem probable that Gen. Carter, in command of the divisional army now assembled at Fort Sam Houston, will, before the end of the week, move most of the soldiers now assembled here to El Paso, Eagle Pass, and other points along the border for patrol duty or manoeuvres.

The information come from an American who has just reached Eagle Pass after having made his way through the State of Chihuahua on horseback and by automobile. He says that a wide extension of the insurrecto movement is imminent in the northern and eastern parts of the State of Chihuahua and that already 800 men are in the field. He adds that there are 10,000 men already under arms, awaiting the signal for an outbreak, and the uprising has been carefully planned.

The condition of Chihuahua, the capital of Chihuahua State, according to this informant, is much more serious than messages from Mexico have indicated. There are 2,500 Federals immured within the City of Chihuahua, and about 5,000 insurrectos surrounding the town. The city has been completely cut off by rail and wire for more than ten days, and it is said that there is imminent danger of a revolt against the garrison by the citizens themselves. The insurrectos believe they could easily take the City of Chihuahua, but they are biding their time and show no disposition to force a situation which they regard as already in their own hands.

The Trouble in Chihuahua.

The unrest within the city is said to be due to information which the insurrectos have conveyed and which indicates a concerted movement on the part of all the enemies of the Diaz Government throughout the entire State of Chihuahua and the rest of Northern Mexico. Reports of the mobilization of American troops here at San Antonio have, it is said, been conveyed to the disaffected inhabitants of Chihuahua and has been colored to indicate the imminent collapse of the Diaz Government.

The American informant says that there is no doubt that the first indication of revolt in the capital city of Chihuahua will bring about the fall of the place. Although the Federals believe that they can hold out for several weeks, fuel and fodder are very scarce. The American Smelting and Refining Company's plant in Chihuahua is represented to have only enough fuel to continue its opertions for six days longer, and unless the town is relieved by next Monday the smelter will close and 600 men will be thrown out of employment.

The 800 insurrectos now said to be under arms are moving toward Chihuahua to join the forces there. They are reported to have come from the country lying between Ciudad Porfirio Diaz and Piordas Negras, and to have sprung into being within the last week.

This informant also states that the conditions in Chihuahua, from the capital to Santa Rosalie, 100 miles south, have never been told outside of the territory affected. With four bridges on the Mexican National Railway south of Chihuahua destroyed and the track north of the city blocked also, the Federals have, he says, made no attempt to restore communication.

The American Consulate at Ciudad Porfiro Diaz has been under guard for two days.

Gen. Carter on the Alert.

Gen. Carter and a certain number of his staff officers are thoroughly conversant with the situation, and provision has been made for strengthening the border patrol in case developments should require it.

A telegram has been sent from the divisional headquarters here to the War Department in Washington requesting the immediate forwarding of maps of every State in the northern part of Mexico.

Thirteen carloads of ammunition for infantry and of shells for the three battalions of the divisional army now in camp at Fort Sam Houston, which are on their way from Philadelphia, consigned to the San Antonio Arsenal, will not be unloaded here, but under orders from Gen. Carter this ammunition train will remain intact in the yards of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad.

Of the army mobilized at Fort Sam Houston for manoeuvres every unit is present now except the Ninth Cavalry, from Fort D. A. Russell in Wyoming. This contingent is expected to arrive to-morrow.

Capt. Normayle, Depot Quartermaster here, and the Southern Pacific Railroad are at outs over the handling of army freight. The trouble became acute to-day when the Depot Quartermaster threatened to abandon the army yards on the Southern Pacific tracks.

According to Capt. Normayle, the big Harriman road has declined to switch freight from the International & Great Northern tracks to the army depot near the encampment. This makes it necessary to send the supply wagons four miles for the International and Great Northern freight. There are several cars of clothing and rations stalled on the International tracks to-night because the wagon method is not adequate to the demand.

Southern Pacific officials state that their engines and tracks are being used to their fullest capacity by their own work and that to attempt more would bring about a congestion of the yards.

This view is not shared by the Depot Quartermaster, but the railroad quotes a ruling of the Inter-State Commerce Commission in support of their position.

MORE CAVALRY FOR BORDER.

Six or Seven Troops to be Added to Patrol Along the Rio Grande.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—The present patrol of the Mexican frontier will be increased in a few days by several troops of cavalry from the mounted forces now being assembled in the Southern border States. It is announced at the War Department that the increase will amount to six or seven troops of cavalry, which will be added to the patrol of the Rio Grande in order to prevent the smuggling of the munitions of war to the Mexican revolutionists. In making this announcement, officials of the War Department simply ically declared that none of the infantry regiments now mobilizing at San Antonio, Galveston, and San Diego would be dispatched to the border.

The increase in the patrol of the Mexican border line will be made by the War Department at the request of Brig. Gen. Duncan, Commander of the Department of Texas. Previous to the receipt of this request the department had not intended to augment the Southern patrol. There are already stretched along the frontier three regiments of cavalry, one regiment of infantry, and two companies of the Signal Corps. Because of the great extent of the boundary line, over 1,500 miles in length, the patrol of the frontier is a mammoth task. Constant reports are reaching Washington of the smuggling of arms and ammunition across the river, and it is the intention of the American Government to stop this practice. That part of the boundary in the Southwest which is marked by an arbitrary line is regarded as adequately patroled at the present time.

BATTLE RAGES AT OJINAGA.

Federal Cannon Defending Town from Siege by Rebels.

PRESIDIO, Texas, March 13—(Via Marfa, Texas, March 14.)—The insurgent army under Gen. Sanchez has surrounded Ojinaga and a long-rage battle has been in progress since yesterday noon. Sanchez has demanded the surrender of the town. The insurgent army, numbering about 500 men, arrived yesterday noon from Mulato and took positions on the hill surrounding Ojinaga. The artillery in town opened the action, but there were no casualties. Gen. Sanchez sent a message to Gen. Luque of the Federal forces inviting him to come into the open and fight in order that noncombatants in the town might not be endangered. Luque answered with two shrapnels that burst in the ranks of the rebels, but did no damage.

Sanchez made no attempt to rush the town, but during the afternoon extended his lines just beyond rifle range. During the night a detachment crossed the Concho River and closed the road to the west. The Federals have only one way to escape, across the Rio Grande to the American side. F. S. McCombs, a Scottish soldier of fortune, killed two Federal sentries during the fight and obtained their guns. At daybreak the Federals again opened with cannon. The insurgent line had approached within range and during the day there was a continuous exchange of volleys.

Sanchez announced his intention of starving out the garrison. Ojinaga is naturally a strong position, and to storm the town the insurgents would have to charge up a bare slope in the face of machine guns. The river bank near the guardhouse at the fort has been mined. Small bands of enforcements are seeking the insurrectos hourly. This morning thirty-two recruits arrived from San Carlos. Antonio Carrasco with 100 men joined three days ago.

The rebels are expecting the arrival of a field gun from San Pablo. During the fighting Troop H, Third United States Cavalry, patrolled the American bank of the Rio Grande. A number of Americans watched the battle from the housetops in Presidio. One woman gave a "battle tea" and entertained her guests on the flat housetop.

The insurgents are prepared for a long siege. They have a herd of 160 beeves and four wagon loads of cornmeal, rye, and frijoles. Every man has a bundle of dried meat tied to his saddle.

TO REORGANIZE ARMY.

Washington Plans General System of Brigade Manoeuvres.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—A reorganization of the army along broad lines is under consideration by the War Department. The central idea of the new plan, which yet is in the formative state, contemplates the assembling of a number of brigades of troops in various parts of the country, and giving as many general officers as possible actual field command. It is the desire to decrease the office work of officers of command rank, and to attach them directly to the troops in the field. The scheme has not yet been completely worked out, and before it can be put in operation must receive the approval of the President.

Brig. Gen. Arthur Murray, who was promoted to the rank of Major General to-day, will be attached for the time being to the office of the Chief of Staff of the Army, taking Major Gen. Carter's place as assistant to the Chief of Staff, while Gen. Carter is in the South commanding "the manoeuvre division." Later when Gen. Carter has served his tour of duty at San Antonio, Gen. Murray probaby will be made commander of "the manoeuvre division." As a permanent assignment it is the intention of the War Department to appoint Gen. Murray Commander of the Department of the Lakes with headquarters at Chicago, succeeding Major Gen. Hodges, who retired yesterday. This, however, may be changed under the proposed scheme of reorganization.

ASKS AMERICANS' RELEASE.

Blatt and Converse Arrested on Our Soil, Washin ton Tells Mexico.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—An investigation having convinced the American Government that Edwin Blatt of Pittsburg, Penn., and Lawrence Converse of Los Angeles, Cal., held as prisoners at Juarez, Mexico, had been captured on American soil, the State Department today asked the Mexican Government to release them. The request was delivered to the Mexican Embassy at Washington.

The case has been under investigation for several weeks by both the Departments of State and Justice. The result has developed that the men undoubtedly were apprehended on this side of the boundary, not very far from the line, but nevertheless in the territory of the United States. It remains for the Mexican authorities to prove that the scene of the entire procedure has been within the jurisdiction of Mexico or else set the men at liberty.

Blatt and Converse were arrested on Feb. 22 and confined in the Federal Prison at Juarez on charges in connection with the revolution against President Diaz. The State Department shortly after the arrest was assured that the men would receive fair trials.

Ambassador de la Barra on returning from New York to-night was asked what procedure would be adopted by the Mexican Government in response to the request of the State Department here that the two men be set free. He declared that he would transmit the request to his Government, but beyond the statement that it would be the subject of further negotiations he declined to comment on the future course of Mexico in the case. It is considered very probable, however, that the dispute as to where the men were captured will be referred to the Boundary Commissioners of the United States and Mexico, and that final action will be based on the affirmations of these Commissioners.

SEE DIAZ PEACE HINT IN ENVOY'S ARTICLE

SENT TO THE INDEPENDENT

A Rumor Even Suggests Negotiations Here, In Which Secretary Dickinson Will Act as Umpire.

Certain incidents here within the past twenty-four hours have been taken by some of those watching the Mexican situation to indicate that the way was being paved adroitly for a peaceful settlement of the insurrection.

One report even had it that Secretary of War Dickinson was to be the mediator to bring the representatives of the Mexican Government and of the Madero forces together, and that peace negotiations would be conducted here. The Mexican Vice Consul, Manuel A. Esteva, admitted that he had heard such a report, though not officially. He pointed out, however, that the time was never so ripe since the insurrection began for both sides to come to terms and to receive and accept overtures.

Immediately after a long conference with José Yves Limantour, the Mexican Minister of Finance, Señor de la Barra sent to the Independent an article headed "The Situation in Mexico," urging all his countrymen, regardless of "all divisions of party, all differences between men," to recall the "sacred interests of our country," and "to work together for the progress of true democracy and the best development of the mother-land."

The Ambassador regarded his appeal as so timely and important that he rushed it to the magazine's office by special messenger and arranged for the locked forms of this week's issue to be opened and the article inserted. Then he gave out proofs to the daily press.

Olive Branch, Say Maderists.

Insurrecto leaders here last night, to whom copies of the article were shown, were quick to say that they regarded it as an invitation to Madero and all his forces to come into the Government camp and all would be forgiven, and the issuance of the appeal served only to make plainer an undercurrent looking toward peace, which had already been discoverable even to those not in the immediate counsels of either side.

Mexican revolutionists, according to Ambassador de la Barra's article, can be divided into three groups—those who honestly think themselves the apostles of democracy and progress, men who have failed in life and aspire to figure in a new régime, and the "dross of society who are ready to fight for any cause by which they can profit and make use of their evil intentions."

Of the first group Señor de la Barra says: "These individuals, if they are sincere, will admit that their act instead of being beneficial has been harmful. Their duty should be that of the true apostle, if they thought it so, co-operating by their writings, preachments, and example to accelerate the evolution," (the Government's attempt to better the condition of the people,) "that has been started, thus contributing within the law and under its protection to the great work of national unity."

Señor de la Barra deplores the harm which he says has already been done, defines the insurrection as a guerrilla warfare maintained by malcontents in a portion of the State of Chihuahua, which will be suppressed, and expresses the belief that a united people will work anew in Mexico to solve its national problem. He says in conclusion:

"A last word before closing, a word of concord, hope, and good-will to my countrymen, who know that before all divisions in party, all differences between men who honestly think differently on political questions, there are the most important and sacred interests of our country, of its progress and its future. Might we, united in the same spirit, and forgetting all differences, work together for the progress of true democracy and of the best development of our motherland."

The Mexican Succession.

In connection with the report as to Diaz's health and the succession to the Presidency from Washington yesterday morning, a member of Señor Limantour's staff pointed out yesterday that the Minister of Finance was third in direct official succession to the Mexican Presidency. Those who come before him are Vice President Corral, who has for months been a very ill man, and Enrique Creel, the Minister of Foreign Relations.

Señor Limantour had previously issued a statement warning Americans who took part in the Madero insurrection that they could not expect protection from the United States Government if they were caught, but that they were taking their lives in their own hands in fighting Mexico.

"I am firmly convinced," said Señor Limantour, "that except for the sympathy, financial support and actual participation in conflicts of Americans, the insurrection in Chihuahua and Sonora could not long continue. Almost daily one reads of the part taken by Americans in that insurrection, and they are the only known leaders except Madero.

"I wonder if those individuals and other Americans who have had any sympathy for or taken any part in that insurrection realize the full significance and importance of their attitude and acts? As is pretty generally known, the line of the National Railways between Juarez and Torreon is practically out of service because of the depredations committed by Mexican rebels and American sympathizers. In the territory served by that stretch of railroad some 30,000 people are employed in the mining industry. Practical suspension now prevails in that industry in that section of Mexico. This means that, not only are thousands of honest people thrown out of employment, but also that when idle they are incited by some of the disloyal countrymen and by irresponsible Americans to join the insurrectionary movement under the promise of some marvelous benefits."

Commenting on the dispatch from Washington in THE TIMES yesterday to the effect that President Diaz suffered from arterial sclerosis, Señor Limantour said:

"All that need be said of President Diaz's health is that he is 80 years old and that he carries the burdens of his office without sign of impaired health. He is not in a critical condition and is not giving special attention to his health."

Secretary of War Jacob M. Dickinson is still here in conference on a readjustment of the division of rates on the Panama Railroad, but so far as could be learned did not see Señor Limantour or any one else connected with either the Mexican Government or the insurrection. Both were away from their hotels last night, but whether or not they met at the house of a friend in common it was not possible to learn.

Secretary Dickinson said yesterday that the movement of the troops south had nothing to do with the fortification of the Panama Canal. As to the suggested probability that United States troops would cross the border he said:

"You are asking me something about a remote contingency. I cannot say anything about what may never happen."

"Have any more troops been ordered to the frontier?" he was asked.

"No, but reports that troops had been sent were so definite that I asked the Chief of Staff about them. He said nothing new had been done."

"Will any more troops be sent to Texas?"

"No; there has been no change in the situation."

Dr. Francesco Vasquez Gomez, leader of the Washington Madero junta, as well as Ambassador de la Barra, also returned to Washington yesterday, according to one report, but the Mexican Consulate had information that he was still in the city. He gave out a statement saying that the Madero followers would not lay down their arms until they got from the Mexican Government what they demanded. Gustav Madero, head of the junta here and brother of the insurrectionist leader, declined to make any statement, for the first time denying himself to interviewers.

MADERO MARCHING BACK.

Special to The New York Times.

EL PASO, Texas, March 14.—Juarez is again agitated over the report that Madero and his column of one thousand men are moving on Juarez and will make a second and more effectual attempt to capture the town from the Federals. The report started with the movement of Madero's column back from Casas Grandes more than one week ago. The Mexican revolutionary junta then gave out the statement that there would be operations near El Paso and that this activity would be preceded by the dynamiting of all railroad lines and bridges.

This part of the programme was carried out when Capt. Oscar S. Creighton, the American, appeared south of Juarez with his dynamite brigade, and began blowing up all the railroad property to be found. The report that Madero was actually moving on Juarez originated with the arrival of a messenger from the Federal lines under Col. Cuellar to Col. Tamborel, Commander of the Juarez garrison, supposed to be in the form of a warning to the commander to prepare for an attack. A company of sixty scouts from the Twenty-third Regiment was sent out early this morning with camp equipment and blankets and is to keep a watch to the southwest for the expected arrival of the insurrecto army.

The Juarez garrison now consists of less than 500 regulars, and no machine guns or batteries. The town is now completely cut off from the south, and all railroad and telegraph lines are cut. It is easier, the rebel junta says, to take the town now than it was when Orozco was outside and awaiting reinforcements. Rabago and his Federal command are between Juarez and Chihuahua with the line cut between. Col. Cuellar is near Casas Grandes with his force badly crippled from the recent fight there.

To get to Juarez it would be necessary for him to march his force overland, and Madero and his men would have two days the start of them and would reach Juarez in time to take the town and resist any attempt Cuellar or Rabago might make to retake it. Col. Cuellar himself has been forced to have his right arm amputated because of an ugly wound he received just below the elbow from an insurrecto bullet in the engagement Monday. This has incapacitated the leader of the Federal forces and he will be unable to lead any manoeuvre that may be attempted to checkmate the insurrectos. Col. Cuellar was the pet of the Mexican Army and was considered the personal representative of the President in the north.

Insurrecto activity has spread to the southern part of Coahuila, making three States that are now actually under arms. The insurrectos are confining their operations at present to filibustering expeditions and raids on the ranches near Torreon, where the stock and provisions are taken in the name of the insurrecto cause.

The Mexican junta will make an attempt to lay their cause before Col. Roosevelt upon his arrival here Wednesday morning on his way to Phoenix, Ariz. It is reported that a private audience is to be arranged between so-called Secretary of State Garza of the junta and Mr. Roosevelt, in which the insurrecto Secretary will present the claims of the revolutionists and appeal to Col. Roosevelt to obtain for them belligerent rights.

SAY HE SHIPPED AMMUNITION.

Federal Warrant for ex-Secret Service Man—Talk of Congress Inquiry.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Issuance of a warrant by the Department of Justice to-day for the arrest of Harvey Phillips, formerly a member of the Secret Service of the Treasury and lately a private detective in Washington, has brought out an interesting explanation of the department's interest in his apprehension. The information on which the Department of Justice bases its charge is to the effect that Phillips has been engaged in shipping small-arm ammunition from New York to the insurgents along the Texas frontier, though the technical charge against him is simply that of sending explosives through inter-State commerce without conspicuously marking the parcels as "explosives."

According to the Mexican revolutionary agency here, the real reason for this action against the detective is that Phillips has been for many months in their employ tracking down a charge that officials of the Department of Justice along the Texas frontier have been in the pay of Diaz and at his behests were hunting down political refugees in this country.

Charges of a somewhat similar sort have been made in speeches on the floor of the House, and it was said this afternoon that the information Phillips has received will be put at the disposal of friendly members of both houses for use in an interpellation of the Administration in an extra session of Congress.

The officers of the Department of Justice made a perfunctory search of Phillips's home and office to-day, though at the department it was said later that the department knows where Phillips is and can lay its hands on him whenever it wants him badly. As a matter of fact, Phillips is in New York, and has been in conference several times within the last few days with prominent insurgent leaders in that city. It has been reported from New York that a well-known insurgent Senator has kept in close touch with the revolutionary agencies, and he is expected to make use of the alleged facts supplied him by Phillips in charging collusion between some of the officials of the Department of Justice and the Diaz Government.

they went out because they were forced to do so. These men have no complaint about their treatment and are ready to return at a moment's notice. Their jobs are ready whenever they do return."

Secretary Biggs called a meeting of the strikers yesterday afternoon at Central Hall, 229 East Forty-seventh Street, and a committee from there waited on General Agent MacKay at the company's main office. It returned with the announcement that Mr. MacKay was too busy to see them. The announcement was greeted with hoots and yells. After the meeting Secretary Biggs said that every express driver and teamster in New York would strike.

"It is not our fault if a general strike is called," said Mr. Biggs. "We have tried to meet representatives of the bosses fairly and talk over the situation with them. They refused even to see our committee. The life of our unions is at stake, and the other locals will soon fall in line and follow our action. We know that the Adams Company is not having the easy time they maintain to move their freight and conditions are going to grow worse. Before the end of the week every express driver, helper, and taxicab chauffeur in the city will be with us."

A few hours later Secretary Biggs had modified his opinion. He wasn't sure that the other unions would join the strike. Everything, he said, depended upon the action of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters.

Wagons are Attacked.

When the stables of the Adams Company in East Fifty-sixth Street, near Third Avenue, opened for business yesterday morning fifteen heavily loaded wagons, each with one driver and at least two helpers aboard, started for the depot at Forty-eighth Street and Madison Avenue. They were quickly surrounded by a threatening crowd which followed them for many blocks, many hurling stones and bricks.

At Madison Avenue one of the wagons was attacked just as it turned the corner. Two of the guards jumped from the rear and fled. The one guard remaining climbed up on the driver's seat, and was hit on the head by a brick. He fell across the lap of the driver unconscious. The horses became frightened and ran two blocks, when they were stopped by a mounted policeman. The injured man, Thomas Boyle, was carried into the company's depot and his wounds dressed by an ambulance surgeon. The man who threw the brick escaped.

As other wagons left the stables they passed through showers of bricks and bottles thrown from the roofs of nearby dwellings. Patrolmen and detectives went to the roof and found a crowd of men, women, and children, who ran over the housetops and disappeared through an open scuttle. A police guard was then placed on the roof.

The police arrested two striking drivers, who were arraigned before Magistrate Corrigan in the Jefferson Market Court and fined $10 each.

Within an hour and a half after being arrested by Policeman Bartels for throwing a stone at an Adams Company wagon, Cornelius Savage of 466 West 131st Street was in the workhouse. When arraigned in the West Side Court Magistrate Harris said:

"Any man who wants to work in the district covered by this court will have ample protection, and I will not stand for any outside interference."

Four men attacked Abraham Simon, a helper employed on an Adams Company wagon, as he was leaving an Eighth Avenue store at noon. Jumping into his wagon, he lashed his horse and escaped, but when he reached the stable in West Forty-seventh Street he went home, saying that he didn't think he cared to be a strike breaker any longer.

Express business moved so quietly in Jersey City yesterday that police protection was in a measure withdrawn. Only about half the number of policemen were on duty in comparison to the day before.

SEA ELEPHANTS WON'T EAT.

Captives at the Aquarium Refuse All Offers of Food and Drink.

The attendants at the Aquarium yesterday were in a quandary as to how they should feed the six frisky sea elephants which arrived there by train from San Diego, Cal., on Monday. They are said to be the first of their species ever placed on exhibition in the world, and are fast becoming extinct.

The animals refused to eat eels, seaweed, and several vegetable foods offered to them. One of the officials suggested that a piece of soft cloth should be soaked in milk, so that the elephants could take it in their mouths and squeeze the milk out. So far the elephants have had nothing since they were taken from the water at San Diego.

Men, women, and children thronged the Aquarium yesterday to see these latest additions to the collection of marine curiosities, and expected to see the sea elephants run up the wooden incline at the side of the tank. It was evidently too steep for them, and they remained in a lethargic state.

WITHDRAWN MARCH 20TH
Dividends Payable Semi-annually—July first and January first.
Par Value of Shares, $10 Each

THE securities of companies engaged in the lighting business pay on the average a higher rate of interest than do those of any other industry—are regarded as unusually safe—and ARE RECOMMENDED TO INVESTORS BY THE STRONGEST AND MOST CONSERVATIVE BANKING HOUSES IN THE COUNTRY.

It is easy to understand why these securities have been so immensely profitable. The public gladly welcome anything that will reduce their lighting bills—all the more eagerly if at the same time it gives them better light.

The logic of the situation shows that a light which makes a saving over any other light now in use, giving also a greater efficiency, is sure to be a big commercial success.

THIS THE RECTOR LIGHT DOES.

The superiority of the RECTOR LIGHTS is proved not by any statement or claim of ours, but by their actual use for from six months to a year in scores of well-known establishments, including:

The United Cigar Manufacturers' Company, 68th Street and Avenue A.
Perceval, New York's best-known caterer.
James W. Bell, Son & Co., one of America's leading tailoring houses.
Anthony Barker's world-fa gymnasium.
The Codington Restaurants, and

WE SAVE THE CONSUMER MONEY, GIVE A BETTER LIGHT, AND MAKE A LARGE PROFIT DOING IT.

Everyone knows that the ordinary gas lights in their homes and stores are anything but purifiers. They vitiate the air, and every breath we take of this vitiated air injures our health.

This is impossible with the RECTOR VACUUM SYSTEM OF LIGHTING. It operates on the vacuum or suction principle, and, instead of vitiating the air, each RECTOR VACUUM LIGHT is actually purifying the air in the room, inasmuch as it not only takes safely outside of the room all the products of combustion, but also draws out of the room a certain amount of air necessary for combustion in the light, thus constantly creating a partial vacuum in the room, which must be filled by sufficient air coming in from every available source.

In this manner each RECTOR VACUUM LIGHT draws out of the room from 800 to 1,000 cubic feet of air per hour, which must be replaced by fresh air from outside.

The fact that the RECTOR VACUUM SYSTEM is in itself a perfect ventilating plant, eliminating the unhealthy and disagreeable features of all other gaslights, should be sufficient to insure its universal adoption for store and factory use; but when you add to this the fact that it gives a better light at less cost, how can there possibly be any doubt?

Our business is growing very rapidly, and as it grows these profits increase.

Money which we must have to take care of the business offered us every day and to extend our sales throughout the United States, will come back many times over in increased profits.

This is why you can buy at par, $10 per share, the 7% cumulative preferred stock, dividends payable semi-annually (3½% July first and 3½% January first) on a profit-sharing basis that should return even much larger income, and increase the value of your investment many times.

Careful investors are eagerly securing an interest in this enterprise, on the exceptional profit-sharing basis we offer at present. Whether you have $50, or $5,000, or can save from $10 to $100 a month, it will be to your interest to find out the facts about this proposition.

Don't allow doubt or delay prevent you from learning all about the truly phenomenal RECTOR LIGHT and the wonderful investment opportunity its stock affords.

This opportunity will soon be a thing of the past. Only a limited amount of preferred stock is offered, and after March 20th you cannot secure an equal amount of common stock free. You must act promptly or miss this chance altogether.

Call at our offices, 103 West Forty-second Street, and investigate for yourself. (Open until 9 P. M.). You will see the softest, brightest, whitest light in existence, with 50% to 100% greater efficiency, at a saving of from 25% to 75% over any other gas or electric light in use.

IF YOU CANNOT CALL, CUT OUT AND MAIL THE COUPON. DO IT NOW!

in is ever committed to some institution as the result of his pleading guilty, whether he will be committed to Sing Sing or to Matteawan. There is a strong impression among those who have closely followed the Robin case that he may get off with a comparatively short term owing to the evidence he has enabled the District Attorney to get concerning the Carnegie Trust. Mr. Jerome's reappearance is explained by his anxiety to vindicate his own judgment of Robin's state of mind.

Dr. Louise Robinovitch accompanied her brother's lawyer, Mr. Goldsmith, to the conference, and while it was going on she sat in an ante-room. Robin was in one of the nearby courtrooms of the County Court House, although presumably unaware of what was going on in Justice Seabury's chambers. Robin had a day's respite from the Tombs on a writ of habeas corpus. He sat in Justice Geigerich's courtroom during two sessions of the suit of William Henkel, Jr., Trustee in bankruptcy for Finkling Brothers, to set aside a chattel mortgage of $10,000 given to the Northern Bank of New York, and to compel an accounting of the proceeds of the mortgage sale. This suit will be continued to-day before Justice Geigerich, and Robin will attend until after he has given his testimony. He was not called to the stand yesterday. At recess Robin lunched with two keepers from the Tombs at a restaurant near the court house.

Dyer's Story of the $600,000 Note.

An interesting development in the Carnegie Trust Company investigation, which has not yet reached the Grand Jury, is that although the majority of capital stock in the Platt Iron Works of Dayton, Ohio, is now held by Andrew Carnegie as part of the collateral for his loan of $2,000,000 to the Carnegie Trust, George L. Dyer, an advertising agent of 42 Broadway, feels sure that it belongs to him. Dyer was induced by Cummins and his friends to sign a $600,000 note which, with three other similar notes, enabled the late C. G. Dickinson to buy a large interest in the Van Norden Trust Company and the Twelfth and the Nineteenth Ward Banks.

Mr. Dyer and his friends told yesterday what purported to be the real story of how Mr. Dyer came to allow the use of his name as maker of the $600,000 note. The allegation is made that unknown to Mr. Dyer certain officials of the Carnegie Trust Company "switched" collateral on him and left him as maker of note secured only by stock in a company which existed on paper only.

Mr. Dyer is President of the George L. Dyer Company, advertising agents. His company is in no way concerned in the note transaction. Mr. Dyer's explanation of the note transaction is that Joseph B. Reichmann, President of the Platt Iron Works, and William J. Cummins, then Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Carnegie Trust, came to him and asked him as a personal favor to take over the note for $600,000, explaining that it would be secured by 8,000 shares, almost the entire capital stock of the Platt Iron Works, and that, anyhow, the note would only run ninety days and would then be taken up. Mr. Dyer signed his name, and was assured that the 8,000 shares of Platt Iron Works stock had been transferred to his name on the stock books of that company.

The note ran along for four months. Reichmann and Cummins paid a part of the note, and made out a new one for $396,000, which they induced Dyer to sign, also as a friendly accommodation. Dyer and his friends say that he was assured when this new note was made that the Platt Iron Works stock was to be the collateral for this note also.

When the Carnegie Trust Company went to the wall Mr. Dyer learned that the collateral for his $396,000 note was stock in the Independent Fertilizer Company, and that the Platt Iron Works stock had been turned over to Mr. Carnegie. Efforts are now being made by Dyer and his friends to learn if the stock books of the Platt Iron Works still show him as the owner of the 8,000 shares, and if they do he will take steps at once to recover the stock held by Mr. Carnegie. Dyer's attorneys are Gardner, Van Amringe & Kohler 31 Nassau Street.

When Mr. Dyer was asked yesterday if at the time he allowed his name to be used as maker of the $600,000 note he was actually worth $600,000, he replied that he was not, and he added that the assurances given by Reichmann and Cummins that he would never be called upon to figure in the transaction other than as maker of a short-time note, fully secured by gilt-edge collateral, were so convincing that he thought little about the matter until the failure of the Carnegie Trust Company and his discovery that Independent Fertilizer Company stock was the only collateral the company had for the note.

A $30,000 Multiphone Note.

Another note in the Carnegie Trust Company which is attracting the attention of the official investigators is one for $80,000 made during the régime of Leslie M. Shaw to the Multiphone Operating Company. The Treasurer of this company is said to be William Ferguson, managing clerk for the law firm of Crocker, Lewis & Wickes. It was Ferguson whose name appears as the maker of a note for a dummy loan of $280,000 by the Carnegie Trust Company at the time when the Cummins syndicate were in full control of the institution. A formal demand for the payment of the $80,000 note was made by the Banking Department on the Multiphone Operating Company yesterday, and the assurance was received by the Banking Examiner in charge of the trust company that a payment would be made on the note to-day.

Papers in a suit brought by the Carnegie Trust Company against the State Bank of Commerce of Wallace, Idaho, for $7,008.36 were filed in the County Clerk's office yesterday.

Prior to Jan. 6 of this year the Carnegie Trust Company deposited with the State Bank of Commerce $40,000 which the bank agreed to repay on demand. The Carnegie Trust Company had to the credit of the bank $32,093.64, and this amount was marked off the trust company's book in favor of their claim for $40,000, leaving the balance of $7,000.36, which the bankrupt company now sues for through White & Case, attorneys for the State Superintendent of Banks.

Sheriff Shea has received an attachment for $84,435 against William J. Payne of Richmond, Va., in favor of the Norfolk & Portsmouth Traction Company of Virginia, on three notes of Mr. Payne's, dated Feb. 19, 1909, for $53,698, payable three months after date; June 11, 1909, for $28,000, payable four months after date, and June 11, 1909, for $2,742, payable July 5, 1909. The attachment was granted on the ground of non-residence. Deputy Sheriff Hahn served the attachment on the Carnegie Trust Company, and also on the Windsor Trust Company.

Hamilton Takes Spingarn's Place.

It was announced yesterday that the undergraduate courses in comparative literature, which have been given by Prof. Joel Elias Spingarn, whose recent removal from the Columbia University Faculty created considerable stir, would be continued by Clayton Hamilton, the author and dramatic critic. Mr. Hamilton has been connected with Columbia's teaching staff almost continuously since 1901, when he received his Master's degree. For a time he was a tutor in English, later becoming a lecturer in the University's extension system.

CABINET CHANGES SAID TO BE LIKELY

Ex-Senator Carter for Attorney General and Wickersham May Supplant Knox, the Report.

HITCHCOCK GETTING TIRED

Not Anxious to Manage Another National Campaign—Archbishop Ireland Said to be Carter's Sponsor.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—There is a curious report being whispered around in certain circles in Washington to the effect that several changes are to be made within a short time in the Cabinet.

This time the story starts with the report that ex-Senator Thomas H. Carter of Montana, one of the more prominent lame ducks of the Republican Old Guard, is certain to go into the Cabinet within the next two months. Mr. Carter and former Representative James A. Tawney, another distinguished Republican lame duck, have already been appointed to the International Boundary Commission, which was provided for in one of the last bills put through at the recent session.

The report as it reaches the correspondent of THE TIMES has it that Mr. Carter is to become the head of the Department of Justice; that Secretary Knox is to retire from the Cabinet and that Attorney General Wickersham is to go to the State Department. But Republican Senators and Representatives who are fairly well informed as to the feeling of the President regarding the Cabinet have fairly scoffed at this suggestion when it has been submitted to them in the last day or two.

It is urged by some, however, that the presence near at hand of Mr. Carter is especially desired by President Taft because of the political abilities of the Montana statesman. There is no doubt that "Tom" Carter is a politician of no mean ability of a certain sort. He has handled one National campaign for the Republicans, and although he did not bring his candidate to the White House—it was in 1892—he has borne a reputation for political generalship ever since.

It is telling no tales out of school to say that there is little likelihood that Postmaster General Hitchcock will manage the Presidential campaign for the Republicans next year. There are those of his friends who believe that Mr. Hitchcock has had enough of the wear and tear that result from the kind of experience through which he went in 1908. For some time it has been apparent that he was not taking the same leading part in Administration political affairs that fell to his direction in the early days of the Taft Administration.

Mr. Carter was one of the President's supporters in the Senate on the reciprocity agreement, and he also was prepared to make a fight for the proposed increase in the second-class postage rate. In other ways also the Montana man demonstrated a willingness to "go along" with the President, which gives him one qualification for Cabinet membership.

But the real reason advanced in support of the reported intention on the part of the President to make Mr. Carter one of his official family is that the Montana statesman is a prominent member of the Catholic Church, and that the selection of a Catholic for the Cabinet would be especially pleasing to the Catholics of the country.

The report about the approaching promotion of Commissioner Carter is coupled with a story concerning a recent visit to Washington of Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul, Minn. This story is to the effect that from the time of the last National campaign there has been an unfulfilled promise to the Archbishop that some eminent Catholic should be taken into the Cabinet. It is alleged now that President Taft gave a specific promise to the Archbishop that within a very short time he would make Mr. Carter a member of the Cabinet.

Appeal for a Widow's Family.

The Charity Organization Society appeals for $100 to enable a widow with six children to keep her home together for a year until the family becomes self-supporting. The society has helped her since her husband died four years ago. She is janitress of the house in which she has lived for twelve years and earns part of her rent in this way. The two older children are at work. Contributions will be acknowledged if addressed to the Charity Organization Society, 105 East Twenty-second Street.

MURRAY BOY TELLS OF HIS KIDNAPPING

Was Locked in a Room in a Big House with Three Dogs to Play With, He Says,

AFTER LONG SUBWAY RIDE

Found by His Father in the Brooklyn Bridge Station, Whither He Was Summoned by Telephone.

While Chief of Police James Bell of East Orange, N. J., asserted his belief that little David Murray had never been kidnapped at all, that he was in the Murray house, 93 Warrington Place, all the time that the search was being made for him, the hero of the episode was telling how he was picked up by strangers and taken on a long ride to a house in this city and finally brought to the Subway station, where his father found him on Monday night.

The child said he was taken from his home and locked in a room in a brownstone house. This was his story:

"I went to the Grove Street station for my mother Saturday night to get some time tables, and when I got into the station a man and woman spoke to me. The man asked me what I wanted and I told him. He said he would get time tables for my father. But he wouldn't let me go back to my father, and when I cried the lady that was with him told me not to cry for my father was coming."

The boy said the man wore a black suit and shoes, and a brown hat, while the woman was dressed in blue with white gloves, and a black hat with "big feathers on the top of it." After telling of a ride on a train, the child said:

"After we got off the train we had a ride in a big boat, and after that in another train, where we went down a lot of steps to get into it."

During the journey the boy says he wept, but the man told him he would not take him back to his father unless he remained quiet. Upon leaving the train, the lad continued, were two women and tance before he reached the brownstone house into which he was taken. Here, the boy said, he had to walk a great distance four men and three dogs, with which he was told to play.

Soon after his arrival he had supper, and then was put to bed on a small couch in a room with a woman who he said was called Mrs. Foster by the man who had taken him away.

After supper Monday, he said, the man who had taken him away told him he was going to take him home. He was taken to the train down the steps, and after they left it the man gave him a few cents to told him to buy some chewing gum. He was doing this when his father found him in the Brooklyn Bridge Subway Station.

At 5:30 o'clock Monday afternoon the boy's foster father received a telephone message in his office, in the Metropolitan Building, that if he would remain in his office for a while he would hear news of the boy. At 10:30 o'clock the same person over the telephone told him he would find the boy in the Subway station.

"Remain with him until I arrive, and you will be rewarded," answered Mr. Murray.

"I'll be a good distance from there when you arrive," came the reply.

Five or Six Hundred Thousand people come into our stores now—but there are several hundred thousand OTHERS we WANT to come in, who will be also permanent customers when they try our cigars and compare our values generally.

The Passing of the Wooden Injun—in its place The UNITED CIGAR STORE

YOU remember the old-time cigar store and the Wooden Injun, don't you?

The store, we mean, in which, if you happened to be a chance visitor, you had no idea of what you were getting for your money when you bought a cigar.

In most of these places—not all of course—you could almost hear the man who waited on you say, after you had asked him for his best three-for-a-quarter cigar:

"This guy will never come back, so here's a chance to make a little extra."

When United Cigar Stores were first heard of ten years ago people were naturally a little skeptical of the claim that everybody would be treated alike—the stranger who was going out on the next train, or the old customer who could be called by name.

When the United Shield was set up, the Wooden Injun was banished to the Happy Hunting Grounds. And all the old traditions went to limbo with it.

The Wooden Injun represented the old order of things—the dingy shop, the man in his shirt sleeves to wait on you, the shoddy cigar of his own make, the musty case, the dusty shelf, the long chance.

The Wooden Injun had to go.

It would have been as much out of place in front of a United Cigar Store as a corkscrew in a pulpit.

To establish cigar stores on a new plan looked like a big undertaking, and it was, seeing that it was a battle, not against competition, but against old institutions and older prejudices.

In our success we are credited in some quarters with having worked a wonder.

We don't think so.

In the operation of our hundreds of stores we have simply applied the plain rules that an individual proprietor, who knew his business, would apply in a single store, if he took honest pride in it.

This is the spirit of United Cigar Stores.

Every man who comes in once is expected to be so well pleased that he is sure to come back.

As just one example of what the chain-store idea accomplishes—if you like a very mild cigar we suggest you try the Orlando Bismarck at 10c each, same rate by the box. The Orlando Bismarck is what is known as a High Grade Domestic or "Seed and Havana" cigar. It is very mild—a delightful smoke after breakfast and good as an occasional change from the heavier Clear Havanas.

The Passing of Asphalt

The New York "Times," March 10, says:

"Affidavits attached to photographs set forth that the photographers of the Automobile Club of America found in ten blocks in

Fifth Ave.	(110 to 120th Sts.)	222 holes
Sixth Ave.	(49 to 59th Sts.)	234 holes
Eighth Ave.	(49 to 59th Sts.)	122 holes
Broadway	(109 to 119th Sts.)	168 holes

"I admit the streets have recently been as bad as pictured," said President McAneny, "but it is a condition there has been no human way of remedying. The Winter was the worst in twenty years. The constant warm rains in the daytime, with freezing temperature at night, were ideal destroyers of pavement."

Asphalt is easily damaged by frost, rots if water stands on it, and won't endure the heavy traffic of this metropolis.

On the other hand, there is no complaint about the miles of Wood Block Pavements, despite those freezing rains! There is no argument about repair guarantees.

The pavement is ideally quiet, is no more slippery than asphalt, usually less so, and more durable and satisfactory than any other type of pavement, granite not excepted. It is the only pavement that is both smooth and durable.

RUSSIA DEFERS MOVE AGAINST CHINESE

BORDER TROOPS DISAFFECTED

Outbreak Narrowly Averted—Dissension in Cabinet and Some Doubt Expressed as to Japan's Attitude.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 14.—The Russo-Chinese embroglio has developed three distinct situations, each of considerable concern to this Government.

In the first place Russia has awakened to the fact that China's deep-seated distrust and resentment is more than anything else responsible for the failure of amicable negotiations.

Next the Novoe Vremya makes the unusual intimation that there is discord in the Government over the measures to be undertaken against China, and an evening paper confirms the Novoe Vremya's suggestion that M. Kokovsoff has opposed the recent policy of the Foreign Office toward China, and succeeded in deferring the military demonstration which M. Sazonoff had intended should accompany the first ultimatum. M. Kokovsoff has taken charge of the matter during the illness of M. Sazonoff.

The third situation is revealed to-day in disquieting dispatches from the army of occupation on the Chinese frontier. These advices describe a disturbance among the soldiers over the poor quality of the food provided for them. An outbreak was prevented only by the tact of the commanding General, who urgently ordered the Governor General of Russian Turkestan to take prompt measures to remove the causes of dissatisfaction and to organize supplies for the expedition of an adequate scale. The task of the Commissariat Department has been complicated by the primitive character of the country, the bad roads, muddy at the present season, and a dependence for supplies on a long line of communications.

The news of the movement of the troops is vaguely referred to in the Novoe Vremya as the non-official publication of such news is a criminal offense in Russia. The other papers are silent on the matter.

The ultimatum which M. Korostovetz, the Russian Minister at Peking, was instructed to present to the Chinese Foreign Board, declares that the Russian Government sees in the reply of the Chinese Government concerning the restriction of Russian trade by Chinese monopolies, and the establishment of Russian Consulates in the Kobde districts, proofs of an unfriendly attitude on the part of China, which is endeavoring to distort the strict meaning of the treaty provisions and to deprive the treaty rights accorded Russian subjects in trade, of all meaning.

The Russian Government calls upon the Chinese Government to weigh the consequences of such a course of action, which will lead inevitably to the disturbance of the friendly relations between Russia and China.

It is stated here to-day that the situation created by China's quibbling has caused a realization that the Russo-Chinese relations are less satisfactory than had been thought. China's suspicion of Russia's good faith and the resentment of supposed aggression is blamed. The sole course left open to St. Petersburg, it is declared, was serious military action which will not shrink from permanent measures in Ili Province.

Military circles, whose opinion had great weight with the Czar in reaching a final decision, consider the occupation of Northern Manchuria along a line of demarkation from Kwangchengtze to Kirin a possibility. A correction of the frontier of Tarbagatai in Mongolia, is also held to be a possibility. The military party frankly favors utilizing the crisis to strengthen the Russian garrisons in the Far East and to correct the frontier strategically at China's expease. This party argues that Russo-Chinese relations are so strained that nothing can be secured from China amicably for many years to come.

The Cabinet, however, is firmly decided to restrict the military action to the barest necessity. This attitude was determined upon at a conference between Premier Stolypin and Finance Minister Kokovsoff.

The Novoe Vremya in an editorial calls for the appointment of a responsible Minister to replace Sazanoff, who is incapacitated at a critical period, and reminds the Premier and Kokovsoff that, according to the Constitution, the Cabinet is obliged to execute promptly and fully the Emperor's will in foreign affairs. The Minister of Foreign Affairs is required, the paper says, to report to the Emperor without previous conference with his colleagues, who are obliged to keep their hands off. The Novoe Vremya's unusual expression indicates that the Government is not agreed.

The Novoe Vremya prints a dispatch from Mukden which states that 110 tons of gunpower, 42 boxes of cavalry rifles, and 70 boxes of infantry rifles destined for Chinese garrisons in Northern Manchuria have reached Mukden from Peking. Forty-one vanloads of rifles and ammunition, the dispatch adds, have been sent from Kwangchengtze to Kirin.

Political circles take great interest in Japan's attitude toward the Russo-Chinese crisis. The eventuality of action similar to that now contemplated by Russia was clearly premeditated in the Russo-Japanese compacts of 1907 and 1910. The recent speech at Tokio of H. Ijuin, Japanese Minister to China, in which he declared for the integrity of China, is commented upon in both capitals as a possible warning to Russia that Japan is jealous lest Russia gain too great advantages as an outcome of the clash with China. However, the remarks of Ijuin are somewhat discounted by the knowledge that he is inimical to Russia and was appointed to the Peking Mission to strengthen the Chino-Japanese friendship.

Telegrams from Harbin state that the Russian press in the Far East has for weeks been talking of Japanese preparations for war and declaring that their railways and roads are being adapted to the transportation of troops. The staff of the Chinese railway and the employes, it is said, generally have been replaced by Japanese and armed soldiers. Huge barracks, it is asserted, are under construction at the principal stations, and the Japanese commissariat is gathering reports of the quantity of grain held in private stores in Kwantung Province.

Simultaneously the Chinese Viceroy of Manchuria addressed a secret project to the Throne regarding Manchuria and proposing the gradual limitation of the rights of foreigners, a diminution of garrisons, the exclusion of gunboats from the Sungari and Yalu Rivers, and the increasing of the Chinese garrison to 100,000 men at an estimated annual cost of $10,000,000.

PEKING, March 14.—The Russian Minister, M. Korostovetz, delivered Russia's ultimatum to the Chinese Foreign Board this afternoon. It caused much surprise among the officials, who seemed not to realize the gravity of the crisis.

M. Korostovetz last week for the second time requested permission on behalf of his Government to establish observation stations along the Amur and elsewhere on the frontier. He desired also to place doctors and police in Chinese border towns for the purpose of effectively quarantining the frontier.

China viewed this measure as an infringement on her integrity and the Russian Minister was notified that a reply would be given to-day. In the meantime M. Korostovetz was requested to obtain further explanations from St. Petersburg regarding the nature of the proposals, whereupon the Russian Government evidently decided that there was no further use of parleying.

It is expected here that the Russians will now settle many outstanding matters, including the plague quarantine, the disputed frontier, the protection of the railway from Hungtse-Hu, as well as trade, Consular, and other differences in connection with the treaty of 1881.

It is pointed out that for many weeks the press throughout Asiatic Russia has been supporting the desire of the military for the annexation of Mongolia and Northern Manchuria, but the Chinese Foreign Board does not anticipate a serious invasion. Some of the Chinese express the hope that the United States will interfere and propose arbitration, but foreign residents do not believe that the American Government will take part in any of these controversies except when actual American rights and interests are affected.

Disease Still Ravages China, Especially in Harbin District—Troops Succumb.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—The plague is continuing its ravages in China, as shown by the mail advices reaching the State Department from American Consular officers. It is estimated that 20,000 people have succumbed in the cities and towns north of Changchun, in the Harbin consulate district, since the outbreak of the epidemic. In the city of Harbin and its suburb, Fuchiatien, a total of 6,014, including 50 Europeans, died up to Feb. 11.

The disease is playing havoc with the Chinese troops at Changchun, according to Japanese statistics, 350 deaths among them being reported up to Jan. 26, the daily death rate of the twon being 50.

BRITISH PRESS BACKS GREY.

Indorses Praise of Taft Peace Plan—Talks of Anglo-American Alliance.

LONDON, March 14.—The afternoon papers welcome with enthusiasm the cordial support of President Taft's known wish for a general Anglo-American arbitration treaty, given in the House of Commons last night by Sir Edward Grey. It is assumed that the American Executive cherishes the hope that an amendment to the existing arbitration treaty will remove the present prohibition in Article 1 against the submission to arbitration of questions of vital interest to the two parties or involving their honor.

The Foreign Secretary referred to President Taft's recent arbitration speech as "bold, courageous, and pregnant with consequences," and added that he believed that the British Government and Parliament would place the stamp of their approval upon the sentiments expressed.

The Evening Standard holds that "a real and natural dual alliance would be not that between England and France or England and Japan, but between England and the United States." If, says The Standard, these two Governments could agree that the armaments of one should be available to resist an attack upon the other there could be no more danger from aggression either in the Atlantic or Pacific regions.

The Pall Mall Gazette says that Sir Edward's response to President Taft's suggestion "carries with it the full strength of English feeling and opinion."

The Westminster Gazette expresses the hope that this great movement of English-speaking peoples toward peace will go forward and prosper.

London Call to Chicago Pastor.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, March 14.—The congregation of the Metropolitan Tabernacle to-night enthusiastically voted to call upon Dr. Dixon of Chicago, who has been preaching here for some weeks past, to accept a permanent post in London.

D'Aulby's Associate Held for Trial.

LONDON, March 14.—Alexandre Tschernadieff, who is accused of conspiring with "Count" d'Aulby de Gatigny to blackmail the Duchess de Choiseul-Praslin, formerly Mrs. Charles Hamilton Payne of Boston, was committed for trial in the Old Bailey police court by the examining magistrate to-day.

KAISER MAY HAVE URGED 'TWILIGHT'

But Nevin's One-Act Opera Is Not Likely to be Given at the Metropolitan This Season.

SCORE AND PARTS FAULTY

Emperor Caused Production at Berlin Opera of "Pola," Earlier Work of Composer, a Protege of Humperdinck.

Arthur Nevin's one-act opera "Twilight," which, it was recently announced, would be given at the Metropolitan Opera House before the close of the current season, will not be presented at that theatre before the next season, at least, if present plans are carried out. Mr. Gatti-Casazza said last night that the probabilities pointed this way, but stated that he would make no official announcement for several days.

Just why "Twilight" came near being a feature of this year's répertoire at the Metropolitan is a question which perhaps can never be satisfactorily answered. It is a well-known fact that it is not the usual custom of the house to suddenly announce the production of a new opera near the end of the season. Never in the history of the house, in fact, have all the operas announced at the beginning of the season been produced.

It is also a subject for consideration that this is the second opera by an American composer which the management of the Metropolitan has accepted under any conditions. Under the circumstances, there have been rumors afloat for some time past that some tremendous influence has been brought to bear to get the work a production there this year.

It is known that Mr. Gatti-Casazza is not impulsive. It is not to be supposed that he would suddenly accept an opera still in manuscript for an eleventh-hour production which would endanger the chances of any work, no matter how good it might be.

There was a good deal of this sort of talk in the air immediately after the opera had been accepted for production; but the singers to whom the rôles had been allotted and the conductor who was to direct it did not demur in any way, although all of them believed that any work would have a fairer chance for success if they had time to really study their rôles and the question of staging could be gone into more deeply.

Whatever the mysterious force that placed all these wheels in motion may be, every indication seems to point at no less a person than the Emperor of Germany. Kaiser Wilhelm, as is known, has evinced a liking for Humperdinck and his music which amounts almost to worship, and Humperdinck has interested himself in Arthur Nevin. It was through the Kaiser that Nevin's earlier opera, "Pola," received its performance at the Berlin Opera last Winter. And Humperdinck assisted Nevin at that time in revising the orchestration.

The work was not a success with the public, and the German critics were very harsh with it. However, in spite of these facts, it is said that the Kaiser would have kept it on if it had not been for the fact that whatever losses occur in the Royal Opera must be made up out of the Emperor's private purse.

When Arthur Nevin and Randolph Hartley finished their newest piece of work, rumor says that they again turned to their friend, and he suggested to others who have authority with the Metropolitan officials that an early producitton would delight his heart.

Whether the Kaiser interested himself in the matter or not is immaterial, since it is more or less certain that some intermediate force was employed.

What has made a postponement possible, not to say desirable, is the fact that both the orchestral score and the vocal parts are in such a dreadful shape that rehearsals are impossible. It was pointed out to Mr. Nevin two weeks ago that there were so many errors in some of the parts, while others were so illegible, that it was impossible to proceed unless something was done about.

Mme. Gadski and Mr. Herts went to the composer and advised a postponement, under the circumstances. The work was in such a bad shape that they were sure they could not do it justice. However, Mr. Nevin at this time was firm. He said that he had been promised a production; that he must be here when the work was produced, and that he was going away to spend next Winter in Europe. There was also some question about a performance for the sake of copyright.

However, he agreed to fix up the parts, and, it is said, worked day and night in an effort to do so. In the meantime, Mme. Gadski, Mr. Martin, and Mr. Witherspoon, who were to sing the three parts in the work, could not study their rôles. Finally it was decided, it is said, to postpone the production until another season.

Mr. Gatti-Casazza, when seen last night, said: "It is true that the parts for 'Twilight' are in very bad shape, and, as we are bending all our energies toward the production of 'Ariane et Barbe-Bleue,' the most difficult of the novelties announced for this season, it is very likely that a postponement of the American work will be necessary.

"The matter has as yet not been fully decided upon, and will not be until tomorrow or the next day, but I should say there was little doubt as to what the result will be."

Mr. Hartley, the author of the libretto of "Twilight," could not be seen yesterday, and Mr. Nevin was ill.

DR. JOWETT SAYS FAREWELL.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, March 14.—Dr. Jowett to-day bade farewell to his congregation at Carrs Lane Church and to other friends at a gathering of 2,000 people in Birmingham Town Hall. Among those present were the Lord Mayor of the city and the Lady Mayoress.

Dr. Jowett said he was going to the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York because he felt it was his duty. "I am crossing the denominational barrier, which shows how little denominational barrier counts, and I am not altering a single article in my creed."

Dr. Jowett added that he trusted his going to America might effect what he thought King George hoped for when he saw him the other night. He wished it might be a link between the two peoples and help to bind them more firmly into one.

A number of gifts were presented to Dr. and Mrs. Jowett.

GRACE'S BODY FOUND?

One Much Disfigured, Resembling Lost Aviator, Picked Up at Ostend.

OSTEND, Belgium, March 14.—A body was brought to the surface in this harbor to-day which is thought to be that of Cecil Grace, the aviator, who was lost last December while attempting to return in an aeroplane flight from Calais to Dover. Although greatly disfigured the body is said by those who examined it to have the appearance of that of the luckless English aviator.

Cecil Grace was the son of the late J. A. Grace of New York and a nephew of ex-Mayor William R. Grace. He was a member of the Royal Aero Club, and in an attempt to win the Baron de Forest prize of $20,000 on Dec. 22, flew over the English Channel from Dover, reaching the Belgian frontier. He was turned back by adverse winds, and after landing near Calais started on the return trip across the Channel. He was never heard of again, but his cap and glasses were picked up in the North Sea off Mariakerke, Belgium, on Jan. 6, and later what was supposed to be the wreckage of his aeroplane was found near the same place.

295 MORE DUTCH FARMERS,

All with Large Families, Here on Their Way to Minnesota.

Two hundred and thirty-five Dutch farmers with their families arrived yesterda in the second cabin of the Holland-America liner Ryndam on their way to Minnesota. They are the second contingent of 15,000 farmers from Friesland who were driven out, it is said, by the oppression of the wealthy land owners. They were a fine looking lot of people, all in the best of health and spirits.

Thomas Smit of Haarlem had the largest family, consisting of twelve sons and daughters, and many others had families of eight, nine, and ten children.

In addition to the 235 on the Ryndam sixty Dutch farmers arrived yesterday on the Red Star liner Kroonland, also bound for Minnesota. The Kroonland also brought 150 Belgian farmers. The largest family on the Kroonland was that of Joseph Chavanne, a Belgian, and contained eleven persons. The Chavannes are going to a farm owned by the father near Kansas City.

STILL LACK JURORS TO TRY CAMORRISTS

But Heavy Fines for Delinquents Have Enabled Court to Fill All but Four Places.

EFFORTS TO GO ON TO-DAY

Prisoners in Cages Again Faced Court Under Strong Guard Yesterday—Many Women Among Spectators.

VITERBO, Italy, March 14.—Cavaliere Rianchi, President of the court, to-day set about the task of getting a jury to try the thirty-six members of the Neapolitan Camorra by invoking methods that promised results despite the terror that has filled the hearts of the citizens at the possibility of being obliged to condemn those whose deaths would be pretty sure to be avenged unless the whole dangerous element of the society was wiped out.

When court opened to-day the President at once imposed heavy fines upon those known to have left town to escape jury duty and threatened that he would have others who had made excuses for not appearing when summoned brought to the bar by carabineers.

The whole forenoon was taken up in an attempt to fill the jury benches. It was a nervous day in Viterbo. The residents, who had hailed the approaching trial as a boon because it would bring to town thousands of strangers who must be sheltered and fed, have found themselves confronted with an alarming situation. No one familiar with the workings of the "Beautiful Reformed Society" has anything but sympathy for those who shrink from the civic duty imposed.

Nevertheless, progress was made, and early in the afternoon all but four of the necessary jurors had been secured. At this point the resources of the court failed, and an adjournment until to-morrow was taken.

The scene in the courtroom to-day was much like that when the trial opened on Saturday, though there was a larger proportion among the spectators of women and of men who for one reason or another were not eligible for jury duty. Thirty-four of the alleged instigators of or actual participants in the murder of Gennaro Cioccolo and his wife occupied the great steel cage for prisoners and glared their hatred at the informer, Gennaro Abbatemaggio, who plainly enjoyed the isolation of the smaller cage reserved for his exclusive occupancy.

The priest Ciro Vittozzi, the "Guardian Angel of the Camorra," in his priestly garb, was again permitted to sit outside the cage. The prisoners followed the proceedings with real or well-feigned indifference. Police and carabineers were scattered through the room and surrounded the building. The accused were escorted to court and returned to the prisons under heavy guard.

It is hoped that the jury can be completed and the introduction of evidence begun some time to-morrow. Meantime police officers will be busy trying to locate a long list of talesmen for whom summonses have been issued.

No More Cheap Auto Service in Park.

The Fifth Avenue Coach Company announced yesterday that there will be no sight-seeing auto service in Central Park this season by that company. For many years this company has operated carriages or autos from Fifty-ninth Street and the Fifth and Eighth Avenue entrances, but owing to cut rates among independent operators, it is said, the business has not proved profitable.

AGED WIDOW HANGS HERSELF

Never Ceased to Grieve for Her Husband, Who Died in December.

When Peter Weber was buried last Christmas his widow, who had been his constant companion for more than thirty years of married life, settled into a quietness that seemed to take no account of the daily events of life. She was 75 years old. She never left the house at 65 Diamond Street, Greenpoint, where they lived with their niece and the latter's husband, Frank Watson, after her husband's burial. Most of her life after that was spent in silence by a window, where her armchair was placed.

Yesterday, after seeing that the aged woman was all right, the nephew went to work and his wife went out shopping. At noon Watson returned home. He rang the bell, but no one answered it. Finally he called the janitor, and they forced the door.

Hanging by her twisted apron strings they found the body of the aged woman under the transom between her bedroom and the next room. A portrait of her husband, which had hung in the parlor, was found to have been taken into her room, as if for a last look at it. The nephew said she had never ceased to grieve for her husband.

VERDICT AGAINST POLICEMAN

For Clubbing a Citizen Who Was Trying to Kick in His Own Door.

A verdict of $900 was brought in yesterday by a City Court jury against Sergt. Thomas Connelly of the East Sixty-seventh Street Police Station for falsely arresting and clubbing John O'Connor of 400 East Sixty-fourth Street on Nov. 29, 1909. Connelly broke O'Connor's right shin bone with his club, while O'Connor was resisting arrest. O'Connor was kept several weeks in Bellevue Hospital.

Connelly testified that he had been called by O'Connor's wife, who said that her husband was sitting on the stairs before their apartment and had been trying to kick in the door when she refused to admit him. She told the officer that O'Connor was a wife beater, a drunkard, and had served time on Blackwell's Island, and begged him for assistance. Sergt. Connelly and a policeman named Ryan then went upstairs and dragged O'Connor to the street. In the struggle Connelly swung his club and broke O'Connor's shin.

"This man had a right to kick in his own door when his wife refused to admit him," said Judge Green, who presided. "He had a right to sit on his own doorstep. The policemen had no right to interfere without a warrant, and the arrest was illegal."

DIX HOPEFUL AFTER TALK WITH MURPHY

Progress Made Toward Breaking Senatorial Deadlock, He Says, but Is Silent on Sheehan.

NO IMMEDIATE CHANGE

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 14.—While there has been as yet no outward manifestation of a change as a result of the conference held at the Executive Mansion to-day between Gov. Dix, Mayor Gaynor of New York, and Tammany Leader Charles F. Murphy for the purpose of bringihg about a settlement of the Senatorial contest which has kept the Legislature deadlocked for almost nine weeks, assurances came to-night from a source of unquestionable responsibility to the effect that "a Democratic United States Senator surely would be elected," coupled with an intimation that the hour when this result is to be accomplished might not be far distant.

That this will be achieved by the voluntary withdrawal of William F. Sheehan, the organization candidate for the seat, recently left vacant through the expiration of Chauncey M. Depew's term in the United States Senate, and the calling of a new conference of Democratic legislators for the selection of a compromise candidate, is the general opinion about the Capitol. Up to a late hour to-night no step had been taken to call such a conference, and it is not likely that there will be any change in the situation during the present week.

The conference at the Executive Mansion lasted a little more than two hours. Nobody was present except the Governor, Mayor Gaynor, and the Tammany Chieftain. After the latter had left, Senator Franklin D. Roosevelt, leader of the insurgent Democrats, whose attitude has prevented the election of Mr. Sheehan, was called to the mansion, where he spent some time with the Governor and Mayor Gaynor.

Immediately after the conference the Mayor and Mrs. Gaynor were driven to the railroad station, where they boarded the noon train for New York. Mr. Murphy had left the Executive Mansion an hour earlier and gone to the Hotel Ten Eyck, where he was in conference with a number of the Tammany lawmakers to whom at times he looks for advice. Later in the day the Tammany leader had another talk with the Governor.

When Gov. Dix appeared at the Executive Chamber he told the newspaper correspondents who assembled there that through the conference some progress had been made toward the clearing of the situation.

"The conference," said Gov. Dix, "continued for two hours, and our talk was confined to the Senatorship. Mr. Murphy left the Executive Mansion at 11:30. At that hour the conference had been concluded. I understand Mr. Murphy will return to New York this afternoon or to-night. Mayor Gaynor and Mrs. Gaynor left for New York at noon. I do not care to say anything further at present. Later in the week I may have some more information, and if so I will make it public."

Silent on Sheehan.

"Do you look for any change in the situation this week?" the Governor was asked.

"I don't care to say anything more than that progress is being made and that I am hopeful."

"Is Mr. Sheehan still a candidate?" the Governor was asked.

"Wasn't he voted for to-day?" asked the Governor.

"Is there any inclination to withdraw him?"

"I cannot answer that question," said Gov. Dix.

"What was Mayor Gaynor's attitude at the conference?"

"I must leave it to Mayor Gaynor to give any information that should be given on that subject," the Governor replied.

The conference was held in the library at the Executive Mansion, and followed a breakfast at which both the Mayor and the Tammany leader were the guests of Gov. Dix. The Governor sent his automobile to the Hotel Ten Eyck to bring Mr. Murphy to the Executive Mansion.

Neither the Governor nor Mr. Murphy was willing to discuss the conference in detail. It was learned, however, that before it was concluded some progress had been made on a plan by means of which some other candidate is to be substituted for Mr. Sheehan. Just what this plan is was not divulged.

The conference was amicable in every respect. The Governor and Mayor Gaynor joined in a very strong plea to the Tammany leader to use his influence with Mr. Sheehan with a view of having him withdraw in order to save the party and the administration further embarrassment. Mr. Murphy, it is understood, told both the Governor and the Mayor that he could thoroughly appreciate their anxiety at seeing important legislation affecting the State and the City of New York jeopardized and that he was as anxious as they were to see the first legislative session of the Democrats successful. The Governor listened earnestly to the Tammany leader while he explained the difficulty of the situation from the organization point of view, where the failure to keep Mr. Sheehan in the fight might be regarded as a surrender by the organization to a Senate minority and a violation of important precedents as well as of the caucus principle.

Murphy Non-Committal.

Mr. Murphy made non-committal replies to all questions that were put to him when he left the conference.

"All that I care to say is that we discussed the situation arising out of the Senatorial contest very thoroughly in all its important bearings," said the Tammany chieftain. "Further than that I can say nothing."

"Has the situation been altered by to-day's conference?" Mr. Murphy was asked.

"Mr. Sheehan's vote to-day ought to show," said the Tammany leader.

Mr. Sheehan got seventy-four votes when the joint ballot was taken, thirteen short of the required majority of those present and voting.

"Don't you think the Legislature ought to elect a United States Senator without further delay?" he was asked.

"It would seem so," he replied tersely.

After his talk with the Governor and Mayor Gaynor, Mr. Murphy summoned Senator Robert F. Wagner and Assemblyman A. E. Smith, the majority leaders of the two houses, and had a long talk with them. He also talked behind closed doors with several Tammany members of the Legislature.

Senator Roosevelt, when asked what he thought would be the result of the conference, shook his head and declared that he could not discuss his talk with the Governor and Mayor Gaynor.

Martin W. Littleton	18
Morgan J. O'Brien	4
John D. Kernan	2
William Sulzer	2
John J. Hopper	2
Martin H. Glynn	1
Alton B. Parker	1
Chauncey M. Depew	69
Total vote	173
Necessary to elect	87

It was learned to-day that there had been some informal discussion among the insurgents regarding the advisability of joining hands with the Republicans for the purpose of preventing the joint Assembly from adjourning after the customary one ballot has been taken. By forcing continued balloting the insurgents hope to demonstrate through an endurance test even more emphatically than this has been demonstrated by developments up to date that under no circumstances can they be budged or William F. Sheehan be elected United States Senator.

MURPHY STILL FOR SHEEHAN.

Back from the Conference Smiling—Gaynor Silent on Result.

Both Mayor Gaynor and Charles F. Murphy returned to town from Albany yesterday after the conference called by the Governor to try to settle the Senatorial contest. Mr. Murphy was as smiling and complacent as ever, but the Mayor was almost petulent when questioned about the conference. He refused to answer all questions with reference to it, and when asked if his silence could be taken to mean that the conference had brought about no definite results, replied: "I did not say that, did I?"

The Mayor and Mrs. Gaynor arrived in the middle of the afternoon.

"My tongue's as thick as three tongues ought to be," the Mayor remarked to the first of the greeters, who came forward to welcome him in the Grand Central Station. "I feel all fagged out."

To reporters who inquired about the Senatorial situation he said:

"Not a word, not a word—at least to-day. I was sassy to some people who asked me that up in Albany. But I don't need to be down here."

Upon reaching his office he put in three hours of hard work in spite of his statement that he had been fagged out.

Mr. Murphy did not arrive until 10 o'clock last night.

Senator Roosevelt was on the same car with Mr. Murphy, and said good night to him pleasantly as they left the station. Mr. Roosevelt said that he had come to town on private business and would return to Albany early to-day. He would not discuss the conference.

"Is there any change in the situation?" Mr. Murphy was asked.

"You saw the vote to-day, didn't you? That speaks for itself," he replied.

"Then you are still for majority rule and Sheehan?"

"I am."

"Is there likely to be any change in the near future?"

"That's up to the Legislature."

"Some dispatches from Albany say that you left the conference in a huff."

"Do I look it?" he replied. "I feel pretty glad."

TO INVESTIGATE VIVISECTION.

State Senate Wants to Know if There Is Unjustifiable Cruelty.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 14.—The Senate Judiciary Committee to-night reported favorably Senator Bayne's bill, which establishes a commission to investigate the practice of vivisection in this State, and to report to the Legislature in 1912. The commission is to be appointed by the Governor, and, as provided for in amendments, is to be composed of one member of the Senate, one member of the Assembly, two doctors, two members of humane societies, and one person at large.

"The committee is convinced," said Senator Bayne, "that vivisection has been of value to medical science, but we feel we should know whether or not there is unjustifiable cruelty in connection with the practice."

The commission is to serve without compensation from the State.

Articles of incorporation were filed in the office of the Secretary of State to-day by the Vivisection Investigation League. The objects of the league are stated to be to investigate the practice of vivisection, and to carry on the work for the purpose of arousing public sentiment against the evils of animal experimentation through public meetings, exhibition, and the distribution of literature. The Directors are Ellen Penrose of Montclair, N. J.; Augusta Tilney, Owanda; F. Lauterbock, Sue M. Farrell, Maud P. Ingersoll, Belle B. Bates, and Claire F. McKendrick of New York City.

NEW RULE FOR SARATOGA.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 14.—A bill incorporating the village of Saratoga Springs as a city was introduced to-day by Senator Edgar T. Brackett.

Like the prospective charter for the proposed City of Beacon, in Dutchess County, the new charter for Saratoga Springs provides for a commission form of government, with the initiative and referendum and the recall. The elective officers are to be five Superintendents, to form the Common Council; four Supervisors, to represent the city in the County Government; two City Judges, and nine School Trustees.

One of the Superintendents is to be Mayor and the other Superintendents are to act as heads of the administrative branches of the local Government. Provision is made for the nomination of candidates for elective offices by petition.

Senator Brackett said that he had introduced the measure at the request of taxpayers of the village.

AGAINST SUNDAY BASEBALL.

Bill to Legalize It Defeated in the Assembly by a Vote of 65 to 73.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 14.—By a vote of 65 to 73 the McGrath Sunday baseball bill was killed in the Assembly to-day. A bitter debate preceded the vote, and several members criticized the clergymen, who opposed the measure before the Committee on Codes. The bill was designed to legalize amateur baseball games from 3 to 6 P. M. on Sundays.

Assemblyman Goodwin of Westchester said that while he voted for the bill a year ago he was obliged to vote against it this year, as a majority of his constituents were opposed to it. He declared that the cause of religion was not aided by the clergymen who acted as lobbyists on this and other measures.

The Rev. Julius Lincoln of Jamestown, who represents the First District of Chatauqua County in the Assembly, made a strong speech in opposition to the bill. He did not attack the measure on religious grounds, but declared that with Sunday thrown open to sports and week day amusements, the movement to make the half holiday on Saturday more general, would suffer.

HAIL PAPA BURGER'S MOVABLE BIRTHDAY

Mayor of Avenue C Was Born on Purim, so He Celebrates the Day as His Own.

UNCORKS THE SZAMORODNI

THE TIMES's Second Avenue correspondent, who was "among those present," says that Hungarian Szamorodni flowed like American water last night at Papa Joseph Burger's sixty-second quasi-annual birthday anniversary at Café Burger, 20 Avenue C. Papa Burger's last birthday anniversary was on March 25, 1910, and the one before that on March 12, 1909. The chronologers of Avenue C have not yet reckoned out when the next one will fall due. Pokol, the South American poll-parrot, who first became a permanent fixture in Café Burger when Papa Burger settled there twenty-six years ago, explained the eccentric occurrence of Papa's birthday in shrill, exultant screams from the top of Papa Burger's military picture last night:

"Papa was born on Purim! Ha, ha, ha! Look in the Looch!"

Wherefore, since Papa Burger was at all, he has chosen to celebrate Purim, the Jewish holiday commemorative of the triumph of Queen Esther, as likewise a day commemorative of Papa Burger. His age, accordingly, he measures by the standard of the Hebrew year, as computed in the Looch or Hebrew calendar. But in all other respects he measures his progress by standards thoroughly American. Papa Burger is now the recognized Mayor of Avenue C.

Each year—that is to say, each Purim year—the social and political prominence of the east side gathers around his festive board, within calling distance of the Szamorodni flasks in the cellar, and anew recognizes and toasts his sovereignty. Each year the event is called by Papa Burger the proudest moment of his life.

But the very proudest of all the proud moments in Papa Burger's proud sixty-two Purim years was the time when President Taft, two years ago, dined at Café Burger on his return from Panama. Papa Burger grew positively ten years younger that night—ten real, not ten Purim, years.

"Kishkes did that noble man eat;" still murmurs Papa reminiscently, "and mägelche, and leberchen! I never saw a man enjoy a feast so! And did he remember it? Well, I should say yes! When I went to Washington at his inauguration with the Sixth Assembly District fellows, he reaches me by the hand and calls:

"'Howdee-do, howee-do, Brother Burger! Such a meal as I had by your place! I am coming back and have another one with you some day!'"

Meanwhile, in anticipation of that great event, Papa Burger has taught his parrot Pokol to chortle:

"Sholom aleichum, Mr. President!" (Peace be with you, Mr. President!)

Pokol shouted it last night, when Congressman William Sulzer entered the café. Unfortunately, however, he nipped in the bud the Presidential boom he had started for the Congressman by chortling the precisely same greeting to Justice Giegerich when he entered, and then, by way of showing his impartiality, by screaming it to most of the other guests, including Police Inspector Max F. Schmittberger, Coroner Hellenstein, Justice Leonard Snitkin, Assistant District Attorney Morris Koenig, and Marcus Braun, none of whom wants to be President. If Col. Roosevelt had been there, Pokul would have dubbed him "Mr. President," too. And yet, Pokul alone knew not of Szamorodni.

BIG EAST SIDE WEDDING.

1,500 to Gather for the Marriage of ex-Alderman Moskovitz's Daughter.

The east side is to have its "largest and greatest" wedding again to-night, when Howard Friedman, a druggist of 164th Street and the Boston Road, will marry Miss Esther Ruth Moskovitz, daughter of ex-Alderman Adolf Moskovitz of 13 Avenue B. No less than 1,500 guests will assemble in the hall of the Progress Assembly Rooms at 28 and 30 Avenue A, where the Rev. Philip Klein of Congregation Ohab Zedek, will perform the marriage ceremony under the velvet canopy which east side mothers who have single daughters fondly call the "chuppa" and look upon with yearning eyes.

The east side reckons the grandeur of its weddings by two factors—the number of "those present" and the number of "the presents." A squad of police will be on hand to help the former through the crowd outside to-night; and two special policemen have been employed to guard the latter—silverware and goldware and jewelry running into hundreds of articles—from getting into the crowd outside or anywhere else before their transfer to the young couple's new home. The wedding celebration, as a further innovation in the custom of east side affairs of the sort, is to last two whole days, much to the satisfaction of some score of butchers and caterers and wine merchants, who have obtained contracts to supply an inexhaustible fund of solid and liquid cheer for the wedding guests.

The final touch of grandness is lent to the wedding to-night by the fact, known generally throughout the romance-loving streets and by-ways of the east side, that it is the culmination of a real romance begun four years ago. At that ime, Miss Moskovitz's father was a candidate for Alderman, and she undertook to carry on a campaign for him. In the course of the vote-getting tours of the east side, she met Friedman, who then had a drugstore in East Houston Street. Surely he would vote and work for Moskovitz. In fact, the work of co-operating with the Alderman's daughter in electing the Alderman proved so agreeable that he determined to continue it after the election and cast his vote for the Alderman's daughter.

Among the guests will be Congressman William Sulzer, former Secretary of State Samuel S. Koenig, Justice Giegerich, Judge Hoffman, Judge Snitkin, Judge Sanders, ex-Assemblyman Adolph Stern, Assistant District Attorney Morris Koenig, and ex-Grand Master Max Stern of the Independent Order of B'rith Abraham.

Wild's

Orientals

The Patience of the Persians

Ten years is not an unusual period for a Persian peasant to work upon ONE RUG, to get the result that pleases him.

From one to three years is quite a usual period.

But when he has finished, the rug is worth all the patient effort the Persian has put on it.

Then comes the AMERICAN PATIENCE necessary to get such a rug in your home.

It must be selected, because of its peculiar excellence, from a host of other rugs offered in the Persian markets at the same time.

It must be placed on sale in this country, not in a conglomerate mixture of good and bad Oriental rugs, bought by the bale, but at a place where only rugs of the same high class are offered.

This is the character of WILD'S ORIENTALS.

If you would have confidence in the rug you must have CONFIDENCE IN THE HOUSE THAT SELLS IT TO YOU.

Not only confidence in its INTEGRITY, but confidence in its ABILITY to select.

Fifty-nine years of experience has been none too much to enable JOSEPH WILD & CO. to cultivate this ability—but it has been amply long enough to establish a bulwark of confidence.

To people who know rugs—the most particular buyers in America—a WILD'S ORIENTAL has a special significance.

No premium is placed on our knowledge of rugs. You pay the fair market price—in many instances a LOWER PRICE than you would be asked elsewhere for an unauthenticated rug.

Aside from the customary collection of Wild's Orientals, we have on our floor at the present moment several specially desirable Chinese carpets—one temple carpet in particular, with a marvelous golden yellow ground which truly reflects the glint of the morning sun.

MUNROE'S WITNESS HELPS PROSECUTION

Lecturer in Marconi Wireless Stock Selling Campaign Says Every Statement Was False.

BOOMERANG FOR DEFENSE

The Witness Insists That Munroe's Lawyer Was In Agreement to Share Profits with the Man on Trial.

The first witness called for the defense in the trial of George H. Munroe, who is charged before Judge Hough in the United States Circuit Court with using the mails in a scheme to defraud, was a boomerang both for Munroe and his lawyer, Frank L. Crocker. Concerning Munroe's professed sales of the English Marconi Wireless Company stock, and the campaign of education carried on ostensibly in the interest of this company, this witness, H. G. Robinson, declared that almost all the statements made in the lectures which Munroe's men delivered in different parts of the country were false. For Crocker's benefit Robinson referred to an agreement which Crocker was forced to identify, which provided, according to the witness, that the Munroe attorney should share in the profits of the English Marconi stock-selling campaign.

Crocker was Munroe's attorney away back in the Montreal and Boston copper days, when the curb firm of Munroe & Munroe had a stock washing in the copper securities which forced them up to exaggerated figures from which they collapsed.

After that bubble burst the Munroes disappeared, but came back to this city in 1907 and back to approach the small fry investors who had trustingly bought Marconi Wireless stock at a still earlier stage of the firm's existence. The plan in 1907, according to the story of some of the victims, was to sell securities in the British Marconi Company which the Munroes never delivered and were not in a position to deliver.

Drags Lawyer in With Him.

Robinson was one of the lecturers employed by Munroe to talk big to the country audiences. His direct examination yesterday was brief, but as soon as he got on cross-examination the Assistant United States Attorney asked him if he had entered into an agreement on March 7, 1908, with Dr. John A. Munroe of Saranac Lake, George Munroe's brother, and Frank L. Crocker, Munroe's counsel. Crocker objected, and refused to admit the existence of the agreement, whereupon the Assistant United States Attorney put him on the witness stand under oath and showed him a paper which purported to be the agreement. Crocker refused to identify it, but was forced to answer by the court. Thereupon Crocker said that he had never looked through the paper, but that it had been altered in at least one particular.

The Assistant United States Attorney asked to have the alteration pointed out and Crocker indicated the initials "F. A. O'B," which are the initials of Post Office Inspector Frank A. O'Brien, who worked up the case. After this Robinson was put back on the stand.

"Was it your plan and Mr. Crocker's plan?" the Government's attorney began. Crocker objected to the mention of his name and was sustained. Then Robinson explained that the plan contemplated the sale of English Marconi shares, which had been bought at about $2.50 at prices from $10 to $15 each, and that Crocker was to have a share in the profits. However, instead of profits the scheme resulted in a loss of $11,000. Eventually Robinson said he went to Munroe and told him thath he would not allow people to be robbed any longer, and that he was going to quit.

Worked Under Threats.

"Munroe cried, and said that he had lost money in other investments, and that if I didn't go on the road and sell more shares and turn in my receipts to him I would go to jail with him for not delivering shares already sold," the witness declared, and added that he went back on the road because he didn't want to go to jail."

On redirect examination Crocker asked the witness if he wasn't prejudiced against Munroe.

"Not any more than I would be after being arrested a couple of times. He brought me into this trouble and left me in it," said Robinson.

Crocker was not content with this, but went on to ask the witness if he had told the Post Office inspectors that he had made false statements in selling Marconi stock. Robinson replied that they had finally forced the truth from him.

"Now, about this trip in 1908 when you were to receive a share of the profits?" Crocker began.

"Yes, and you were to get a share of the profits, too," the witness retorted.

"You know that is false," shouted Munroe's lawyer.

"It is true," returned Robinson, "I have it in writing, and I will produce it, if you want it."

Crocker let the matter of the agreement drop there, but he undertook to prod Robinson about his false statements in Munroe lectures. Crocker asked what statements made in the lecture were false.

"I'll give the lecture and you can pick out the false statements," the witness answered, while everybody but Monroe and Crocker smiled. Crocker told Robinson to repeat such statements in his lecture as were false, and Robinson, as a witness for the defense began:

All Statements False, He Says.

"I first said that we came out to educate the people."

"That was false?" queried Crocker.

"Absolutely," said Robinson.

"That we wanted to let the people have shares of the stock in order to prevent the trusts from getting hold of them," Robinson went on.

"That was false?" asked Monroe's counsel.

"Absolutely," the reply came again.

"That was false?" asked Crocker.

"Quite false," said the witness. So it went on until Robinson had declared that every statement in his lecture was either false or misleading, and that George Munroe personally had gone with him from Toronto, through to Winnipeg in Canada, hearing the lecture, night after night.

There were only two or three other witnesses for the defense, but before close of the afternoon session Crocker himself took the stand, saying that in January, 1908, he saw Munroe at his home, and then went to his office and discharged the employes and arranged to sell the furniture. Later on he met Dr. John Munroe at his office and received from him $7,500, to which he added $1,000 of his own, and then gave Robinson $1,000 of the fund. This fund, said Crocker, was to be used in the purchase of stock of the English Marconi Company which was to be delivered to those who had bought from Munroe.

"In this whole transaction I was acting from philanthropic motives," said Crocker. The cross-examination was short, and then the defense closed its case. The Government will put on witnesses in rebuttal to-day.

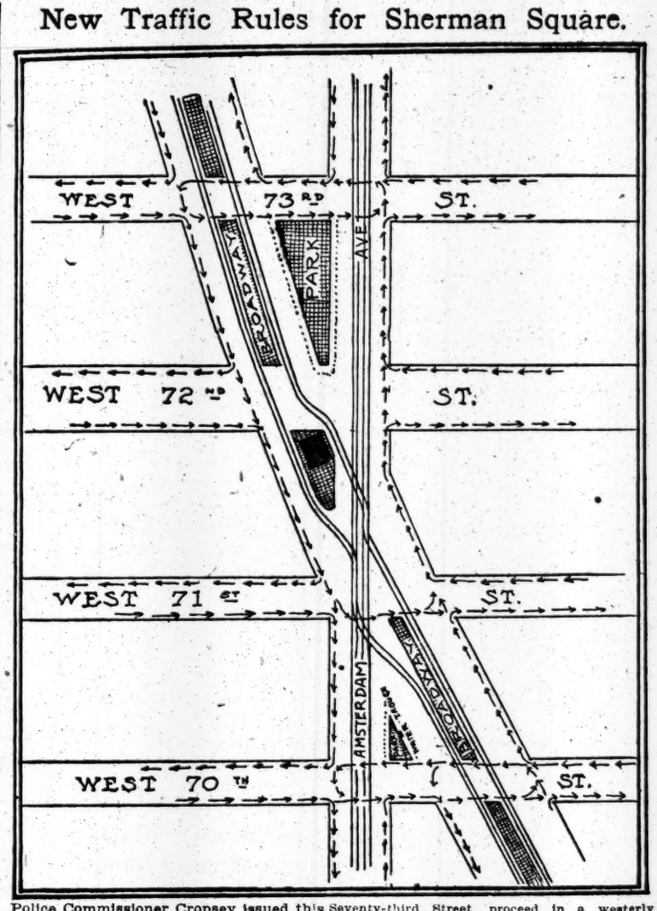
New Traffic Rules for Sherman Square.



Police Commissioner Cropsey issued this new traffic order yesterday to drivers of automobiles and other vehicles, applying to Sherman Square:

I, James Cropsey, Police Commissioner of the City of New York, by virtue of authority vested in me by law, do hereby make and adopt the following rules and regulations for the conduct of vehicular traffic in the use of the public streets, squares, and avenues of the City of New York:

Hereafter, from 8:30 A. M. to 6:30 P. M. on week days, and at whatever hours of the day or night the Police Commissioner may hereafter deem necessary, in order to prevent congestion of vehicular traffic, and to insure the safety of all persons traveling on foot across the territory known at Times Square, including Broadway and Amsterdam Avenue, from West Seventieth to West Seventy-third Streets, the following rules will be enforced by the Police Department in regulating traffic under the rules of the road:

All vehicles going in a northerly direction on Amsterdam Avenue will, upon reaching West Seventieth Street, proceed in an easterly direction on south side of West Seventieth Street to the easterly side of Broadway, and thence northward, between car tracks and curb.

All vehicles going in a northerly direction on Broadway, beyond West Seventy-third Street, will proceed on easterly side of Broadway and Amsterdam Avenue, between easterly car tracks and curb; and if bound north on Broadway, beyond West Seventy-third Street, will not be allowed to proceed in a westerly direction until they reach West Seventy-third Street and Amsterdam Avenue, and thence along northerly side of West Seventy-third Street to the easterly side of Broadway, where they will continue northward to their destination, between the easterly car tracks and curb.

All vehicles going in a southerly direction on Amsterdam Avenue will, upon reaching West Seventy-third Street, proceed in a westerly direction on north side of West Seventy-third Street to the westerly side of Broadway, and thence in a southerly direction, between westerly car tracks and curb; if bound south on Broadway, below West Seventieth Street, they will continue on westerly side of Broadway and Amsterdam Avenue to the south side of West Seventieth Street, and thence along the south side of West Seventieth Street to the westerly side of Broadway, where they will proceed southward to their destination, between westerly car tracks and curb.

All vehicles going in a southerly direction on Broadway, beyond West Seventieth Street, will proceed on the westerly side of Broadway and Amsterdam Avenue, between westerly car track and curbr, to West Seventieth Street, thence along south side of West Seventieth Street to the westerly side of Broadway, and will thereafter proceed southward to their destination, between westerly car tracks and curb.

All vehicles will be allowed to travel across this safety zone in an easterly or westerly direction on West Seventieth Street and West Seventy-third Street, between Broadway and Amsterdam Avenue; and in an easterly direction only on West Seventy-first Street, between Broadway and Amsterdam Avenue.

RESTRICTED TERRITORY.

No vehicles will be allowed to cross Sherman Square in an easterly or westerly direction on West Seventy-second Street, from 8 A. M. to 12 midnight.

Whenever necessary for chauffeurs or drivers of vehicles to load or unload goods or passengers within the restricted territory of this safety zone, or for any other proper purpose, they will be allowed to do so under the direction of the members of the Traffic Squad assigned to duty at such location.

These rules will not apply to United States mail wagons, police and fire apparatus, ambulances, Street Cleaning Department vehicles, and other vehicles authorized by permits issued by the Police Commissioner.

JAMES C. CROPSEY,
Police Commissioner.

COURT FREES GIRL HELD AS MURDERER

Grand Jury Refuses to Indict Madeline Bacigalupo for the Shooting of Dr. Casella.

KEPT SILENT TO THE LAST

Prisoner Resolutely Declined to Say a Word to Relatives or Counsel to Refute the Charge.

The Grand Jury has failed to indict Madeline Bacigalupo, 23 years old, who was arrested on a charge of killing Dr. Daniel Casella, whose body was found lying in the office in the rear of his drug store, at 63 Catharine Street, on Jan. 30. Judge O'Sullivan set the woman free yesterday in General Sessions, after the Grand Jury had reported that the testimony of twelve witnesses was not sufficient to warrant it in handing up an indictment.

The accused girl while in the Tombs has kept absolute silence, refusing to make any statement about the case, either to the authorities or to her lawyer, Michael Delagi. Her own relatives begged her to say something that would clear her name and free her from suspicion, but she resolutely refused to say a word, and even refused to send a message to her invalid mother, at 265 William Street.

The prisoner refused also to take the stand at the inquest before Coroner Holtzhauser three weeks ago. The result of the inquest was a disagreement, the jury standing eight for acquittal and four for holding the girl for the Grand Jury. Coroner Holtzhauser, sitting as a Magistrate, held her for the Grand Jury.

Among the witnesses who appeared before the Grand Jury yesterday were Dr. Michael Csanto, Joseph Selaro, Coroner's Physician Weston, and the two policemen who arrested the woman after the shooting. All these witnesses appeared before the Coroner's jury.

At the inquest Dr. Osanto, who was a friend of Dr. Casella's, said on the day of the shooting he stood in front of the latter's drug store talking with him, when the Bacigalupo girl walked up to them and told the doctor she wished to see him alone. He said that Dr. Casella at once excused himself and entered the store with her.

Joseph Selaro, a clerk in Dr. Casella's store, testified that on the day of the shooting the girl entered the store with his employer and that they went into the rear room. He said that in a few minutes he heard angry voices in the room, followed by two shots. He ran into the office, to find Dr. Casella lying on the floor, a revolver under his right hand, and the woman standing near, her face buried in her hands.

Coroner's Physician Weston testified that it was impossible for the druggist to have committed suicide, as the girl said he had when first arrested. He said that the position of the two bullets in the man's skull was such that either one must have caused instant death. One bullet had entered the skull over the right eye and the other slightly in the rear of the left ear.

The policemen testified that they found a piece of paper in the girl's muff with the name and address of the woman Dr. Casella was to marry the next morning written upon it. Other witnesses were called, who said that Dr. Casella and Miss Bacigalupo were friends, but that he was going to marry a woman named Catharine Hogerstein on Feb. 1, the day after he was shot.

HITCH IN $30,000,000 BAKERY MERGER

Conferrees Meet, but Fail to Agree on the Price to be Paid for Some of the Plants.

WILL CONFER AGAIN TO-DAY

Independent Bakers in the City Not Much Alarmed at the Prospect of Another Big Rival.

The bakers of this city continued to watch with a good deal of interest yesterday the gathering here of leading bakers of the country, who are understood to be negotiating the formation of a large company, which will invade this city among others. They propose, it is understood, to form a combination capitalized at $30,000,000, which will take over the plants of its members, and will start others in the large centres of population. John W. Gates is said to be behind the combine.

A meeting of the bakers now here was held in the afternoon in a lawyer's office in the financial district, but no final agreement, it was learned, was reached. It is believed that the rock on which the conferrees split was the price at which the company should take over the plants of some of its members. Some of them are not considered by the trade to be in the most flourishing condition, and a difference of opinion arose between their owners at the figure at which they will be appraised. None of the bakers would discuss the matter last night, but it was said that they would meet again this morning.

The new corporation will, it is believed, be known as the National Bread Company, and Paul Schultz, of the Schultz Baking Company of Chicago, has been mentioned as its probable President. Among the firms which, according to the information possessed by the New York baking trade, are considering entering the corporation are the Banner Baking Company of Cincinnati, the American Baking Company of St. Louis, the Collins Baking Company of Buffalo, Deininger Brothers of Rochester, George C. Fox of Boston, Reynolds Bread Company of Columbus, Russell Spalding of Binghamton, Star Baking Company of Cleveland, Whiteside Baking Company of Louisville, Lery Baking Company of Washington, Freihofer Baking Company of Philadelphia, Atlas Bread Company of Milwaukee, City Bread Company of Baltimore, McKinney's Bakery of St. Louis, and the Schultz Baking Company of Chicago.

If this combination invades the city it will be the second large concern to do so. The Ward Bread Company is expected to begin operations soon, as it has already nearing completion plants in Brooklyn and the Bronx, and it is likely to establish another in Manhattan. In addition the Shults Bread Company was formed a year ago by the combination of independent baking concerns in the city and has now a capital of $6,000,000.

The prime mover in the new combination, it is understood by the trade here, is Max Oscher, who has long been identified with the bakery business. He has at different times formed mergers in such cities as St. Louis, Baltimore, and Kansas City, and it was he who first proposed that the same process should be undertaken in this city, which led to the local baking firms themselves getting together and forming the Shults Bread Company.

The independent bakers do not look with any great alarm on the prospect of another large competitor entering into the business in this city, although none of them has been invited to come in. The baking trade is a business they hold that is not capable of being monopolized by any one.

"As long as there are so many stoves in the city, no one can control it," said one of the largest of the bakers yesterday. He went on to explain that all over the city there are small bakeries which have a local trade. When times are good they bake and when times are bad they are practically shut down. But they remain a reserve of strength for the supply of bread which has always to be reckoned with by the big dealers, and they are quite strong enough to prevent any firm, however large, forcing the price of loaves up.

Moreover, it was pointed out that as at present organized the supply of bread to households is almost entirely local. The grocers may be supplied to some extent from the large bakeries in Brooklyn and the outlying districts, but the greater number of families get their daily bread from bakers in the vicinity of their homes.

At present, it is admitted, there are not sufficient bakers in the city of the size of the Shults Bread Company, the Fleischmann Vienna Bread Company or the Cushmans to feed the population. It has increased so rapidly that the big concerns have not been able to keep pace with it. The small bakers, therefore, have an important part in supplying bread for the city.

Aldermen Ask Traffic Improvements.

Resolutions were passed by the Aldermen yesterday at the request of Alderman Schloss requesting the Public Service Commission to order transfers between subway and elevated at Sixty-sixth Street and Broadway, new elevated stations at Eighty-seventh and Ninety-ninth Streets, on the Ninth Avenue line, and a new subway station at 104th Street and Central Park West. The last improvement has been before the commission for some time.

OLD CHURCH UNSAFE; SERVICES CONTINUE

St. Peter's in Barclay Street Started Cracking as a Skyscraper Rose Next Door.

JARRED BY ELEVATED, TOO

St. Peter's Roman Catholic Church in Barclay Street, which has stood upon its present site for seventy-three years, without a single crack appearing in its granite walls, began to yield several weeks ago to the changing stresses beneath its foundation caused by a new skyscraper to the south and the vibrations of elevated trains along its westerly side on Church Street. The church was the first Catholic church organized in this city.

The present building, the second to be erected by the congregation, was declared yesterday by the Building Department to be unsafe, after inspections made at intervals since Feb. 18. Its walls, where they are cracked and seamed and bulging near the southwest corner, were plastered over by the departmental inspectors with little paper "bandages." These, described as a sort of "first aid" for injured structures, were really meant to tell how fast the cracks are opening.

Some of the cracks are an inch or more wide. They run at intervals of from six to ten feet across the church's west wall, forcing the most southerly windows out of plumb. One transom is cracked. Window ledges, built of heavier rock than the rest, had sagged more noticeably.

The priests were not alarmed and continued to hold mass in spite of the Building Department's activities. They hung out announcements for the events of the coming week and welcomed worshippers within for "rest hours" in the comparative quiet and seclusion of the venerable edifice.

"We are sorry this matter became public," said the Rev. Father Noonan, in charge in place of the Rev. Father O'Keefe, who is absent on leave in Atlantic City.

"We have not felt at liberty to take the matter up with the Archbishop until Father O'Keefe could return from his visit. We have taken it up with the skyscraper's builders, and believe it is well on its way to adjustment. For that reason we would not like to discuss it in further detail."

The priests in attendance at the church live in a parochial house across Barclay Street. Adjoining the church, on the southerly side of Barclay Street, is a school for girls conducted by the Sisters of Charity.

A group of four of the sisters remained in the church yesterday to reassure young women who came in for private worship that they need not be afraid. The sisters were outspokenly saddened at the crumbling conditions of the church's west and south walls, and expressed the hope that repairs could be made without the necessity of rebuilding.

Building Department Inspectors concluded that the fact that the church's foundations rest upon sand had much to do with the present trouble. No blasting was done in sinking the adjoining skyscraper's foundations, but immense quantities of sand were removed before the construction of the skyscraper was begun.

The first trouble in the church's walls was observed near the foundation in the southwest corner. The corner seemed to have dropped several inches, and gradually cracks ran upward to the roof. The rear of the church was flush against the skyscraper, so most of the bulging appears in the west wall. The largest bulged area, six feet in diameter, with a central point about four inches beyond the building line, is just above the southernmost window. Stickers plastered over it, suggestive of sticking paster strips over a huge boil, will tell the Building Department of any progress the swelling makes.

The priests in charge declare there is practically no danger at present and no need to close the church, although engineers who have made private inspections have urged the immediate necessity to bolster up the foundations to prevent more serious sinkage. A stone lintel over an unused cellar door was found to have been cracked in two, while one end had dipped several inches out of plumb.

The present church building was erected around and above the older St. Peter's Church in 1838. The older building, which had been erected fifty-three years earlier, was utilized for regular services while the new structure was being erected. Then it was torn down and the debris thrown out the new building's windows.

WOULD ENJOIN THE MAYOR.

United Booking Offices Seek to Prevent a Revocation of License.

Two meetings of interest to vaudeville actors and managers were held yesterday afternoon in the United Booking Offices in the Putnam Building, Times Square. At one of them the "black list," that prevented vaudeville people who had played for William Morris from booking time in other vaudeville circuits, was abolished and notice was made of an application for an injunction against Mayor Gaynor and Commissioner of Licenses Herman Robinson. At the other the question of a rumored strike on the part of certain vaudeville actors was discussed.

The first meeting was a conference between the United Booking Offices and representatives of the Orpheum Circuit, a Western organization affiliated with the former. At this it was agreed to book, under certain restrictions, those acts that heretofore played the William Morris time and were restricted from appearing in the theatres represented by the "U. B. O." This action follows the purchase by Marcus Loew of the controlling interests in the William Morris circuit. It will affect about 3,000 performers.

The injunction asked against the Moyar and Commissioner of Licenses concerns the license as an employment agency under which the United Booking Offices acts as an agent for vaudeville performers. The United people have been notified recently that they have not been conducting their business under the requirements of the new employment agency law, which requires that a theatrical agent charge not more than 5 per cent. of the actor's salary for obtaining employment for him, and that the agent furnish a statement of the financial responsibility of the manager desiring to employ the actor. The application was signed yesterday by Judge Ward in the United States Circuit Court. It is returnable Friday.

The United people, through their attorney, Maurice Goodman, assert that they act as an intermediary between the actor and manager, and are not concerned in the payment of the salaries. They say that it is impossible in many cases to supply the information about the managers that the law demands, and that it is necessary that they charge more than 5 per cent. for their services on account of the expensive offices and staff that must be kept up. Exhibits showing the range of salaries paid to acts they book is attached to the application as an exhibit. The injunction seeks to prevent revocation of the license at present held for the agency.

The second of the meetings was of the newly organized Vaudeville Managers' Protective Association. The question of an election of permanent officers was put off to a later meeting. In regard to an alleged threatened strike on the part of the White Rats' Union of vaudeville actors, affiliated with the Federation of Labor, the Protective Association stated that it had completed plans to combat any strike movement that might come up.

PHILIP CABOT GETS A DIVORCE

Wife Said She Had Ceased to Love Him, Boston Man Testifies.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 14.—"My wife said that she had ceased to love me and therefore did not think it right to live with me. She deserted me and our two children on Dec. 13, 1907, and although I have on numerous occasions begged her to return to us, she has refused to do so."

This testimony was given in the Suffolk County divorce court to-day by Philip Cabot, a wealthy young Boston man, in his suit against his wife, Lucy. In spite of a previous decree his wife had obtained in North Dakota, Judge Raymond granted him a decree.

Mr. Cabot, who described himself as a "trustee and manager of property," testified further:

"I begged by wife to remain. I told her that it was her duty both to me and to our two children, Sylvia, 7, and Faith, 6, to remain. I finally suggested that as she had apparently made up her mind to leave me, she should take a trip abroad and perhaps after a few months she would think differently. She went abroad, but she seemed to have made up her mind that she would not live with me again."

AID FOR MILWAUKEE IDLE.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 14.—Members of the Common Council took official steps at a meeting on Monday midnight to aid the unemployed. A resolution was passed proposing a municipal benefit dance and entertainment at the Auditorium, by which, it is thought, $10,000 would be raised for starting public works for the idle men.

Alderman Welch, who proposed the plan, declared that many men who were out of work would starve before they would accept charity.

"We cannot take the proceeds of this entertainment and distribute it among needy workmen, because they will refuse it," he said. "But we can turn it over to the City Treasurer and let him give it to any city department which can open some kind of work at once."

The resolution provides that everything, including refreshments, be donated in order to insure a big profit.

"There's a Reason"

POOR CONGRESSMAN! DON'T CRITICISE HIM

Mr. Young, Recently Retired, Tells Leather Men How It Wounds Tender Feelings.

GLAD HE'S OUT OF TROUBLE

Thinks Newspapers and Magazines Should Handle All Public Officials a Little More Delicately.

Richard Young, lately returned to the bosom of his constituents in Flatbush, after serving them as Republican Representative from the Fifth District in the Sixty-first Congress, unburdened himself of some thoughts on public questions last night at the Hotel Astor, where the Hide and Leather Association of New York City and vicinity held its eighth annual dinner. Among other things, Mr. Young rebuked the critics of men in public office.

"I think our public servants would be much better, certainly much happier, if you should trust, encourage, and compliment them," he said. "Magazines and modern journals have done much more to discourage good men than to inspire nobler political action."

For his own part, Mr. Young has returned from Washington deeply impressed with the high character of the men who serve their constituents there. He had found them, he said, far more devoted to the public interest than his reading of current political comment had led him to expect, and he gave great praise to the accomplishments of the legislative body of which he was a part.

"You have heard it was a billion-dollar Congress," he said, "and so it was, but do you know it has given the best and most liberal government on earth at a cost of $10 per capita, while New York City government costs $35 per capita. Still the cry of extravagance goes on.

"People all over the land have raised the cry of the high cost of living and lay it to governmental action or inaction. Some say excessive prices arise from industrial combinations and demand their dissolution. Others say it is due to excessive prices of farm products, and many attribute it to the tariff, and the people, like Samson of old, in blindness pull down the pillars and overthrow the Government."

Mr. Young gave a list of illustrations of the high prices which the ultimate consumer must pay for the things he must have, but suggested that the tariff had little bearing on those prices.

"I believe," he said, "that we shall find the secret of the high cost of living measurably in cold storage and largely in the cold greed of the transportation companies and the middlemen."

For all the cry and criticism the common folk of the country are pretty comfortably fixed, and remarkably so when compared, he said, with the conditions surrounding them in other lands. Mr. Young expressed himself as pleased that such as the case.

"Our working people think that nothing is too good for them in the way of dress," he said, "and I am glad to see our people well dressed and well fed, but I should like to see more thrift among them."

Mr. Young was also glad, he said, that he was not a candidate for re-election, and so now free to lead his own life, as he put it. He had been set down on the programme of the evening as one who should speak on "The Leather Trade: Past, Present, and Prospective."

Controller Prendergast was also a speaker, and he had the time of his life with the subject "Our City and Its Problems," under which head he talked of dock privileges, water front facilities, freight handling, subways, congestion, and immigration. He said the first subway bricks would be laid if "they ever stopped talking about it."

On the matter of immigration, he poured his scorn on the Bostonian who had favored restriction. Mr. Prendergast implied that the influx of the foreign element would be checked only over his dead body, or words to the effect. He pointed dramatically to the Stars and Stripes draped on the wall above his head.

"As long as that flag waves," he cried, "there is room within our gates for every God-fearing man and woman who wants to come here."

The other speakers of the evening were the Rev. George P. Eckman, D. D., pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church, who talked of the "Merchandise of Happiness," and Frederic B. Pratt, whose father founded Pratt Institute in Brooklyn, who spoke of that institution as "the school for tanning." The association's committee had selected Pratt as the best place where tanning should be taught, and Mr. Pratt told them how and why. It was diffidently and with no little feeling that Mr. Pratt spoke of the hopes and plans which led his father to endow the institute which bears his name.

ARREST YOUTH FOR JOSTLING.

Boy Who Says He's a C. C. N. Y. Student Seized in Subway, but Let Go.

When Joseph Messina of 2,517 Amsterdam Avenue was arraigned in the Men's Night Court before Magistrate O'Connor last night on a charge of disorderly conduct for acting in Subway crowds like a pickpocket, he told the court that he was a student in the fourth year at the College of the City of New York.

Detective Brown of Headquarters first saw him on the Subway station at Fourteenth Street. He told the Magistrate that the lad, who said he was 18 years old, was jostling and acting in so suspicious a manner that he decided to watch him. After a few minutes Messina got on a northbound train, and Brown was at his heels. Messina got off the train at the Grand Central, Seventy-second Street, and Ninety-sixth Street stations, and at each place he went through the same actions, Brown says. At the Cathedral Parkway station Brown arrested Messina. When searched at Headquarters nothing was found on him but 70 cents.

In the Night Court Messina named many professors and classmates to prove his assertion that he was a student. He admitted getting off the trains, but said that he had done it in each case in order to wait for one less crowded.

Magistrate O'Connor said that he thought the detective was justified in arresting Messina, but that he would discharge him on account of lack of decisive evidence.

Four pickpockets were sentenced last night, two to terms of ten days each in the Workhouse, one to thirty days, and another to four months.

New Vocational Schools for Girls.

The Educational Alliance, Jefferson Street and East Broadway, has arranged for two classes of a vocational school for girls of twelve years, with courses of instruction in three English branches, and in hand sewing, dressmaking, designing, and domestic science. These classes will not conflict with the requirements of the compulsory education law.

MYSTERY OF A LOST BABY.

Nursery Matron Brings It to Police, but Whence It Came Is Not Revealed.

Mrs. Lillian M. Fowler, matron of the Halsey Day Nursery, 227 East Fifty-ninth Street, walked into the East Fifty-first Street Station last night with a baby girl about two weeks old in her arms and accompanied by a girl about 17 years old. Mrs. Fowler told Lieut. Frank that she had found the baby in Sixtieth Street. She was told to go to the East Sixty-seventh Street Station.

At the East Sixty-seventh Street Station Mrs. Fowler said she had found the baby at 20 Sixtieth Street. Lieut. O'Connell asked her who lived at that address and she replied:

"I wouldn't want to tell you; neither would you want me to tell."

"I was having supper at the nursery," she explained, "when somebody telephoned to me to go to the house where the baby had been placed in the vestibule. I'm not sure of the number. Somebody took me there."

After vainly searching the telephone book for a name she said she would sign an affidavit that she had found the baby at 11 East Sixtieth Street. The usual affidavit declaring that she knew nothing of the parentage of the child was signed, and Mrs. Fowler left the station.

No. 11 East Sixtieth Street is a private house with a spacious stoop, occupied by John E. McGowan, a lawyer. The caretaker said the family was in Europe and he knew nothing of any baby being found there. No. 20 is occupied by I. C. Alcott. It gave the appearance of being deserted, but in response to vigorous ringing a man poked his head out of the third floor window. He knew nothing about a baby.

At the Halsey Day Nursery a minister, who said his name was Cornall, connected with St. Thomas's Church, at Fifty-third Street and Fifth Avenue, of which the nursery is a branch, declared after a consultation with Mrs. Fowler that a woman member of the nursery, whose name he refused to divulge, had telephoned Mrs. Fowler that she had heard in a roundabout way about the baby abandoned in Sixtieth Street, and Mrs. Fowler went and found it. He said Mrs. Fowler was not sure of the number.

The baby was wrapped in a gray blanket. It wore a white dress and gray cap. Its clothing was of good material. It has blue eyes, dark hair, and complexion. The police sent it to Bellevue.

Court Gives Her a New Name.

Mrs. Aline Tue Nichols of 57 East Sixty-fourth Street obtained permission in court yesterday to change her name to Hostetter. She said she had married Theodore R. Hostetter in 1891, and after his death married Morton C. Nichols, from whom she obtained a Paris divorce in 1909. Nichols has since remarried, she says, and she does not desire to be confused with his present wife.

Gimbel Brothers Announce for Today

The Preliminary Spring Exhibition of Women's and Girls' Apparel

Proclaiming full season's readiness in every fashionable garment that girl or woman wears.

We confess to a little pride in presenting these Spring assemblages of Dresses, Suits, Wraps, Millinery and Blouses, which we believe will add new fame to the "Third floor" at Gimbels.

Our skilled buying and designing organizations have been exceedingly busy, in America and over the seas, during the past few months preparing for this week's presentation and the weeks to follow. We realized that New York city would expect much from us, and we feel that we have much to give.

To merely buy is not the province of our merchandising experts. The Gimbel idea is to create—to originate, or develop to greater beauty, in every phase of style-activity.

This great Third floor is now an exposition of Fashion's most interesting expressions of the modes for Spring.

Nothing bizarre is here—for we are catering to the women who have the best taste in the world. Originality—exclusiveness—but everything refined, dignified, pleasing. Every fashionable motif has been most broadly developed, beautified, idealized. We are told that in comprehensive scope, as well as in artistic treatment, the Gimbel collection of Wearing Apparel for Women and Girls is most exceptional.

We invite the women of New York and their daughters to do us the honor of viewing this Third floor Exhibition today.

Knox made Hats

For more than 70 years Knox made Hats have been the acknowledged world's standard of high grade quality and style. To-day, representing the last word in all that makes for hat desirability, they are to be found in complete assortment in all the Smith Gray & Co. stores.

Knox-Beacon Derbies and Soft Hats, 3.00, occur in derbies in 5 styles and 30 different dimensions, among which are the low crown, wide brim derbies markedly becoming to the average man. Also included are the new flat brims of strong appeal to the younger men—also a special block made for Smith Gray & Co., of medium low crown with brim half way between a flat and roll effect. In the soft hats will be found trooper and telescope styles, in varying heights of crown and widths of brim, in black, brown, Nutria and natural pearl.

Knox-Roxford Derbies, 4.00—the assortment comprises various shapes along the safe and conservative lines of the regular Knox block. Some 4 styles in 20 odd dimensions are included in the showing, among which are various numbers of the new low crowns and flat brims.

Knox-Smith Gray & Co. extra quality special Derbies and Soft Hats, 5.00, combine, to a greater degree than is found in any other hat at 5.00, quality, style and service. A most complete and comprehensive line of the new blocks is shown, every good taste style idea being anticipated and met. In the soft hats are shown various Alpine shapes in all correct dimensions, in black, brown and natural pearl.

Knox made Silk Hats, 7.00, are of exceptionally light weight, firm of body and a fine lasting lustre—they are to had in all the Smith Gray & Co. stores in 3 heights of crown and 3 widths of brim, in all the correct Knox blocks.

Rug Lovers Are Simply Entranced with the Opportunities Presented by These Superb India Rugs

Not since these delicately-toned East Indian Rugs began coming to America from their birthplace, in the village of Amritsar, has a like opportunity been offered to secure them at 40 per cent less, on an average, than their full prices.

It only is possible now, because the famous Rug-importing firm of Lawton & Company, having decided to confine their efforts to exploiting Persian Rugs from a certain district, let us choose $50,000 worth of the very flower of their collection at the very lowest prices possible for cash.

The occasion is stirring the Rug connoisseurs of New York, its vicinity, and even of far distant cities, to the utmost enthusiasm.

The variety and beauty of the Rugs amply justify the interest which has thus far been manifested.

The range of designs is wonderfully wide, running from Egyptian to the most delicate Persian; colorings are soft reds, old roses, pinks, blues, greens and self-tones, such as one remembers in the wonderful Cashmere shawls of a generation ago.

The sizes are extraordinary in their diversity, ranging from the smallest Hearth Rug to great Carpet Rugs at 15 to 18 wide, and proportionately long. There is also an unusual collection of Hall Runners.

While there are scarcely two Rugs alike, some idea of the prices may be obtained from the following list:

16 to 18 ft. wide by 22 to 24 ft. regularly $900 to $1,200, now for $595 to $650.
9 to 11 ft. wide by 13 to 15 ft. long, regularly $200 to $375, now for $115 to $195.
15 to 18 ft. wide by 17 to 22 ft. long regularly $575 to $750, now for $375 to $495.

Hall Runners, 30 in. wide by 9, 12, 15, 18 to 22 ft. long, regularly $75 to $125, for $35 to $75.

Small Rugs, in hearth or bureau sizes, selling regularly for $10 to $15, at $5 each. Sixth Floor

Would You Like to Own a Railroad?

You do when you rent factory space or distributing space or storage space at the Bush Terminal—at least you own as much of a railroad as your business can use. The Bush Terminal has a railroad, a private line, fully equipped, with about 25 miles of trackage. This is in addition to the miles of tracks of other roads which run into the Bush Terminal plant.

Now if you owned a railroad 25 miles long, winding about your factory or stock rooms, you would get a fine young Traffic Manager for about $15,000 yearly (and there are few left) and work with him for five or seven years, making traffic arrangements with all the railroads which enter New York City, wouldn't you?—so that you could ship on all these lines. You would spend a few millions for track connections, rolling stock, car barns, freight yards, loading platforms, etc., wouldn't you? Well, the Bush Terminal makes you a present of all that. Help yourself.

Just think of the wasteful retail way in which you buy power—electric or steam, whether you buy it from others or make it yourself. The Bush Terminal plant uses about 200,000 kilowatt hours of electricity per month. It will sell you one dollar's worth per month, or one thousand dollars' worth per month at the same rate—a flat rate—wholesale. It uses and sells steam the same way. Come to the Bush Terminal, where you belong, and get your power wholesale.

Ask us "HOW?"

CANADIAN CLUB GIVES RECIPROCITY DINNER

All the Speakers Thought the Idea Good for Both Canada and Mother Country.

NEW ENGLAND FOR IT, TOO

No Worry About Annexation—Canadian Objections to Agreement Overruled—The Railroads Concerned.

The Canadian Club of New York, whose orators a year ago inveighed against the bare idea of Canadian annexation, gave a special reciprocity dinner at the Hotel Majestic last night. This time the orators made glowing pictures of a continental dinner table with its fore legs on the arctic circle and its other legs as far south as the United States cared to have them, on which it didn't much matter what particular flag graced any particular section of the table so long as everybody could freely pass the food to everybody else.

Nobody at the dinner decried reciprocity. Canadian speakers demanded it on the grounds that it would help develop Canada so she could perform a daughter's duty to the mother country all the more efficiently. A railroad manager demanded it so that Canadian railroad efficiency would force progress in Washington toward a more sane treatment of the American roads. From Boston the message was that Boston had "lots of things to swap for grub, and Canada had the grub, and the Yanks were all-fired good swappers, and didn't take a shine to anybody that interfered with them."

The only anticipation of trouble on account of reciprocity came from a Boston speaker, who threatened that once it was passed Boston would jump ahead of New York so rapidly that the Montauk Point idea of a great American harbor would be forgotten and New Yorkers would all be sorry they hadn't settled in Mink Street and thereabouts.

About 600 diners turned out to listen to the reciprocity speeches. At the guests' table, besides the speakers, there were present Thomas Lamont of J. P. Morgan & Co., Alexander J. Hemphill, President of the Guaranty Trust Company; Joseph T. Talbert, Vice President of the National City Bank, and Lyman W. Redington.

Those who discussed the idea of taking down the border-line fence were Congressman William Sulzer, who didn't mind if reciprocity took in Mexico and Central America, as well as Canada, and was confident the extra session would almost unanimously pass the bill; Frank Trumbull, Chairman of the Executive Board of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad; ex-Assistant District Attorney George Gordon Battle, Charles F. Moore, President of the Traffic Club; Gen. Hugh Bancroft of Boston, and E. R. L. Gould, President of the Toronto University Club of New York.

Mr. Gould, speaking as a Canadian, cited the objections to reciprocity that had arisen north of the border. "There are three," he said, "one that the idea will weaken the mother country's hold upon her daughter, another that trade channels, now running east and west, will be diverted to a north and south trend, with the effect of decreasing the value of $400,000,000 of Government guaranteed bonds invested in existing railroads, and a third that the colony's duty is to look toward the mother for protection and trade advantage.

"Any true colonial hoping to be strong to help the mothmer country," he said, "can't afford to overlook an opportunity to grow strong in trade. Reciprocity will develop Canada as nothing else can, and a developed Canada is what the mother country needs.

"We need not fear trouble for our railroads. The increase in traffic will vastly more than equal the losses by diversion to the south, and the main channels of trade will run east and west across the border, as they do on this side of the border."

"I want this country to learn how Canada handles its railroads," Mr. Trumbull of the Chesapeake & Ohio said. "When a railroad falls ill over the border only the Dominion doctor interferes. When a railroad falls ill on our side forty-seven doctors rush in—one for every State and one for the Federal power as well. And soon there are to be two more doctors from two more States.

"Come to think of it Brandeis told us the truth. We could save $100,000,000 a year if we reached maximum efficiency. And the first point to apply the scientific treatment would be in securing efficient adjustment between the Anti-Trust act and the Inter-State Commerce laws. Last year 400 bills were introduced in various State Legislatures to control the railroads. In Canada there is no such problem. We of Oregon are not afraid of Minnesota, and we of Dakota are not afraid of Maine. Why then should all of us together be afraid of Canada?

"We have the marvel of 3,000 miles of boundary without a fort or warship to patrol it. Let us create another marvel of producing the same kind of a boundary without any tariff fence along it. The change will do us all good. It will mean less special privilege and more abundance of the things that make for the welfare of a great host of average men and women and children."

Gen. Bancroft of Boston wished New Yorkers especially to remember that "Yankees were natural swappers" and wanted to "swap" over the back fence without interference.

"We're all for the fellow," said he, "that'll give us a chance to go ahead and swap and all against the fellow that tries to stop us."

HAIRE TRIAL INTERRUPTED

By the Arraignment of a Spectator for Spitting.

Dr. Charles E. Bass, a dentist of Wilmington N. C., brother of John Rodgers, the pickpocket, who caused the arrest of Col. Robert J. Haire, the veteran criminal lawyer, for attempted subornation of perjury, was put through a six-hour cross-examination by Col. Haire yesterday before Justice Davis in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court.

Dr. Bass told of seeing Col. Haire and agreeing to give him $200 to get bail for his brother. He also told of speaking to Col. Haire and his partner, Harold M. Trippett, and agreeing to get witnesses to give perjured testimony in his brother's behalf.

Col. Haire asked Dr. Bass if he was married. Bass replied that he was not. Col. Haire asked him if he had not testified to that effect before Magistrate Murphy in the Police court, and Bass denied that he had done so. Col. Haire read a part of Dr. Bass's testimony before the Magistrate, in which he said he had gone to New Jersey to see his mother and wife, who had come up from Wilmington, N. C.

Justice Davis interrupted Col. Haire in one of his questions, and called to two court attendants to arraign a man sitting in the rear of the room. They did so and John Heim of 405 West Forty-first Street was brought up to the bench.

"Twice this morning I have seen you spitting on the floor," said Justice Davis.

"But there was a cuspidor there, your Honor" replied Heim.

"Is that a fact?" asked Justice Davis of one of the court attendants. The attendant said it was, whereupon Justice Davis turned to Heim and said:

"It was my intention to send you to the Tombs, but now I find no necessity to do so."

SHE SAVED THE CHURCH.

Girl Saw the Blaze, Probably Started by a Firebug, and Acted Quickly.

The starting of an investigation yesterday by Fire Marshal Thomas Brophy of Brooklyn into the origin of a suspicious fire that threatened with destruction the Dutch Reformed Church of East Williamsburg, Queens, brought to light that the church was saved, as was the adjoining plant of the Samuel Jacobs & Sons Material Company, through the quick wit and pluck of Miss Grace Todd of 1,289 Metropolitan Avenue.

Early on Sunday morning Miss Todd was awakened by the glare of flames in her bedroom window. She looked out, and directly across the street saw that a pile of straw had been ignited in a narrow alleyway between the church and a storehouse of the material company. It looked, she said, as though an attempt had been made to fire both the church and the company's storehouse.

Hastily dressing, Miss Todd slipped out of her house without awakening any member of her family and ran across the street to the material company's offices. She pounded on the door until she awoke Peter Essex, the bookkeeper, who lives in rooms over the office. He dressed and hurried out. Together he and Miss Todd extinguished the fire with buckets of water drawn in the office of the company.

The police believe a pyromaniac is at work in East Williamsburg, where there have been several suspicious fires within a few weeks.

CAST FOR "NOAH'S FLOOD."

Louis Calvert as Noah and Ferdinand Gottschalk as Mrs. Noah.

The New Theatre has completed its cast for "Noah's Flood," the mystery play that is to be given in conjunction with "The Nice Wanton," at the first of the series of performances illustrating the development of the English drama on Monday, March 27. The rôle of Noah will be played by Louis Calvert, Mrs. Noah by Ferdinand Gottschalk, Shem by Stewart Baird, Ham by Reginald Barlow, Japhet by Pedro de Cordoba, Mrs. Shem by Cecil Yapp, Mrs. Ham by Jacob Wendell, Jr., and Mrs. Japhet by William Raymond. Ben Johnson will be the Dominus, and the Gossips will be played by Edwin Cushman, William Hamilton, and Albert Eusdale.

At the period this play represents all women on the stage were impersonated by men, hence this cast. The chief comedian will be Mr. Gottschalk, who, as Mrs. Noah, protests against what she deems the folly of her husband's belief. The plays will be illustrated with a lecture by Prof. Brander Matthews of Columbia University.

Mrs. Housewife, Don't Miss This

There are 17 ingredients used in it, each the finest of its kind.

The flavor is matchless. You have never tasted a spaghetti dish which begins to compare with this.

The recipe is secret. Our kitchens alone can prepare it.

But we supply it to you ready cooked for less than you would spend to make it if we told you how.

We use to make it:
Herkimer County full cream cheese.
Best creamery butter.
The same superlative tomato sauce we use in Van Camp's Pork and Beans.

Everything in it is the best money can buy. And our famous chefs do the compiling.

You have simply to heat it and it's ready to serve.

This is the most popular dish that we ever created. We had no idea how many people wanted such spaghetti.

When you serve it first everyone at your table will say something nice about it. When you serve it to guests—to women guests—they'll ask for the recipe.

Your grocer has it in stock or can get it. Ask him to send a few cans.

WALKER A GOOD FATHER.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., March 14.—Mrs. John G. Walker, mother of Civil Engineer James W. G. Walker, who is being sued for divorce, was on the stand to-day and was asked to explain a letter she had written to her son in November, 1906, from which the extract was read.

"If you write to your mother so discourteously, what can Nina expect?"

"My son's bearing toward his wife was that of a gentleman," was her reply.

"When my son was appointed to the navy," Mrs. Walker went on, "I promised to give him furniture to start housekeeping in Brookline, Mass. His wife asked me how much I would allow them to spend, and I replied $1,000 and possibly a little more. When the bills came in they totaled $2,200.

"After the birth of their second child Mrs. Walker told me there was trouble in the house. I knew of this only by what I heard."

Paymaster and Mrs. Timothy O'Leary of the training station, where the Walkers lived with their four children; Miss Helen E. Hull of Pittsfield, Mass.; Miss Ida R. Bartlett of Lonsdale, R. I., and others testified that Civil Engineer Walker was kind to his children and they were fond of him.

Miss Sarah C. Walker, sister of the defendant, said she never saw any evidence of trouble between her brother and his wife, and since their separation, as a member of her brother's household, she has always found him devoted to his children.

"Old Ben," the Bronx Zoo Keepers Think, Died of a Broken Heart.

Director Hornaday and the keepers of the Bronx Zoo were genuinely grieved yesterday, when "Old Ben," a big black bear, which has been in the Zoo ever since it was opened, was found dead in his den. "Old Ben" was very old, and his age may have had something to do with his death. His keepers are certain, however, that he would be alive to-day if his heart had not been broken.

It was the loss of his mate, "Clefty," a little brown bear that had shared "Old Ben's" quarters for years, that, his keepers think, caused "Old Ben" to languish. "Clefty" and the old fellow quarreled occasionally, but though "Old Ben" might impose on his smaller mate, the imposition stopped there.

The two bears were separated two weeks ago, when Curator Ditmars gave "Clefty" to a new Abyssinian bear to be his mate. "Old Ben" roared his displeasure, and attacked every keeper who came near him. But when he became convinced finally that fighting did no good he slunk into a corner of his den, and refused to be coaxed out, even by the display of tempting morsels of food.

No one seemed to realize until it was too late what was troubling the old bear, but yesterday when he was found dead in his den one of the keepers suddenly thought that "Old Ben" might have died of a broken heart.

Dr. Satterwhite Gets a $215 Verdict.

Dr. Spencer Satterwhite, who sued James B. Hammond, the typewriter manufacturer, for $715 for medical services, received a verdict of $215 yesterday from a Supreme Court jury reporting to Justice O'Gorman.

MR. MARTIN TELLS IT ALL TO THE BOWERY

THE RICH NOT REALLY HAPPY

Toil's the Only Soul Solace—Some Doubt in the Eyes Turned Upon the Missioner's Evening Attire.

Frederick Townsend Martin, in faultless evening dress, and the Bowery, in equally homogeneous undress and unkemptness, told each other at the Bowery Mission last night how sick and tired each had grown of their previous mode of life. At first flash Mr. Martin didn't look quite so sick and tired as the Bowery derelicts. The Bowery testimonialists, however, for the most part, announced that they had been saved. Mr. Martin, on the other hand, said he wanted to be saved; he wanted to help love and uplift humanity—but he didn't just yet know how.

"Oh, if you could only know what is in my heart—what interest, what sympathy, what love for humanity!" cried Mr. Martin, "and what hours and hours I have thought over the problems of the poor! My highest thoughts in this world have been to relieve the sufferings of the poor."

By way of beginning to solve the said problems Mr. Martin at the end of the meeting shook some two score gnarled and knotty hands of soiled and bumpy, fatigued, and not always liquorless individuals. Thereafter he was whisked in his waiting automobile back to his apartments at the Plaza. His brother, Howard Townsend Martin, also attended the meeting, likewise faultlessly attired, but did not shake hands.

Mr. Martin kept the Bowery waiting almost an hour beyond the time scheduled for his arrival. He was detained at dinner at the home of Mrs. Herman Oelrichs, who, with some of her guests, Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Col. and Mrs. William Jay, Judge Fawcett, and Judge Norman Dike, were likewise to have attended the mission meeting and hear Mr. Martin preach on the text: "Charity is not the solution of the problem of poverty." At the last moment, however, the newspapers had somehow got wind of the social descent. So all except Messrs. Martin and Bertram Cruger, together with a few men and women who weren't at the dinner but were of the elite, stayed away. Of the Bowery missioners, on the other hand, none stayed away, for the meeting had been advertised as "a most unusual gathering," which it was.

At 9:20 o'clock Mr. Martin entered the mission, handed his fur-lined coat to one attendant, his silk hat to another, and, after waiting until the solo started by Francis Rogers and entitled "Songs of Araby" was ended, walked up the aisle toward the altar. Before him whisked one of the mission ushers, whispering hurriedly to the end-seat missioners:

"Keep your feet in!"

Mr. Martin wore a white silk waisteral, and his brother one of black silk, but the Bowery critics of fashion did not haggle long as to which form was in better style. They sat hushed and awed.

"Has he came?" inquired one knobby person called "Butts," the donor of many a black eye, who had hitherto been sonorously snoring, except when the time came to raise hands in testimony to "being saved." Mr. Rogers, the soloist, finished one more solo, ending with the words, "Sing when your trials are greatest."

Then Mr. Martin was introduced by Supt. Hallimond.

Mr. Martin spoke with much feeling throughout, and his voice broke ever and anon with the intensity of his emotion. He was hoarse and perspiring when he finished.

"I can't tell you the pleasure it gives me to be with you to-night," he said. "If I only had words to tell you what is in my heart, what sympathy, what interest, what love for humanity and the men that do not belong to what you may call my fortunate sphere! If I could only tell you the hours and hours I have thought over the problems of the poor! You have no idea how it has absorbed me. My highest thoughts in this world have been how to relieve the sufferings of the poor. It seems impossible for me to say that, and no doubt the world will say it is impossible. But I stand here to-night and say it is possible.

"Man is the greatest inhabitant on the face of the earth—the thinker, the dreamer, the builder. From clay he constructs the most mighty edifices. He catches the light and heat from the thunderbolt and from the sun. His work staggers the imagination!

"Now, if only all of us would serve each, and if each would serve all, nobody would be poor and poverty would disappear. Charity alone will never solve the problem of poverty. No one wants to live upon charity. What the laboring classes in this country want is not charity, but justice!"

This evoked tremendous applause, which awoke the aforementioned somniferous Butts, who then joined them.

"Talking from my own experience," continued Mr. Martin in a tone that carried conviction to all, "I may say that we don't really know how to live and do something for others until it is nearly time to leave the world. I shall preach and write as long as I have power to get the rich of the world to give interest and sympathy and brotherly affection to the poor. There has never been that brotherly love to make capital and labor grasp hands and do away with discord and strikes.

"And don't get discouraged, my dear friends, and think the other class to which I belong is happy. I can tell you to-night that the happiest people on the face of the earth are those who gain their bread in the sweat of their brow."

There were some in the audience who regarded Mr. Martin attentively and seemed doubtful of this

"The curse that comes with riches," continued the speaker, wiping away the perspiration and adjusting a collapsing collar, "is suspicion. The suspicion of one's own friends. Only recently I tried to introduce one of my friends to a man, and he asked me sharply: 'What the deuce does he want to get out of me?' The only people in the world who are happy are those who forget themselves and work for their families. The greatest power in the world is not the power of gold, but the power of love. Gold takes away your happiness if you love it. If there is any good in me, it is because of my disappointments and sorrows. Each time I pull myself up after misfortune, it is because I love humanity and man. I want to do something for you all. There are thousands in the social world who want to help the poor, but who don't know how. Even so, however, they are already doing great work.

"Boom!" There was a blinding flash, and a dense upcircling of smoke. Mr. Martin paled visibly, but it was only the flashlight photographer of one of the newspapers getting Mr. Martin's peroration, and when this was discovered loud cries and laughter resounded throughout the mission.

"That requires courage," resumed Mr. Martin after some hesitation, with a gradually successful smile. "You see, we require courage sometimes. No matter how low down you get, my friends, hold on to your courage and your self respect. Stick to your oars and don't desert your ship. Face it boldly and with courage and manhood. Fan up your manhood and character, and it will make you noble and splendid men, and give you the greatest victory in life.

"My religion is the religion of keeping your heart pure and good and full of sympathy for all humanity. Oh, I could go on, my friends, and talk forever on this subject so dear to me. [No applause.] But before I say good-bye, I will add that I would like to say it to each one of you and shake your rough hands as brothers. From my heart I say it."

Mr. Martin ended, and again there was a storm of applause that swept the eye-blacking Butts back into the snoreless present. It was nearly a minute before the enthusiastic benchers stopped slapping their huge hands upon their threadbare knees to prove how they appreciated Mr. Martin.

With similar tokens of appreciation they met the salilies of James Brown, a single-taxer, who next addressed them on the topic, "The Idle Rich and the Idle Poor," and entreated them not to hold the riches of "of the other half" against them.

"Those fellows can't help it any more than you can," said Mr. Brown. "They simply got the other end of the stick. Of course, if they'd really like to know what to do to help humanity, I could tell them if they came to me."

Then he talked single tax. Others present besides the regular Bowery voters were the Rev. Dr. A. H. Evans of the West Presbyterian Church, Mrs. M. Minot Plimpton, Bertram Cruger, and Miss Anna Taylor Jones.

CALL MRS. MELBER INSANE.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 14.—Interest in the trial of Mrs. Edith Melber for the murder of her young son has waned considerably since the defense was stated to be insanity. The crowd about the Court House to-day was not large and was composed largely of women.

Alienists testified for the defense that Mrs. Melber became insane just before the birth of the boy whose life she took. This was due indirectly, said Dr. Jesse M. W. Scott, former assistant at Matteawan Hospital for the Criminal Insane, to Mrs. Melber's father dying of delirium tremens and her mother of consumption.

Dr. Scott was corroborated by Dr. Herbert E. Defreest of Troy.

Interest was intense when Mrs. Mary Gibeau of Syracuse, sister of Mrs. Melber's father, told falteringly the sordid story of the home life during her childhood of the woman on trial. Mrs. Gibeau said that her father was a barroom loafer. He died in St. Joseph's Hospital from delirium tremens, strapped to a hospital bed.

"At the time of his death," she said, "Edith was then only a child between 9 and 10 years of age. Edith was always an erratic child, and the day her mother was buried she danced around her grave."

"Did she ever show any other symptoms?"

"Not that I noticed, except that her father used to call her 'crazy babe,' and when he came home drunk she made faces at him."

Mrs. Gibeau became so agitated under cross-examination that she swayed in her seat and was excused. Mrs. Linda Simmons and Mrs. Welton Stanford rushed to her side, but as soon as she reached the corridor in the rear of the courtroom she fainted.

Just before adjournment Dr. James T. McKenna of Troy was called by the defense and stated that he had made a thorough physical and mental examination of the prisoner and found her to be irrational.

MORE COCO INDICTMENTS.

Four Additional Ones Found Against the Architect Accused of Extortion.

Four additional indictments were filed yesterday against Peter M. Coco, an architect at Winfield, L. I., who is charged with extortion in connection with the remodeling of the Queens County Court House. All the indictments were handed up to Judge O'Sullivan in General Sessions, and Coco was held in $10,000 bail for trial.

Coco was arrested on complaint of George H. Hilderbrand, a contractor at 38 Park Row, who alleges that he attempted to extort $1,000 from him by threatening to expose him for something he did not do. Coco was first indicted in Long Island City, but it was found just before the case went to trial that the alleged payments had been made in this city and the matter was presented to District Attorney Whitman.

Two indictments were found against Coco on Monday and he was held in $5,000 bail after pleading not guilty. The transactions are alleged to have taken place in 1905.

FIREMEN'S STRIKE DEADLOCKS RAILWAY

ROAD WON'T BAR NEGROES

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, March 14.—After a conference lasting three hours this afternoon, Vice President T. C. Powell of the Queen & Crescent Railroad stated that the freight embargo on that line will be drawn tighter, and that no bills of lading will be issued at present. During this conference, the long-distance telephone was used frequently to several cities in Kentucky and Tennessee, with orders to issue no more of these bills. Vice President Powell said that his road will refuse to accept any more freight until the situation arising from the strike of the firemen has cleared up considerably. The strike shows no signs of ending.

The road, so far as its freight shipments are concerned, is practically deadlocked between Cincinnati and Chattanooga. Although the officials state that they have received over 1,000 applications for work as firemen, the road has failed to keep in continuous operation, and they are now preparing to discontinue all their freight trains, with the possible exception of those which have been already started.

The striking firemen are augmenting their numbers in various parts of the two States. At King's Mountain, Ky., to-day an engineer, fireman, and three special guards on the road deserted their train after they had been informed that the King's Mountain Vigilance Society would not tolerate their working on trains with negro firemen. This train has been stalled on a siding near King's Mountain, where it will probably remain until to-morrow.

From reports received from many sections of the road, including Somerset, Ky., twelve men were badly injured to-day. One of those hurt is Charles Swartz, a detective from St. Louis, who was guarding the colored firemen on a passenger train, between Cincinnati and Chattanooga. He was brought here to-day suffering from a bad gunshot wound. Swartz attempted to hold back a crowd which attacked the locomotive and tried to reach a negro fireman. An exchange of shots followed and the detective was shot in the mouth. Swartz said that when the train stopped at Glenmary, Tenn., to take water and coal, a crowd pulled him and the fireman from the cab. He was remonstrating and some one fired at him. The fireman managed to escape.

The reports of rioting at Glenmary and south of there were partially confirmed at Lexington to-day, when the engineer of a passenger train declared that three men were killed last night between King's Mountain, Ky., and Glengary. One of the belated passenger trains arriving from the South to-day came in with broken windows as the result of an attack by strike sympathizers.

Reports from Danville stated that 100 St. Louis men, armed as guards for trains, arrived there and will be sent South for duty. One of the special officers of the railroad who came up from the mountain district to-day, said that the Sheriff of Lincoln County, with a posse of fifty men, was unable to handle the situation at King's Mountain, and had so notified Gov. Willson. The impression is growing that troops will be sent to King's Mountain to guard trains approaching the big tunnel there.

It is stated from Washington that W. S. Carter, Grand Chief of the Firemen's Brotherhood, held a long conference with Judge Martin A. Knapp of the Commerce Court relative to the claims of the strikers. Carter than left for Cincinnati to confer with the union officials. Vice President Powell, however, says his company will never accede to the demands of the strikers to keep negroes out of the engine cabs.

INTERCITY RELAY WON BY NEW YORK

With the one-mile intercity relay race, in which Philadelphia, Boston, and New York furnished the teams as the principal attraction, the Pastime A. C. games in Madison Square Garden last night furnished excitement enough to satisfy the most exacting.

The result showed the metropolitan team the winners in world's record indoor time—3:25 1-5—with the Quaker City four second, twenty yards back, and the Hub quartet a like distance still further to the rear.

This displaces the former best mark of 3:25 4-5, made by a New York team last year.

Although a raft of good competition led up to the relay, every one was on tiptoe when it was called. The makeup of the fours was: Philadelphia—Hough, Ramsdell, Haydock, and Mercer; Boston—Lester, Young, O'Brien, and Holden; New York—Dorland, Rosenberger, Sheppard, and Gissing. On paper and from any standpoint the last-named four looked by far the classiest of the bunch, but, as was argued, relay racing is peculiar, and many looked for a turn-up.

Hough went away in the van for the Philadelphia outfit, but his stay as pacemaker was short-lived, Dorland immediately outrunning him up the back stretch, with Lester for Boston several yards off. They maintained this order until the last turn, where Hough came through strongly, sprinting to Ramsdell, to whom he handed a two-yard lead.

The intercollegiate champion maintained his advantage for 300 yards, at which point "Jim" Rosenberger, the lanky 100-yard champion, swung into the lead, and eventually turned over to "Mel" Sheppard a three-yard lead on Haydock for Philadelphia, with O'Brien for Boston twenty yards away.

Haydock ran a stride back of Sheppard for about "250," when the Olympic hero cut loose in such fashion that he literally ran away from the Pennsy hurdler, finishing ten yards to the good, with which handicap Gissing, the anchor man, was for the nome team never relinquished a yard of.

Gissing sailed around the turns in his inimitable space-devouring way, and, despite the best efforts of Roy Mercer, the red and blue football Captain, lengthened his lead at the end to twenty yards, Holden of Bates College, for Boston, being that much further out of it. Philadelphia's time was 3:28 1-5 and Boston's 3:31.

Dan Healy of the Pastime Athletic Club, three standing jumps champion, added to his best mark by leaping 34 feet 8¾ inches, just beating Platt Adams, New York Athletic Club, who did 34 feet 7⅞ inches.

The previous indoor record was 34 feet 6 inches, made by Platt Adams in Boston about a month ago.

Probably 4,000 persons witnessed the sport, which bristled from end to end with keen competition, everything going along in ship-shape order with no delays.

Two scratch men showed for competition in the sixty-yard sprint, Jack Eller, Irish-American Athletic Club, and R. Cook, Princeton. Eller was shut out in his preliminary, and Cooke failed to survive the semi-finals, having run second in his trial heat.

In the final Frank Stephenson of the Trinitys was the virtual scratch man, with two feet, the rest of the finalists being up on the seven and eight feet. All got away in good shape, the result at the tape showing Dan Ferris of Loughlin Lyceum, off seven feet, the winner by a narrow margin from Stephenson in 0:06 2-5.

Four teams lined up for the Young Men's Christian Association championships at one mile, the quartets being from the West Side, Brooklyn, two teams, and Harlem branches. C. Borgman led off for West Side, and, running in slashing form, handed H. Hocking an advantage of ten yards over C. E. Gorham for Brooklyn. The latter almost closed up the gap in the first 350 yards, but fell away again at the finish, leaving Hocking to turn over seven yards to Jim McEntee.

The latter went away flying, but at "220" had the misfortune to all but lose his left shoe, which, in combination with Valentine's fine running, enabled the latter to pass in the final twenty-five yards, and hand over a lead of three yards to Terwilliger. Gus Schnable, West Side's last man, trailed up to the last turn and just managed to get up to the tape, winning by the narrowest of margins in 3:30, a new Y. M. C. A. record, displacing the former best mark of 3:36 1-5.

The two-mile team walk called out the same old aggregation of go-as-you-please "merchants," all of whom seem to have the judges "buffaloed," as despite a seeming never ending string of cautions, the field was intact at the finish, with the exception of Weinberg, Mott Haven, and Smith, Morris A. A., who finished second, but were disqualified. A Mercury foot team composed of Nuendorfer and Kelly was awarded first prize, the time being 12:39 2-5.

D. J. Donovan of the Pastimes led up to the final stride in the final of the 500-yard run for previous non-winners, but was just nosed out at the tape by J. D. Smith of Columbia University, who ran a well-judged race, winning by inches in 1:06 3-5.

Summary of the events:

880-Yard Run; Handicap.—Final Heat—Won by R. M. Bonsib, N. Y. A. C., (20 yards;) E. M. Gillmore, Dominican Lyceum, (scratch,) second; T. Dolan, Pastime A. C., (22 yards,) third. Time—1:59.

Putting 12-Pound Shot, Handicap—Won by C. Vitacek, Mohawk A. C., (5½ feet,) with 51 feet 6½ inches; J. H. Duncan, Mohawk A. C., (1 foot,) second, with 49 feet 10 inches; H. C. Klages, New York A. C., (scratch,) third, with 46 feet 8 inches.

One-Mile Relay Race, Y. M. C. A. Championship—Won by West Side Y. M. C. A. team, made up of C. Borgman, H. Hocking, J. McEntee, and G. J. Schnable; Brooklyn Central Y. M. C. A. team, made up of W. J. Murphy, C. E. Gorham, J. M. Valentine, and R. E. Terwilliger, second; Brooklyn Central Y. M. C. A. second team, made up of A. Wynne, R. J. Solari, C. W. Hibbard, and W. J. Coate, third. Time—3:30.

500-Yard Run, Novice—Final heat won by I. D. Smith, Columbia University; D. J. Donovan, Pastime A. C., second; A. H. Coleman, Stevens Institute, third. Time—1:06 3-5.

Five-Mile Run, Scratch.—Won by W. J. Kramer, Long Island A. C.; George Obermeyer, National A. C., second; Harry McGinn, New York A. C., third. Time—25:11.

Three Standing Jumps, Scratch.—Won by D. Healy, Pastime A. C., with 34 feet 8¾ inches; Platt Adams, New York A. C., second, with 34 feet 7⅞ inches; R. H. Bachman, Sheridan A. C., third, with 31 feet 10¾ inches.

TIGERS LOSE PENDLETON.

Princeton's Short Stop's Broken Ankle Will Keep Him Off the Nine.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 14.—According to Dr. W. S. MacLaren, physician for the Princeton Athletic Association, T. T. Pendleton, '13, Walter Camp's choice for All-American half back during the past season, will be unable to participate in baseball again this season. Pendleton got a Potts fracture of the ankle in executing the "fade-away" slide to a base Saturday, March 4. The Potts fracture consists of one broken and one dislocated bone in the ankle. This was the injury that kept Johnny Evers of the Chicago Cubs from participating last year, in the world's championship baseball series.

Pendleton has been in the Isabella McCosh Infirmary since the accident, and it was at first thought that he would be able to re-enter the game. Dr. MacLaren's latest examination, however, seems to settle the question. Pendleton is not only a football star, but he has been regarded as even a better baseball player, and it has frequently been said that he would go into fast company and make good. He was playing shortstop, at which position he starred last year as a member of the freshmen team.

Princeton is not only crippled with Pendleton out of the game, but Steve White's collar bone, which was broken some time ago, is causing some apprehension as to when he will be able to resume pitching work.

Winners with the Cue.

C. E. White, a scratch man, was successful in his attempt to score 250 points before Dr. E. Beck could rally 235 points in last night's game of the annual amateur handicap 18.2 balkline billiard tournament at Feeney's Knickerbocker Billiard Academy in Brooklyn. The scratch man made his necessary 250 points in forty-one innings, while Beck's best efforts netted him a tally of 191 points. The winner made high runs of 37 and 16, with an average of 6 4-41. Beck made the high run of 26 twice, with an average of 4 27-41. White, playing at scratch, 250 points, and F. A. Boyd, who is handicapped at 215 points, will be the contestants in the game this evening to decide the winner of the tournament.

John Daly, the champion three-cushion carrom billiard player, who will be called upon to defend his title as champion against George Moore on March 27, 28, and 29, engaged in two practice games yesterday at John Doyle's Forty-second Street Billiard Academy and won both matches. In the afternoon the champion defeated John Manahan by the score of 40 to 31 in forty-four innings. In the evening game Daly again defeated the New York representative in the National Intercity Billiard League, this time by the score of 40 to 36. This afternoon and evening Daly will engage in an eighty-point match with Joe Stone, another representative of New York in the National League. The champion is to make 40 points in each match.

In last night's game of the Harlem Class A amateur handicap championship pool tournament at the Riverside Billiard Academy, 125th Street and Seventh Avenue, Robert "Bud" Kyle, a scratch man, made an unsuccessful attempt to score 100 points before Jack Fitzwater could tally 70 points. Fitzwater won, making his allowed handicap of 70 points while Kyle was gathering 41 points. The contest was a pretty close affair up to the seventh frame, when the men were practically on even terms, and the score was 45 to 41 in favor of Fitzwater. In the next inning, the eighth, Fitzwater came to the table and cleared the fifteen ivories off the table and continued on with the ninth frame, shooting ten balls into the pockets, making his necessary seventy points and also the high run of 25. Kyle's best efforts netted him a high tally of 14, with two scratches. Fitzwater also had two scratches. In the game this evening Robert Enright, who is second in the tournament, will oppose Douglass Cross. Both contestants will be playing at scratch, 100 points.

Pittsburger Wins at Billiards.

PITTSBURG, Penn., March 14.—P. P. Trump of this city defeated William Campbell of Philadelphia, 50 to 47, in the tournament of the National Amateur Three-Cushion Billiard League here to-night. Each had high runs of 4. Trump took the lead from the start and held it throughout the 103 innings. J. F. Wireback, for Pittsburg, will play Campbell to-morrow night, closing the series with Philadelphia.

Earlier Contracts for Ball Players.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, March 14.—The National Baseball Commission made a recommendation to the National and American Leagues and the National Association to-day to arrange Section 1 of Article 7 of the National agreement so as to make it compulsory for teams to tender a contract to players before Feb. 1 each year. Heretofore this date has been fixed at March 1, and, in case no contract is tendered a player by that time, the player is declared a free agent. Until such a change is made, however, the commission rules that the player does not necessarily have to receive his contract by March 1, but the contract must be in the mails by that time.

College Outdoor Swimming Races.

The Intercollegiate Swimming Association has decided to hold another outdoor swimming tournament for the members of the College League, as well as others of the Eastern colleges. Last Summer such a meet was held with success at Travers Island, and with the co-operation of the New York Athletic Club, which has already been promised, the management of the races this year predict an even more eventful series may be expected this Summer. All of the usual races will be on the programme, besides many exhibition events by the prominent swimmers of the local clubs, and a large entry of the college swimmers of the East will be obtained. The date for such a meet has not been definitely decided upon as yet, but Capt. R. C. Patterson of the Columbia swimming team, who, with E. C. Richards of Yale, is again supporting the movement, said yesterday that it would probably be about June 24.

PACKEY M'FARLAND OUTPOINTS MORAN

Packey McFarland, the stock yards champion of Chicago, outpointed Owen Moran of England in a ten-round bout at the Fairmont Athletic Club last night. The fine ability of these two lightweights drew one of the biggest and most critical crowds to the club in the Bronx that ever attended a boxing match in this city.

While the bout did not produce a gruelling, punishing encounter that boxing crowds usually yell their heads off for, it was all that a limited round bout should be. There was "class" all through it, and the boys hit and defended in the most approved scientific manner. There were no torn or bunged ears, no split noses, or ridged and welted backs, and the winner at the finish had little on the other fellow as far as battle marks went.

McFarland won clearly and thoroughly on his superiority as a boxer, and in so doing demonstrated that probably he could put Moran away in a regular fight. This, of course, is still a question, and may be decided in the future. Neither showed the least fear of the other, but Moran was always second in the sparring, during the latter portion of the bout especially.

It was a good bout and a striking refutation of the charge that boxing is a brutal and unmanly sport.

There was a short delay between the last preliminary bout and the appearance of the stars in the final. The preponderance of action of the less important bouts only served to whet the appetites of the enthusiastic ones of the crowd, and they were expectant and only too ready for the real class which the wind-up promised. McFarland was the first to appear, accompanied by his manager, Emil Thiery, Young Corbett, Bob Cannon, and Johnny McFarland. Moran had in his corner Charlie Harvey, Jimmy Johnson, Jeff Perry, and Fred Sears.

The boys weighed under the stipulated mark, 135 pounds, at 5 o'clock, and both looked as though they had trained thoroughly for the encounter. McFarland had the size and reach, though Moran's sturdy-looking frame was evidence of power.

It was 10:40 when the first bell tap was sounded. They started in like masters of the boxing game, fiddling and feinting for a lead. Packey was the first to score with a light left on the chin. Moran countered cleanly with a right on the ear. They were busy all the time, and while the going was fast, there were no hard blows landed. Once Moran swung wildly with his left, but recovered his poise immediately. They broke from their clinches at the order of the referee, so there was no time lost this way.

McFarland opened the second round with a left lead for the face, which Moran ducked. Moran took a turn at the leading, and landed on Packey's ear. It was a stinger, but didn't set the Chicago boy back any. McFarland showed more energy than the Britisher, and followed up the few advantages he had on leads. It was a rather tame and even round.

McFarland rushed Moran to the ropes in the third session, working both hands. It was more of a hustle than a punching rush, and no damage resulted. Packey drew the Briton out and forced him to miss several of the blows. Moran drew his arm back across McFarland's throat after a messed-up lead. The crowd hissed him for the apparent foul, which was not at all intentional. The crowd was getting a bit restless at the lack of punishment.

The fourth round opened rather like the preceding rounds, both working light leads and sparring scientifically. McFarland, however, cut out a faster pace and cuffed the Englishman on both ears. Moran came hustling in and attempted to force McFarland back, but he wouldn't stand for it. Packey always followed his leads well, and punched away at Moran's body when they got in close. The round was a bit in favor of McFarland.

Moran opened the fifth round with a rush. He jumped almost across the ring to meet Packey. The American parried the left, but took a right on the body. Moran sailed in again and banged McFarland against the ropes. Packey was forced to cover up. He came back at Owen, however, and landed a pretty uppercut on the chin. He didn't have a lot of steam behind it, and it went for little. It was a fairly even round.

Moran opened the sixth as he did the fifth round, and caught Packey with a right on the body. McFarland seemed to be getting Moran's measure, as he followed the little Englishman around the ring, working both hands and scoring time and again in the clinches. He parried nearly all of Moran's leads and did most of the rushing. In one of these rushes Moran went to the floor and rolled outside of the ropes. It was McFarland's round.

McFarland held on to his lead in the seventh round, and the fast going was beginning to puzzle Moran. The latter was in no wise in a bad way, but he was getting the worst of the mixing. Once Moran led and McFarland stepped aside and ripped his right over as Moran missed and Packey's right glove landed on the side of the head. Moran made almost a dive for the ropes from the force of the blow. There were loud cheers for McFarland at the end of the round.

McFarland was always on top of the Englishman in the eighth session, and Moran took almost every lead of the American. Moran was always busy, however, and didn't stop a second, but he was outpointed in the boxing.

McFarland put some steam into his blows in the ninth round and planted several hard ones before Moran got started. Moran got in a couple of stiff counters which effectually stood off McFarland's rushes, but he couldn't make an impression on McFarland on this basis. It was a rather even round.

Moran opened the last session with a rush, but McFarland waited for him and ripped in hard on the Britisher's body. The fine physical condition of Moran stood him in good stead, for McFarland landed two to one. At that Moran was not in the least distressed nor marked. It was a fairly fast round in McFarland's favor.

The crowd did not pile into the clubhouse pell mell, as usually is the case on a big boxing night, for the reason that the club managers had taken extraordinary precautions in regard to the guest list. Then, again, all of the box seats had been reserved before last night. The prices of the seats were $5, $10, and $15, and the capacity of the house being 2,500 and every seat being sold, the receipts were about $20,000. The house filled slowly, but by 8:40 o'clock nearly every seat was occupied. At 9 o'clock, when the first bout was put on, every bit of available space was taken up.

Among those present were: Max Rogers, Harry Gleason, Max Kennedy, J. J. Clark, Bob Vernon, Gene Maguire, Jack Adler, Louis Mushner, Honest John Kelly, Max Blumenthal, Paul Armstrong, Joe Humphreys, Ex-Sheriff Tom Foley, Eddie Curry, John Wegman, J. J. Stewart, M. J. Tully, Billy Donohue, Mitch Meehan, Michael F. Dowling, Joe Dowling, P. J. Dwyer, J. G. Follansbee, Fred Hausman, Tom Sharkey, Dave Johnson, John A. Drake, A. R. Hudson, Anthony Drexel Biddle, Jack O'Brien, Patsy Haley, James Rowe, Willie Shaw, Arthur McLean, Jim Clancy, Bill Breeman, Jim Kennedy, Jim Meehan, Fred Humphreys, Commissioner Henry Brittner, Assemblyman J. Silverman, Marcus Mayer, Bob Smith, Bob Rose, Harry Tobin, Sim Walton, Joe Vendig, Tom Costigan, John Walters, Frank Moore, Dick Lee, Willie Shea, Ed Barrow, George F. Johnson, Harry Shafer, Ed. Behn, Jack Cooper, Peter Prunty, Warren Barbour, Charles White, Tom O'Rourke, Eddie Foy, Abe Attell, Roach Lewis, Samuel Lewis, James Mahoney, Doc Lester, Ben Caffey, Dan O'Rourke, Jacob Joseph, Allen Ryan, ex-District Attorney William Travers Jerome, Harry Lieberstein, and Charles Thorley, Johnny Dunn, and former Chief of Police Devery.

The first bout was a four-round affair between Arty Edwards and Mickey Finnegan. Edwards was going merrily along, making a show of Mickey, when the latter whipped a right hand across in the middle of the second round. It landed in just the right place and Edwards went down and out.

The second bout was another four-rounder between Willie Smith and Walter McGarr. The latter could box a bit, but the other had had the punch. The referee stopped this go at the end of the third round, because he thought Smith was a bit too much for McGarr.

Kid Fisher was too strong for Jimmy Dempsey in the third four-round go, and it was stopped in the second round.

Bobby Handy was all over Willie Howard as far as height and weight were concerned in the next bout, which was down for six rounds. Howard, however, was all over Handy as far as the other elements of a boxing match go, and went out of the ring a winner before the first round was half over.

Kid Albert and Willie Green were the next pair at six rounds. While they did not give perfect satisfaction, they exchanged many a hard wallop right up to the last bell tap. It was a fairly good draw.

JIMMY BRITT TO COME BACK.

Former Lightweight Star Likely to Box Nelson in Six-Round Bout.

James Edward Britt, at present engaged with Hugh D. McIntosh in the management of the Olympia, London's big fight club, has decided that he still possesses a great part of the skill which put him at the top class of lightweights a few years ago, and he expects to again make his public appearance in the ring. Britt has been in England for the past two years, but expects to visit this country soon, and while here he will undoubtedly take part in several bouts. He confided to a close friend who visited England a short time ago that he felt a desire to don the mitts again, and the latter communicated with Jack O'Brien, manager of the American A. C. of Philadelphia. O'Brien is quite anxious to get Britt to appear at his club, and hopes to match Jimmy with Battling Nelson, the former lightweight champion. With this end in view O'Brien has just sent out a challenge to the Battler in behalf of Britt.

A bout between these two, both top-notch lightweights a few years ago, and both still young men in spite of their recent inactivity in the fistic game, would undoubtedly be a great drawing card. Nelson and Britt met four times when in their prime, and as far as the honors go Britt has a shade on the former champion. Their first encounter was at San Francisco in December, 1904, and Britt got the decision after twenty rounds. In September of the following year Nelson knocked Britt out at Colma in eighteen rounds. In July, 1907, they again battled twenty rounds, and Britt received the decision a second time. Their last clash was at Los Angeles in March, 1908, and the bout went the full ten rounds, with no decision. This was Britt's last fight in America.

Since going to England Britt has figured in three bouts, all with Johnny Summers. The American boy won the first in ten rounds, lost the second in twenty, and was knocked out in nine rounds the last time they fought, in July, 1909. Since that time Britt has kept his hand in the game, boxing quite a little with Harry Lewis, Summers, and many others who were preparing for bouts in England.

Britt has taken on flesh since he fought in America, and would now scale closer to the welterweight figure than the lightweight mark. He feels confident, however, that he has enough of his former cunning to make a good showing over the six-round route, hence the desire to stage his first bout in Philadelphia. His showing in his first match will have much to do with the amount of work he will do in the ring game before returning to England. It is possible that he may feel able to go ten rounds, and if such is the case New York fight fans may have a chance to see the former American favorite in action.

Britt is not yet 31 years old, and has been out of the ring less than two years. He has always taken good care of himself, and should be able to make a creditable showing against a large number of the mitt artists now in the game. From 1902 to 1909 he ranked in the first class among the lightweights, and met all the stars of his time. Nelson, who is picked for Britt's opponent, is not yet 29 years of age, and is still in the game.

Wagner and Daly Draw at Albany.

"Unk" Russell Defeats Young Otto.

KANSAS CITY, March 14.—"Unk" Russell of Philadelphia won a decision over Young Otto of New York in a ten-round bout to-night.

BOXING AND WRESTLING.

The matchmaker of the Wendover Athletic Club has arranged an attractive card for the weekly show to be given at the Clermont Casino on Thursday night. The main bout of ten rounds will be between Johnny Moran, the idol of the Lambs Club, and Battling Marshall. Marshall is a newcomer in local boxing, but has been successful in bouts in the South. The semi-final of ten rounds will be between Johnny Dundee and Jimmy Carroll of the West Side Athletic Club. There will also be several preliminaries.

On Friday night, March 17, at the New Polo Athletic Association, Jim Mitchen, a promising welterweight, and Jay Hatfield of Newark will box ten rounds in the main bout of the evening's programme. There will be a six-round semi-final between Artie McGovern and Young Rago. John McCormack, the former 115-pound amateur, will make his first professional appearance in a special six-round bout against Harry Phillips.

Joe Bedell of Brooklyn, who has been successful in his bouts lately, will box ten rounds with Leach Cross at the Whirlwind Athletic Club to-morrow night. Bedell has shown much improvement in his boxing, especially against Bert Keyes and Willie Beecher. Bedell believes he is faster than the east side dentist, and expects to show his superiority in this bout. Cross was well satisfied with his bouts against Johnny Marto and Willie Beecher, and says he has recovered much of his old time speed. There will be three six-round bouts and two four-round mills on the six-round bouts Darkey Griffin will box Harry Phillips, Young Carlton will box Young Kelly, and Tommy Andricks will be pitted against Terry Edwards.

Joe Rogers, the sturdy American wrestler, has at last received recognition from the prominent grapplers of the heavyweight division, and will probably soon be matched with one of the big mat men. Rogers has challenged Zbyszko, the Polish champion, several times, but Jack Herrman, his manager, has always objected to the handicap rules suggested by the American. Rogers now has financial backing from Chicago promoters, who are anxious to see him in action against the Pole in Chicago. Rogers, however, wants the match to take place in New York or Brooklyn, and it is believed that Zbyszko will accede to his wishes. The Pole insists on a finish match under straight catch-as-catch-can rules.

Joe Jeannette will sail for Paris on Saturday. He is booked to fight the winner of the Langford-Sam McVea battle, which takes place in Paris next week. Naturally Jeannette is anxious to annex a victory here on the eve of his departure, and undoubtedly will try to make short work of Jim Barry when they enter the ring of the National Sporting Club to-morrow night for a ten-round contest. Jeannette is confident that he will stop Barry, and proposes to carry the white heavyweight along at a terrific pace. The Hoboken negro is in splendid shape for the argument. Jeannette is trying to induce Sam Langford to box him to a finish in Paris. Langford is holding out for twenty rounds. It is likely that they will meet in a thirty-round contest. Jeannette beat Sam McVea in a forty-nine-round affair two years ago.

Yale Freshmen's Crew Finances.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 14.—The financial report of the 1913 freshman crew at Yale submitted by Manager W. M. Robinson, Jr., shows total receipts of $3,473.02 and total expenditures of $3,227.17, leaving a balance of $246.85. The largest item of expenditures was for the training table, $1,013.94; the second largest item, $935, being for expenses at Gale's Ferry.

FORD AND FISHER BEATEN AT ATHENS

Special to The New York Times.

ATHENS, Ga., March 14.—A rearrangement of the Yankees, new and old, was necessary for to-day's battle between regulars and colts, which battle, incidentally, was won by the regulars 5 to 2. Brockett, the pitcher, was in right field for the Colts, vice Bailey, who was drafted by Chase to play right field for the regulars. Roy Hartzell went to third base for the Colts instead of Wilbur Roach, who has an injured thumb, and is on the shelf for two days. Walsh and Williams of the Colts shifted positions, Walsh going behind the bat and Williams going to first.

Roach is not the only Red Cross subject on the squad. Harry Ables, the Texas pitcher, is nursing an injured chin. In practice before to-day's game Ables, while stooping, was struck on the point of the chin by one of Warhop's pitched balls. The ball came with sufficient force to knock Ables out for a moment, and when he came to he was sent into town to interview a surgeon. He had a cut in his chin which went to the bone and two stitches were made in it. To-night he said his whole face felt sore, but that after taking Warhop's punch he wasn't afraid of Jack Johnson.

By bunching their hits the regulars whacked the Colts handily. Daniels made a single off Ford in the third inning, and Elliott followed with a three-bagger which missed being a home run by an eyelash, for Elliott is a fast runner. In the next inning Fisher was rocked for triples by Chase, Cree, and Blair, and gave two bases on balls. His speed was lambasted, but when he got his curve to working he struck out three batters among four. Ford's first essay in the box found the Yankee crack using a straight ball mostly, but he sent up a few drops which broke nicely. He held the regulars to two hits in three innings.

Sykes, the Chicagoan, pitched the first three innings for Chase's side. He made use of the moist ball several times, disclosed a side-arm movement, and did very well. Warhop puzzled the Colts, who would have been shut out but for a muffed fly by Cree and a wild throw by Blair. Joe Walsh got along all right handling the delivery of Ford.

Two star fielding plays were made by the Colts. Litschi made one, a running one-handed pick up of a ground ball. Brockett made the other, a running catch of a long foul. Brockett also stole a base and acquired one of the Colts' four hits. Jube, Kauff, and Revelle made the others. Chase is as spry as ever, and so far the management has not dimmed his lustre as a performer in the least. The score by innings:

RAIN AT GIANTS' CAMP.

Special to The New York Times.

MARLIN, Texas, March 14.—To-day the Giants had a half day off on account of a drizzling rain setting in about the time they had finished the morning work-out and continuing throughout the remainder of the day, making afternoon practice out of the question. The rest was welcomed by the players, because Manager McGraw has been working them pretty hard and has about rounded them into condition.

Most of them are ready now to start the championship season. If the weather they run into on their way back through the South is fair they will reach New York in perfect condition.

There will be three teams of Giants out playing next Saturday and Sunday. One squad plays at Galveston, one at Houston, and another at San Antonio.

Barger's Team Blanks Rucker's Nine.

Special to The New York Times.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 14.—After defeating Rucker's Superbas four out of five games, Barger's Majestics added another victory to their string this afternoon in a practice game by shutting them out 7 to 0. The playing was all on the side of the Majestics, who fielded brilliantly and hit the ball pretty much as they pleased. Ryan, a new pitcher, formerly of Boston and Cleveland, made much the best showing of the quartet of twirlers, with George Bell, who relieved him in the fourth inning, a good runner-up. The feature was the batting of Wheat, Barger, and Tooley. The two former hit for the circuit and the former Rochester shortstop made two pretty singles. In addition to this Tooley had eleven chances around the short field without an error.

To-day's trip to Ozark Lithia Springs, where a fried chicken dinner was to be served to the players by Manager Jones of the Majestic Hotel, was postponed on account of the great demand on the stablemen here for conveyances of all kinds. The trip will be made to-morrow.

Hans Wagner of the Pittsburgs arrived this morning and made a call on the Brooklyn players during practice this afternoon. The remainder of the day Wagner spent fishing in a small pond opposite the ball grounds.

Ball grounds are in great demand just at present. The St. Louis Browns and Cincinnati Reds have been using the same grounds for over a week and as a result Manager Wallace of the Browns will leave a few days earlier than expected, stating that he cannot get sufficient work for his men under this arrangement. Score:

Browns Defeat Cincinnati Reds.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 14.—Although Manager Griffiths of the Cincinnati Nationals put the regulars of his team in the line-up today against the St. Louis Americans the latter outhit and outfielded the Nationals and won 3 to 1. This is the third of a series of nine games. Cincinnati won the first and St. Louis the last two.

BASEBALL NEWS IN BRIEF.

Umpire Hansell asks for only authority and several policemen to banish the insurrectos among the Giants at Marlin. That's about all Umpire Diaz needs to maintain order across the border.

Jimmy Ryan, who played with Capt. Anson's famous Colts in Chicago years ago, has announced his retirement from the game. Ryan was a star in his best days, and was a member of the baseball party that made a trip around the world several years ago. Jimmy's last engagement in the major leagues was with the Washington Club seven years ago under the management of the late Tom Loftus. Since then Jimmy has been playing with semi-professional teams in Chicago.

Flattering reports are coming from New Orleans, where the Cubs are training, of the excellent manner in which Catchers Archer and Angermeier are throwing. All of which may cause Johnny Kling to pack his grip and hike to pelicanland and join the National League champions. Johnny spent a long while last Spring warming the bench and watching how well Archer could catch, because Kling was not ripe for good work, and he may have to adorn the bench again this Spring for the same reason. Johnny isn't the terror to base stealers he was a couple of years ago, and it behooves him to get into condition with the others if he team if he expects to remain in select baseball society.

The father of Centre Fielder Paskert of the Phillies died in Cleveland a few days ago. The Philadelphia Club's President, the players, and baseball writers all sent floral tributes to Cleveland.

The latest Boston Club sale rumor died before it reached first base. It hadn't enough speed to get out of its own trackage.

Chicago Cubs have been getting trimmed in New Orleans quite regularly. Still, games played in New Orleans don't win National League flags.

Chicago papers are printing four-column-wide pictures of Matty McIntyre slugging the ball for the White Sox. Matty, the Staten Island boy, is said to be showing better form at the bat than at any time in two years. The change from Detroit seems to have done the veteran outfielder a lot of good. He not only has been hitting consistently but has been poling out many extra base smashes. He got four hits last Sunday against Hueston, one of which was a triple.

Jim McAleer is worrying about his Washington outfield. None of the youngsters is showing more than minor league ability, and it looks as if the green outfield would have to be looked after by last year's players, Milan, Gessler, and Lelivelt, none of whom is a pennant getter. Milan outranks the other two considerably.

James Callahan as successor to Hugh Duffy as manager of the Chicago White Sox next year is the tip handed out in Chicago. Jimmy is back with his old team after several years of promoting Saturday and Sunday games in the windy town, and if he can come nearly back to his old-time form he may hang his cap in Comiskey's clubhouse, and as he and Commy are very close friends it is believed that James will don the managerial togs again when Duffy's contract expires next Fall.

Manager McGraw has almost enough players at Marlin to suppress the Mexican insurrection, but when the Giants line up on the Polo Grounds for the season's battles they will look something like this: Devore, left field; Doyle, second base; Snodgrass, centre field; Murray, right field; Devlin, third base; Merkle, first base; Bridwell, shortstop; Meyers, catcher, and Mathewson, pitcher. The youngsters may shine in the South, but they will have to show more brilliancy to rout the regulars out of their jobs. The pitchers have the best opportunity for getting into the limelight, for with Matty it is almost a toss-up as to who will be the other members of the twirling staff. Wiltse is going back, Ames is erratic, Crandall is effective only against Boston, and Marquard should get into some other profession. Drucke may improve greatly over last year's performances, which were fairly good for a first-year man, and the others have yet to show something before major league batsmen. With two good pitchers to help Matty the Giants would be genuine, not sentimental, favorites for the championship.

Cunningham, the Senators' second baseman, is about twenty-five pounds overweight, and Manager McAleer loads the player down like a pack mule and makes him run around the park at Atlanta to take off the superfluous avoirdupois, which is getting Cunny's goat as well as making him thin.

NO DATES SET FOR NEW YORK RACING

Jockey Club Stewards in Session, but No Plans for Year Are Announced.

The uncertain conditions of racing on the tracks about New York this Summer were discussed at a meeting of the Stewards of the Jockey Club held in the Windsor Arcade, 571 Fifth Avenue, yesterday. Chairman August Belmont presided, and F. K. Sutrgis, H. K. Knapp, and Andrew Miller were present. Some time ago Starter Mars Cassidy asked the Stewards for a definite answer about his engagement in New York this Summer, because he wished to make arrangements for engagements at other tracks in the event of there being no racing on the New York tracks. Mr. Cassidy asked for an answer by March 15.

The Stewards advised the starter that pending the uncertain conditions, they could not give him a definite answer at this time and release him from any of his obligations to the club. This action is taken to mean that the Stewards still have some hope that racing meets will be held at local tracks, but they were not in a position to give a definite statement on the matter. Mars Cassidy will be the starter at the Jamestown meeting, for on the application of Robert Levy, the manager of the Jamestown Jockey Club, the Stewards approved of substituting Cassidy for A. B. Wade as starter at the Spring meeting.

F. J. Bryan was appointed Steward to represent the Jockey Club at the Spring meeting of the Jamestown Jockey Club and the Maryland Jockey Club. The application of Roy Estep to cancel the contract between George P. Sherman and himself was denied, and the Assistant Secretary was instructed to warn J. W. Flynn as to harboring Estep and call his attention to the racing rules governing this case. The appeal of J. C. F. Jacoby from the ruling of the Stewards of the Summer meeting of the Saratoga Association in disqualifying his horse, Imitator, was referred back to the Stewards of the Saratoga Association of 1910. On the recommendation of the License Committee, the following trainers and jockeys were granted licenses:

Trainers—Maurice Bernard, August C. Blum, S. T. Booker, Matthew Brady, William Brooks, W. A. Burtschell, C. F. Clark, T. F. Coles, Thomas Collins, George Cornell, C. F. Dewitt, E. J. Doherty, T. C. Dowdell, James Drummond, John J. Duffy, G. J. Engelking, Jules Garson, Lewis Garth, William Garth, J. Woods Garth, Joe L. Gladish, A. J. Goldsborough, Harry Hall, T. J. Healey, Edward W. Haffner, S. C. Hildreth, Michael Hogan, J. J. Hyland, George Jacobs, W. H. Karrick, H. J. Kennedy, C. L. Mack, William Martin, W. R. Midgley, Ed Moore, G. Moyne, Robert McKeever, J. H. McDonald, James McLaughlin, W. L. Oliver, J. W. Pangle, Hugh Penny, Edward Peters, E. M. Phillips W. F. Presgrave, James Rowe, Fred Schelke, Albert Simons, Mat Smart, S. W. Street, J. R. Thompson, Ernest Utterback, Frank D. Weir, A. G. Weston, John Whalen, David Woolford.

The following jockeys and trainers' licenses were laid on the table on the recommendation of the License Committee: Trainer Joseph Marrone, Jockey Guy Burns.

Americans' Horses Finish Second.

PARIS, March 14.—At the meet at Maisons-Laffitte to-day, W. K. Vanderbilt's Presight finished second in the Prix Sornette, for three-year-olds, $1,200, distance six furlongs. In the Prix du Vieux Moulin, a selling event of $600, distance ten furlongs, Nash Turner's Friand II. came in second.

Racing at Tampa Until April 1.

TAMPA, Fla., March 14.—It has been decided to continue the race meeting here until April 1. The dates formerly assigned to Pensacola have been cancelled. There will be an increase in purses.

HARVARD ATHLETES OUT.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 14.—With baseball players, several football men, candidates for the lacrosse team, and track athletes cavorting about the stadium to-day, and with three crews again on the river, the vicinity of Soldiers' Field, Harvard's great recreation park, gave every evidence of signs of Spring.

Coach Sexton had his outfielders leave the cage for the first real work this year in the open air, and the field needs to dry out only a little for it to be possible for the infielders to come out also.

The candidates for the 'Varsity lacrosse team reported for practice for the first time. There were about thirty men out for the 'Varsity team and twenty-five candidates for the freshmen. The team has no coach yet, last year's man not being available, but the players will be coached by Capt. Nash for the present.

"Pooch" Donovan, the track coach, has a few men, including Jacques, the cross-country Captain, working outside at present, but Monday will call out most of the other candidates. Jacques and Lewis are about the only point winners left from last year's team in addition to Capt. Foster, who did not run last year.

New material will have to be developed for practically every event. The track team has changed its Spring plans a little, and will not go to Annapolis for a week as previously planned. Instead the team will be taken to Baltimore, and there will prepare for the dual games with the Middies at Annapolis, which will be held April 22. May 6 Harvard has its dual games with Dartmouth, and May 13 the Yale dual games, thus leaving two weeks for final preparation for the intercollegiates, which will be held at Cambridge May 26 and 27.

The Harvard track men are much interested in the proposition that Harvard and Yale send a team to England this Summer to compete against the Oxford and Cambridge athletes.

Last year a meeting was all but arranged, and this being coronation year, it is thought by the Harvard management, there is at least an even chance for arrangements for another series of international intercollegiate games to be made.

Danish Athletic Trainer Here for Ideas

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 14.—Moritz Rasmussen of Copenhagen, who has been selected to train the Danish team which will compete in the Olympic games at Stockholm in 1912, is a visitor at Harvard. He arrived to-day and intends to remain here for a fortnight or more studying Harvard athletics, after which he will visit Yale and then Columbia. Rasmussen is himself an athlete of note in his own county, holding records for hammer and discus throwin, swimming, and walking. While he is to devote the greater part of his time while in the United States to the study of track athletics, he will also endeavor to get ideas on football and baseball as it is played here with a view to introducing them in Denmark.

Yale Athletes Train Outdoors.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 14.—Yale athletic teams to-day invaded Yale Field for the first time this season. Capt. Johnny Kilpatrick of the track team called out the entire running squad for work on a board track erected near the clubhouse. The track men will work daily on the field the rest of the season. Capt. "Pop" Corey of the baseball nine to-night issued a call for the baseball candidates to report to-morrow at Yale Field for their first outdoor work this season. They will take only batting practice, as the diamond is not yet hard.

Shooting at Bergen Beach Traps.

Thirty-seven well-known Metropolitan gunners took part in the monthly shoot of the Bergen Beach Gun Club yesterday. The event was the second of the third series shoot for the prizes offered by Capt. H. W. Dreyer. In the first division G. Kouwenhoven was high gun, with a card of 47 out of a possible 50 targets. J. Gaughen and A. E. Hendrickson led the shooters of Class B, with a total of 88 out of a possible 50 targets, and in Class C Howard Voorhies took the leg, with a total of 47 out of a possible 50 bluerocks.

No Change in Revolver Shooting.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., March 14.—Official returns from the twenty-first and twenty-second matches of the indoor league race of the United States Revolver Association failed to change the standings of the first three teams, Springfield, the Portland (Ore.) club, and Manhattan of New York. Boston, however, which stands fourth in the race, received an unexpected defeat at the hands of the Shell Mound Club team of Emeryville, Cal.

POINT JUDITH POLO DATES.

Ranelagh Team of England Coming to Defend Open Championship Title.

Three international polo tournaments will be held on the grounds of the Point Judith Polo Club this year. With the exception of the international championship, which will be played on the grounds of the Meadow Brook Club at Hempstead, L. I., the most important games of the season will be contested on the Point Judith grounds. The first event of importance will be the junior championships which will begin Monday, July 24. These will be followed with the matches for the Army and Navy Cups, which will be contested for one week later.

The senior championships will follow the military tournament during the latter part of the first week in August, and to fill out the vacant dates special matches will be played during that week for the National Points Cup, which will be held in connection with the members' games.

During the third week competitions will be held for the Atlantic and Watch Hill Cups, together with the special matches for the National competition.

The open championship will be held during the week of Aug. 14 to 19, when the Ranelagh team of England will defend the title against all comers. The intermediate games will be played by members, and also for the National Points Cup. During this week a pony show will be held.

The last week of the tournament will begin Aug. 21 and continue until the end of the week. The competitions during this week will be devoted to the Ranelagh Cups, and also for the finals for the National trophies, the concluding days of the week being set apart for members' games and gymkhana competitions. The schedule follows:

July—Saturday, 22 (Inauguration Day)—Special matches for National points cups.

Harvard-Cornell Race on May 27.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 14.—Harvard and Cornell will probably row at Ithaca on May 27. The date, arranged at a conference held Saturday, at which it was finally decided to continue relations in this sport, was announced to-night. It has yet to be formally approved by the Harvard Athletic Council, but it is expected this will be done within a few days.

Princeton Crew on Carnegie Lake.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 14.—The Princeton 'Varsity crew got out on Carnegie Lake for the first time this afternoon. A stiff wind made rowing uncomfortable. Other crews out were the freshman and substitute 'Varsity bunches. Capt. Robert T. Roche, 1911, had charge. The crews will continue to practice regularly now for the Spring regatta with Yale and Cornell. This takes place at Princeton, May 19.

Intercollegiate Soccer Games.

The six college soccer teams of the Intercollegiate Soccer Association have arranged for activities in the soccer world, and the next six weeks will find them busily engaged in the playing of the newly arranged schedule. The best colleges in the East are represented in the association, including Columbia, Pennsylvania, Haverford, Yale, Harvard, and Cornell. The schedule: March 18, Columbia vs. Pennsylvania, at New York; Haverford vs. Harvard, at Cambridge. March 25, Pennsylvania vs. Harvard, at Cambridge; Cornell vs. Columbia, at Ithaca. March 31, Haverford vs. Yale, at Haverford. April 1, Pennsylvania vs. Yale, at Philadelphia. April 6, Pennsylvania vs. Cornell, at Philadelphia; Columbia vs. Harvard, at Cambridge. April 8, Columbia vs. Yale, at New York; Haverford vs. Cornell, at Haverford. April 10, Yale vs. Cornell, at New Haven. April 15, Yale vs. Harvard, at New Haven. April 29, Cornell vs. Harvard, at Ithaca.

Bruce-Brown Sails for Europe.

David L. Bruce-Brown, the young New Yorker who won the Grand Prize automobile race at Savannah last Fall, and J. S. Josephs, President of the Fiat Automobile Company, will sail on the Mauretania this morning for a short trip on the Continent. Bruce-Brown and Josephs will visit the Fiat factory in Turin to inspect the new Fiat racers that are being built for the Grand Prix of France, to be held July 2, and one of which the New Yorker may drive. While in France Bruce-Brown will meet W. J. Morgan, American manager for the Grand Prix, and will be driven over the course. He will return to America in time to tune up his Fiat car for the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Speedway, in which event he will be one of the most prominent entrants.

TRACK AND OTHER SPORTS.

Local judges of hockey predict that with Odie and Sprague Cleghorn in the line-up of the Renfrews the millionaires' team will surely beat the Ottawa champions in the big professional hockey tournament which begins Friday night at the St. Nicholas Rink. The Cleghorn brothers played here on the local Wanderers' team last Winter and are familiar with the local rink, besides being accustomed to skating on artificial ice. In Canadian professional hockey circles they are considered the greatest pair of the season from the fact that they scored the deciding goals in both games that Renfrew won from Ottawa for the Stanley Cup. The Renfrew team will open the tournament on Friday night in the first of a series of two consecutive games with the Wanderers of Montreal, the gross score of two nights' play to count, and qualify the winner to play the deciding games on Monday and Tuesday nights with the Ottawas for the professional championship and money prizes aggregating $2,500.

J. F. O'Connor, a member of the Morris Athletic Association, mourns the loss of a suit of clothes, money, and scarf pin which in some mysterious way were either taken by mistake or willfully stolen at the games of the Mohawk A. C. last Saturday night at the Twenty-second Regiment Armory. O'Connor left his clothes in the competitors' dressing room and when he returned he found that they were gone. It is possible that the clothing was taken in mistake by some other competitor, and if such is the case the Morris athlete will be willing to return those which he had to take for his own.

With the big games of the Mohawk and Pastime Clubs now out of the way the next attraction for the athletic fans will be the Spring games of the Twenty-third Regiment of Brooklyn on Saturday evening. The Brooklyn soldiers have obtained an exceedingly good attraction in George Goulding, the walker from Toronto, Canada, who proved the sensation at the New York A. C. games and now holds the amateur mile record. Goulding will start from scratch in a special two-mile handicap walk, in which he will try to lower the American record for the distance held by "Cinders" Murray. Additional features will be seen in a five-mile pursuit race between bike riders from the Irish-American A. C. and New York A. C. and a quarter-mile scratch dash. In the bicycle events the teams will be Townsend, Brown, and Vanden Dries for the Mercury Foot and Fisher, Goodwin, and Mohrman for the Winged Fist.

The Morningside A. C., which played an important part in the baseball world last season with a fast nine, will put out a team this season that will certainly do justice to the well-earned name of the club, as they will have the pick of the best ball tossers in Harlem. The team will travel on Saturdays and play at Van Cortlandt Park on Sundays all season, and at present are open to play any team in New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut. The following men are candidates for the team: Outfielders, Joe Harvey, R. Herter, J. McDonald, P. Borner, C. Davis, Moler, Wallash, and L. Brann; infielders, B. Hammerstein, J. Harvey, S. Dunne, J. Suglia, J. Jessup, and Monty; catchers, J. Hammerstein, Rudians, and Murray; pitchers, Mulford, Coulter, Van Danacker, Fern, Dempsey, and Herter. The latter was the most consistent pitcher in New York last season, having won twenty-six games and lost but one. The Morningside team lost only two games last season. Managers desiring games may address Leo E. Brann, manager, 400 West 126th Street, New York City.

Leslie Soule, President and manager of the Yale University Athletic Association, has written Secretary James E. Sullivan of the Amateur Athletic Union that Yale and Harvard at its recent meeting selected him to act as referee of the Yale-Harvard dual contests that will be held at New Haven Saturday, May 13.

ACE II. WINS FAST RACE AT PALM BEACH

Special to The New York Times.

PALM BEACH, Fla., March 14.—The Ace II., a new speed boat built at Ogdensburg, N. Y., this season and owned by W. W. Trimpi of Eustis, Fla., won the speed race with which the seventh annual races of the Palm Beach Power Boat Association opened to-day on Lake Worth. She showed an average speed of 27.01 nautical miles per hour. The motor boat T. and S., owned by W. F. Coachman of Jacksonville, took second place with an average speed of 24.03 nautical miles per hour. In the speed contest for Florida boats the T. and S. was the winner, her elapsed time for the two laps of the course necessary for the nine miles being 21 minutes 55½ seconds.

The Dewey, another of Coachman's boats, was second in this event. The last race, a nine-mile handicap for all boats, was won by the Ruth K., owned by Charles S. Smiley of St. Lucie, which covered the nine miles in 32 minutes 31½ seconds. The Ace II. was six seconds behind the winner and the T. and S. was third.

Yale's Football Schedule.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 14.—Manager Kaynor to-night announced the Yale football schedule for next season. Ten games have been arranged, the Harvard and West Point matches alone including the out-of-town events. Vanderbilt and Tufts, which were on last year's schedule, have been dropped. Virginia Polytechnic Institute and New York University take their places. The Virginia team is one of the strongest of the South, and New York University has constantly improved in its play in recent years. The schedule:

Sept. 27, Wesleyan at Yale Field; 30, Holy Cross at Yale Field; Oct. 7, Syracuse at Yale Field; 14, Virginia Polytechnic Institute at Yale Field; 21, West Point at West Point; 28, Colgate at Yale Field; Nov. 4, New York University at Yale Field; 11, Brown at Yale Field; 18, Princeton at Yale Field, and 25, Harvard at Cambridge.

No Post-Season Basket Ball Games.

After several weeks of negotiations on the part of the Secretary of the Intercollegiate Basket Ball League, the proposed post-season games to settle the championship of the East and the West have had to be abandoned as not being practicable for this year. This announcement was given out from the Columbia Basket Ball Association yesterday after it had received direct word from Ralph Morgan, Secretary of the Intercollegiate Association.

Elton to Captain Cornell's "Five."

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., March 14.—Richard A. Elton of Canandaigua, N. Y., has been elected captain of the Cornell basket ball team for next year. Elton played forward on the team this year

Columbia to Hold Prep. Games.

The Columbia University Track Association announced yesterday that a preparatory school tournament would again be held by the Morningside Heights institution this year. In 1909 the Prep School Day had to be abandoned because of the remodeling of South Field, but it was held last year. It was found impossible at the meeting yesterday to set a definite date for these games, but the chances are that they will be held on May 20, the same date as the annual interclass regatta to be held on the Hudson. Inasmuch as the eight from the Central High School of Philadelphia, the present holders of the interscholastic mark for the mile, will row the freshmen at this time, the committee feels that the two events might be successfully run off in connection with each other. The advisability of attempting this, however, is yet an open question. At any rate the meeting will come some time near the end of May.

Chess Leaders Draw Games.

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain, March 14.—Before the beginning of play to-day in the fourteenth round of the International Chess Tournament, it was announced that Duras beat Marshall yesterday in the thirteenth round. It had been erroneously reported that Marshall and Duras had played a drawn game. The results of to-day's play were as follows: Duras beat Burn; Niemzowitsch drew with Marshall; Maroczy drew with Vidmar; Capablanca drew with Teichmann; Spielmann drew with Rubinstein. The games between Leonhardt and Tarrasch and Schlechter and Bernstein were adjourned. Janowski had a bye. Adjourned games will be played to-morrow, while the fifteenth and final round is scheduled for Thursday. The record:

	Won.	Lost.		Won.	Lost.
Capablanca	9	4	Maroczy	6	7
Rubinstein	9	5	Teichmann	6	7
Vidmar	8½	4½	Bernstein	5	7
Marshall	8	5	Janowski	4½	7½
Schlechter	7	5	Burn	4½	8½
Niemzowitsch	7	6	Duras	4	9
Tarrasch	6½	4½	Leonhardt	3½	8½
Spielmann	6½	6½

NOTES FOR THE GOLFERS.

Ability to play golf well seems to run in the Hyde family of Brooklyn. Only a short time ago Miss Lillian B. Hyde, the metropolitan title holder, won the Florida women's championship at Palm Beach, defeating her sister in the final round. A week later James R. Hyde, a brother of Lillian, won the men's title of Florida. Although somewhat outnumbered by the Fownes family, it is safe to say that the Hydes of Brooklyn are running a close second to the Pittsburg clan.

At the recent annual meeting of the Brae Burn Country Club, the treasurer's report showed a balance of $20,000. With so much ready cash at its disposal it is not surprising that the officials decided to purchase more land to add to the large tract already acquired. Improvements will also be made to the links this year.

Rumor has it that this year's tri-city matches for the Lesley Cup will in all probability be held the last week in September. As it is New York's turn to handle this attraction, it means that another important event will be crowded into an always popular month with golfers. The schedule already calls for the intercollegiate tournament at Baltusrol, Sept. 5 to 9; the National Amateur, at Apawamis, Sept. 11 to 16, and the seventh annual seniors' tournament, also at Apawamis, Sept. 27 and 28. As the tri-city only requires two days to run off, it would be possible to hold this competition immediately following the seniors. Just where the inter-city will be decided seems largely a matter of conjecture at present. When in this district it generally takes place at Garden City. There are many other good courses, however, so that it may be found advisable to select some hitherto untried green. The territory of the Metropolitan Golf Association embraces all of Long Island, consequently the National course, near Shinnecock Hills, would be eligible. In this way the cream of the Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, and metropolitan amateurs would have a chance to try out the ideal links.

MR. TAFT AND PEACE.

"Twice within the last twelve months the President of the United States has sketched out a step in advance more momentous than any one thing that any statesman in his position has ventured to say before." These were the words of Sir EDWARD GREY, Secretary for Foreign Affairs in the British Government, used in the House of Commons on Monday. We quote Sir EDWARD'S summary of the statements of Mr. TAFT, to which allusion is thus made:

> Mr. TAFT recently made the statement that he does not see personally any reason why matters of National honor should not be referred to a court of arbitration. He has also expressed the opinion that if the United States could negotiate a positive agreement with some other nation to abide by the adjudication of an international arbitral court on every question that could not be settled by negotiation, no matter what was involved, a long step forward would be taken.

Here we have the broad general statement that all international differences can be settled by judicial determination. Then we have the specific suggestion of an agreement between two powerful nations to refer all their differences to judicial determination. Finally we have the definite and emphatic statement of the British Foreign Minister of his own view of British action:

> We have no proposal before us and unless public opinion rises to the height of discussing a proposal of that kind it cannot be carried out. But supposing two of the greatest nations of the world were to make it clear to the whole world by such an agreement that under no circumstances were they going to war again I venture to say that it would have a beneficent effect.
>
> The nations that made such an agreement might be exposed to attack from a third Power. This would probably lead to their following with an agreement to join each other in any case where one of them had a quarrel with a third nation which had refused to arbitrate.
> We should be delighted to receive such a proposal. I should feel it something so far reaching in its consequences that it required not only the signature of both governments but the deliberately decided sanction of Parliament. That I believe would be obtained.

Taken together, in their relation one to the other, and in the light of possible and probable results, these declarations, one by the President of the United States and the other by the British Foreign Secretary, speaking in the place of the British Premier, may rightly be regarded as the most important with regard to the maintenance of peace and the prevention of war that have been made within the last quarter of a century. They are not abstract forms of purely theoretic propositions. They are the deliberate utterances of responsible statesmen occupying the highest places, so far as concerns this subject, in their respective countries. They relate to an actual situation, and they outline practical measures bearing on that situation and on a lasting policy for dealing with international differences for all time. Well may Sir EDWARD GREY regard the steps taken by Mr. TAFT in this direction as "momentous," and it is to his great honor that he, with the assent of the Government of which he is a member, has met these steps in a manner so candid, so serious and courageous.

Sir EDWARD GREY is under no delusion as to the obstacles that lie in the path of any such policy as is suggested. Its adoption demands a great change in public sentiment, a difficult process of education of the public intelligence. But the process is going on. One sign of it is that, at the close of the debate in the Commons, the House adopted by a vote of 276 to 56 a resolution, offered from the Liberal side, that the House would welcome the establishment of international armaments, that is, the establishment of an international police force for the general maintenance of peace. It was in connection with this proposition that Sir EDWARD GREY spoke of the probability that two nations undertaking not to go to war with each other would join in defending each other against attack. Obviously, such an arrangement would work far better if it included more than two Powers. If proposed between the United States and Great Britain, it would meet much resistance in both countries, and especially in our own, since the advantages would seem to be much greater for Great Britain. But the mere fact that the House of Commons, after a long debate, and with the express approval of the Government, should pass the resolution referred to is of great significance.

It is to be noted with gratification that the British Minister for Foreign Affairs was able to speak in the most encouraging fashion of the temper of the German Government. "The people," he said, "would be astonished if they could know how easy it has been at any time within the last three years to discuss differences with Germany in a frank spirit." This, of itself, and still more in connection with the German Chancellor's declaration in favor of a frank and sincere exchange of views for the purpose of avoiding if possible a rivalry of armaments, points in the direction of hope. Should the signs which we have outlined prove real and a practical plan for lessening the peril of war and the unconscionable burdens of preparation for war, Mr. TAFT'S agency in the great work, already so cordially acknowledged by Sir EDWARD GREY, would be an honor to himself and to his country.

THE CAMORRA JURORS.

Citizenship is undergoing a severe test at Viterbo, Italy. Theoretically, the standard of good citizenship is about the same all over the world. Everybody believes that civic duties should be performed without flinching, and at any sacrifice of personal comfort and gain. Nevertheless, in Viterbo, doubtless, as in Madison and Brattleboro, (not vainly to drag in New York,) there are citizens who contrive to shirk jury duty as there are others who frequently manage to avoid some of their share of taxation. But in Viterbo citizens are shirking jury duty for no ordinary reason.

The eyes of the world are on the jury box in that old church transformed into a court. Eight men sat there yesterday when the court adjourned, and it is hoped that the remaining four will be obtained to-day. But the indisposition of Viterbo citizens to sit on that jury is general, and it is not attributed by anybody to disregard of civic duty. The jurymen in the trial of the Camorrists already know much about the evil power of the Camorra, the mysterious facility with which many who have opposed it have been put out of the way, and they expect to hear much more blood-curdling evidence to the same effect as the trial proceeds. Each of the jurors will feel himself a marked man. Thirty-four pairs of eyes will watch him from the prisoners' cage. The tradition of the Camorra is that those eyes once balefully fixed on an enemy, his doom is sealed. More than ordinary self-sacrifice is required of the Camorra trial jurors, and there is danger of a miscarriage of justice for this reason.

"FOLLOWING IN FATHER'S FOOTSTEPS."

The development of hydraulic and electric power is now in an early stage comparable to the development of transportation by steam and railways a generation or two ago. And it is to be remarked that the methods of financial promotion are strikingly similar to those which were so successful in the times of our fathers and grandfathers, and which are the subject of such beated protest and official prosecution in our own times. For example, we have received the prospectus of an enterprise for the development of a Mississippi River water power about which we have no information except that which appears in the document itself. Incidentally it may be remarked that the promoters are respectable and successful. The enterprise could hardly hope for better backers, and if they cannot sell these securities it is doubtful that anybody can. These respectable and responsible financiers offer a $1,000 bond for $875, and throw in two shares of common stock. This is the heinous capitalization of the future, the infamous watering of stock, which so many friends of the people assure us is betrayal of public interests. It was in just this way that the country got its railways, and may or may not get its hydro-electric works.

The terms of the prospectus sufficiently indicate that the outlook is rather doubtful. The biggest and blackest figures do indeed set out earnings of $890,000 above dividends on the preferred, and this from the sale of less than the power hoped to be produced. But the terms of subscription set out above sufficiently indicate that there are "outs" about the business which it is not the function of the promoters to emphasize. The estimates may not be realized, the costs may be exceeded, there may be difficulty about selling the power if it is produced as reckoned. In short, it is a business risk, and the money is asked for on business terms—a bond for most of the cash, and stock which is easily and cheaply printed for the profits which are the bait for the speculative investor.

What's the harm? Who would suffer if the shares should pay 10 per cent., or 20 per cent.? The printing of the shares gives no power to levy tax or blackmail on the community. If there are any profits they can come only from the sale of power at prices which must be remunerative to the buyers, or they will not buy. Would it be good public policy to prevent these profits at the cost of preventing the public from benefiting by the purchase of the power? If the temper of the present time had prevailed when the railways were built it is sure that we would have had fewer railways. That would have been a calamity, even if great fortunes have been made in the railway business, and although scandals have been associated with one phase or another of the business. In like manner we are persuaded that it more concerns the public to have the opportunity to buy this power, which has gone to waste since the creation of the world to this day, than that it should exercise its ability to prevent the making of fortunes by the sale of the power. The fortunes are a mere incident. The important thing is the creation and use of the power.

It is pettifogging to say that the power perhaps might be produced with smaller profits. It does not seem so sure to those who know most about it, and who know very well why they offer such attractive terms. No railway can now offer equal inducements for capital. The Inter-State Commerce Commission has named its limit for dividends, and declared that earnings in excess should be applied to the reduction of rates. Apparently it thinks that we are a made country, and have railways enough. The railway business is now so well established that money ought to flow into the old companies for a shade above mere mortgage interest. Whoever wants a higher return, or any speculative profit, must take something like this power proposition. The terms denote it a speculative proposition, and whoever takes the risk has fair notice that perhaps he is parting with the money which he places at the service of the community on those terms. If hereafter his profits should look large, would it be fair to treat him as railway shareholders now are treated?

PASSPORTS TO CANADA.

Surely it is a natural thing for gentlemen from Chicago to want to go anywhere out of Chicago. But if they want to get into Canada they ought to put $50 apiece into their pockets. Of course, that is no trouble for anybody from Chicago, but the omission to do so recently caused a regrettable incident at Niagara Falls. Something in the appearance of the gentlemen from Chicago caused the officials charged with the duty of protecting the Dominion against undesirable immigrants to ask them why they wanted to go to Toronto. They said that they wanted to see a man, and were told that they might do so if they could show $50. Not being able to do so they were turned back, in some embarrassment, as they had not provided funds for their return, and their tickets read in the other direction.

Experienced tourists know that greenbacks are necessary passports to Canada, but hitherto they have been asked from general travelers by others than officials. Fifty dollars is about the price of a five-pound black bass, and "from $100" is legal tender for a moose. The higher the range of values the less the indignity of being sized up for a cheap guy by the ingenuous children of the woods and paddle. Those who have been there say that it is easier to show the price on entering Canada than returning from it. But that is aside from the main point, which is that no gentlemen from New York have been unable to enter Canada because they could not show $50. If Chicago rises to the occasion Ottawa may hear language better worth hearing than the naval debates in the Dominion Parliament, and Chicago could not ask for a better license to go as far as she likes.

LAYING UP TREASURES ABROAD.

In February of last year we were importing more than we were exporting to a total for that month of $5,595,000, a sum not large in itself, but so unusual at that season that there was no precedent for any adverse balance in that month for half a generation. This year we have an excess of exports of $54,230,183, a change of the currents of trade in a single month of over sixty millions of dollars. And this remarkable improvement concurs with a credit abroad on account of securities sold which has been estimated at from fifty millions of dollars upward. The items for February are not at hand, but it is known from the previous figures that cotton is the leading factor in the increase of our exports for eight months from $187,983,250 to $418,145,155 this year. But in the aggregate the growth of the non-agricultural exports exceeds the agricultural. Although our imports are smaller they remain at a full volume, and the improvement of our balance is due to a symmetrical growth of our exports, with especial encouragement where it is most needed, that is in our manufactures.

Even more stimulating than the figures is the fact that they are the result of normal trade considerations. Last year's figures were disquieting because they were so abnormal that they indicated something like sacrifice on what we were selling and extravagance and improvidence on what we were buying. This was the best market in the world to sell in and the worst to buy in. We are no longer overbidding in foreign markets, and we are reaching a basis where we are able to sell at the world's prices. And the process is going ahead just as though our men of business had no nerves or any perception that they ought to have. It is a repetition of the conditions in England, where the politicians and pessimists ruin the country while trade proceeds at unprecedented volume. Similarly there are those among us who can tell us forty reasons why we ought to take thought for the morrow, and all the while our merchants are doing an actually good business and laying the basis for even better. We are piling up cash and credits in bank and abroad at a rate which daily is putting a greater momentum behind the desire to do business. For a long time there has been no reason but politics against better times, and there are indications that our business men are cutting themselves loose from the political drawback and resting their activities upon actualities rather than theories and predictions.

SALES OF HYPODERMIC NEEDLES.

It is not pleasant to be told, as Mr. HAMILTON WRIGHT, Federal Opium Commissioner, has told us, that "Uncle Sam is the worst drug fiend in the world," consuming yearly more opium than China or any other nation. The United States uses 500,000 pounds annually in one form and another, a hundredfold more than is prescribed by physicians. Mr. WRIGHT judges that "at least one druggist out of every ten exists by means of profits from the sale of habit-forming drugs, of which, of course, opium and its derivatives are most important."

That is why we fear that Assemblyman BOYLAN'S bill, No. 983, to amend the Public Health law with respect to the sale of hypodermic syringes and needles, will not pass. It provides that none of these instruments for the injection of opiates shall be disposed of at retail without the written order of a duly licensed physician or veterinarian, and that each sale shall be registered with the name and address of the buyer. We hope that the bill will survive the powerful but secret opposition that it will meet in the Legislature.

We invite the attention of Chairman GEORGE W. PERKINS of the Inter-State Palisades Park Commission to the letter, printed elsewhere, from Mr. S. WOOD MCCLAVE, a member of the original Palisades Commission, which worked nobly and effectually for the acquirement of the Inter-State Park. Mr. MCCLAVE complains that his letter of inquiry to the Secretary of the present Commission has for nearly a year remained unanswered. The question it contains is pertinent and of public moment. It merits a courteous reply.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Barnard's Junior Ball.

The young women at Barnard College are discussing the late hours devoted to the recent college function known as the Junior Ball. One of the young women protests that the programme of a reception on the evening of the ball, followed by dancing from the hours of 11 P. M. to 3 A. M., were not conducive to that repose which should precede a day of scholarly pursuits; in fact, that preparations anticipatory to the event and its consequences were apt to make the students more than a bit forgetful that the sideshows of college life were not the main tent. A recent issue of The Barnard Bulletin contains a rejoinder from another Junior, who testifies that "as regards my personal experience at the ball, all of the girls and their 'men' whom I met, especially during the second half, regretted that we could not dance until 4 instead of 3!"

This, of course, is a matter quite within the control of the Faculty of Barnard. It is our impression that at young women's colleges generally such elaborate and prolonged "functions" are not permitted. At Wellesley, which, despite the rather silly press dispatches that have recently appeared about that institution, is an earnest and well-conducted college of young women, balls are not permitted, and such inter-class hops and dances as the Faculty allows are over before 10 o'clock, the curfew hour in the dormitories. But it is urged that Barnard has many students who live at a distance from the college halls; that to begin a Junior Ball before 9 o'clock would give them little time after the close of college exercises to go home, dine, dress, and return. The ball might be omitted or made simpler. Surely, a subordination of the social activities of the college to its purpose of educating the young women were fitting. They need not spend whole nights in merriment. But we are open to conviction on this important matter, and we would receive suggestions pro and con with judicial gravity.

"Buffalo Bill" Would Be Senator.

Col. WILLIAM F. CODY, known the world around as one of the pathfinders of the wild West, has announced his candidacy for election as the first United States Senator from Arizona. In the days of his prime such an announcement by a man who had won Col. CODY'S fame as an Indian fighter would not surprise anybody. We have a rather long list of Presidents and Senators whose prowess in the wars of the Revolution and of 1812, with Mexico, and with the Indian tribes won them esteem in the eyes of the Nation and the rewards of high political office. But, after the Spanish war, Admiral DEWEY'S announcement of Presidential aspirations was greeted with curious reserve. In fact, it served to blight his great and deserved popularity.

War and the camp are no longer considered—even in Arizona—training schools for statesmen. The change in sentiment has come about with the abolishment of the spoils system. Offices are awarded more for merit and skill in the application of governmental principles. They go to eminent lawyers like ex-Gov. HUGHES, or to professors of history and political economy like WOODROW WILSON. These specialists understand the intricacies of politics and its complex and deep-seated abuses. Col. CODY'S training as an Indian scout and plainsman prepared him, when the aboriginal phases of Western life were past, to gather their relics together into a lively traveling museum, faithfully presenting the picturesque customs and manners of the wild West. He knows nothing of the problems of ballot reform, control of public utilities, conservation of natural resurces—indeed, a chief part of his life was given up to destroying our resources—and the reform of the great municipalities which, linked together by railroads, have sprung up in the places of the rude camps of shacks, tents, and prairie wagons along the Western trails.

Saratoga to be a Spa.

With the decision by the Federal Supreme Court that the Saratoga Springs reservation law is constitutional the pumping of the waters from the famous springs for the purpose of extracting carbonic acid gas for commercial purposes will cease. The fine medicinal springs within the village should now regain their pristine strength and vigor, and the plans to convert Saratoga into a great American health resort, which it should be, will progress under the patronage of the State.

The gas-pumping companies have, by every device, protracted this litigation, in the hope that their properties would be condemned under the State law at inflated valuations. The Supreme Court's decision punctures the natural gas bubble. The act authorizing the selection of the lands in the town of Saratoga Springs for a State reservation appropriated $600,000 and prohibited the further sale of the natural gas, which forced the waters through the strata of deposits that impregnated them with medicinal salts. Chairman GEORGE FOSTER PEABODY, who succeeded the late SPENCER TRASK, predicted last month that "if the pumping and selling of gas is finally adjudicated to be an illegal business, then the values of the gas-pumping companies are of necessity vastly less than the estimates placed upon them by their owners." Of course, the legal value of the springs that are about to be rejuvenated will also be affected by this decision. Their owners and the village of Saratoga Springs have suffered long by their impairment.

Safety for Railway Passengers.

The fact that it is safer to travel on passenger-carrying trains than to walk afoot along urban streets or to move about one's own home has impressed itself upon the calculations of insurance actuaries, but not upon the imagination of the public. The spectacular nature of such railway wrecks as occur distorts the public imagination. It is an excellent thing, therefore, that railways should from time to time publish the Government accident statistics, as the Pennsylvania has just done. Upon the Pennsylvania's main road and its subsidiary lines east of Pittsburg and Erie not a single passenger out of 371,858,277 carried was killed during 1908, 1909, and 1910. These lines carried last year over 14,000,000 more passengers than in 1909. Yet those injured in train accidents numbered only eighty-four, exactly one-half the number of injured passengers during 1909. On the Pennsylvania Railroad proper, with its ten and a half millions more of passengers in 1910 than in 1909, no collisions occurred, and upon it and its subsidiary lines the derailments were reduced by fourteen, 187 of the 203 being derailments of freight-carrying trains.

The case of the Pennsylvania Railroad is not unique. The Government records of 1909 show that, of the 368 companies reporting to the Inter-State Commerce Commission, no less than 347, operating 159,657 miles of road and carrying over half a billion passengers, went through that year "without a single fatality to a passengers or a train accident."

THE "RIPPER" BILL.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The tickets of admission to the mass meeting at Cooper Union, March 13, bore across their faces in bold capitals: "Save the Courts for the People."

It was a call for a mass meeting to protest against the bill that would substitute the election of Judges for their appointment. I was not surprised to see that an anti-suffragist presided, and that many anti-suffragists were on the platform, but I cannot understand how a learned gentleman who spoke could possibly work in an argument for woman suffrage in the course of his speech. Nor can I understand how one of the leaders of the suffrage movement could appear for a cause which upholds the so-called "indirect" method of woman's influence rather than the so-called "direct" method of voting. How can these leaders square the apparent contradiction that the courts will be lost to the people if they vote for the Judges, but that everything is lost to women if they do not vote for everything else? When the suffrage leader claimed that for men to elect Judges would affect disastrously the weakest and most unprotected class, she certainly paid no compliment to that wonderful power of the ballot which is supposed to be "the one weapon in the hands of the unprotected classes."

How could a suffragist listen calmly to one of the speakers say, (amid great applause;) "They say bring the courts back to the people; it means bring the courts back to the bamboozlers of the people."

What! is it not treason to suggest that a voter, a real, responsible, powerful voter can be bamboozled? I thought it was only the poor, defenseless women would could be bamboozled because they have no vote!

The whole admirable protest against the Ripper bill was right in line with the most advanced thought of the anti-suffragists, who believe in purifying politics by keeping some things entirely out of politics. They do not believe that the way to shake the grip of politicians on society is to plunge every activity of society into the sphere of politics. They believe that women can be an influence for good if they are not dragged into the morass of partisanship. Strange spectacle that, of suffrage leaders trying to purify the courts by the methods that in their minds have stultified women. Keep both Judges and women, say I (and every anti will shout Amen!) away from politics.

ANNIE NATHAN MEYER.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

When a deer suddenly comes in sight and we shoot at him, it is often impossible to tell by looking at his head if he has been hit or not. It is a scare head, anyway.

The only way to tell if the deer has been hit is by looking at his tail.

Please look at the tail which I am adding to the scarehead in this morning's TIMES relative to Diaz.

Undoubtedly.

"May this disease terminate fatally at any time?"

Yes.

"May a man with sclerosis develop a critical condition without the least warning?"

Certainly.

"May suddenly increased activity of an old man accentuate the disease?"

That depends much upon his temperament.

Here comes my tail to go with the scarehead.

"Does everybody have arterial sclerosis?"

"Yes; if he lives long enough."

It is a very short tail, but it indicates whether or not President Diaz has been hit.

Dr. Clapp on Children's Teeth.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I noted your editorial comment of last Saturday regarding the Marion School Dental Squad. The reports in The Dental Digest show that the average proficiency of the pupils who remain faithful to the teachings of the class was increased 37 per cent., while in certain cases the individual increase ran to 200 per cent.

There is also a special report of one case where the removal of the impacted teeth resulted in the eyes, which had been crossed, straightening, in the relief of nervous tension on the part of the child, and in a marked improvement in intelligence.

I want to compliment you on the broad-minded stand which your paper has taken in this work, and to assure you that it seems likely that this particular line of effort will be of great importance to the children and the future adults of the country. In Boston a single charitable enterprise of this sort has recently been endowed to the extent of over a million dollars.

A Hybrid Coin.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The wording on Philippine coins issued by the United States Government is rather curious. On one coin, which in size resembles somewhat our twenty-five-cent piece or quarter, is stamped "Twenty centavos," "Filipinas," and on the reverse side "United States of America." What I cannot understand is, why the "twenty," or why the "centavos" and "Filipinas"? I believe that if it were correct it should be either totally Spanish or totally English—maybe the coiner could only express "twenty" orally and couldn't write it.

PLAYGROUND FEDERATION.

City Societies Join in a Movement to Unify Their Work.

Representatives of associations interested in the promotion of the recreations of the city met yesterday afternoon in the home of Eugene A. Philbin, President of the Parks and Playgrounds Association, 63 West Fifty-second Street, to consider the formation of a federation to organize public efforts in this direction. Among the 150 persons present were representatives of such societies as the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, Playground Association of America, City Club, Women's Municipal League, Municipal Art Society, Public Education Association, Public Schools Athletic League, Neighborhood Workers' Association, Committee on Amusements and Vacation Resources of Working Girls, New York Child Welfare Committee, St. George's Parish, Charity Organization Society, and Russell Sage Foundation.

Park Commissioners Stover and Higgins, Samuel Parsons, landscape architect to the Park Board; Alderman Alexander S. Drescher, Chairman of the Aldermen's Park Committee, and Howard Bradstreet, former Supervisor of Playgrounds, were also present. Mr. Philbin presided.

On motion of ex-Magistrate Ommen it was resolved that a federation of associations interested in recreation be formed, and the Chairman was instructed to nominate a committee to draw up a constitution. It was decided to give the widest possible meaning to the word recreation, to take in dance halls and moving-picture shows as well as outdoor amusements, and committees will be appointed to look after them from the point of view of health and morality.

Mr. Philbin said it was planned for the new federation to act as a clearing house for information gathered by societies working for the same general object, to point out wherein they were deficient, and to suggest matters to be taken up.

CLEVELAND FUND $96,990.

Association Needs Only $3,010 More to Complete Monument.

The Cleveland Memorial Association received $86 yesterday for the memorial fund. Up to last night $96,990 had been received altogether. Only $100,000 is desired to complete the monument to the late President. The association hopes that the remaining $3,010 may be received by next Saturday, March 18, the seventy-fourth anniversary of Mr. Cleveland's birthday.

THE PALISADES ROUTE.

Why Not Run It Through New York's Strip of the Park?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

My attention has been called to the article on the Palisades Park in THE TIMES of March 1, referring particularly to the intention of the Commissioners to turn the road from the river at the southerly line of Mrs. Lawrence's property, and, I believe, not to continue the park through the slope of the Palisades in New York State beyond that point, which is practically the State line. As a member of the original commission which brought the two States into an agreement by which each should contribute the face of the cliffs and the slope underneath for a public park, and by opening this undisturbed bit of nature with a roadway from Fort Lee in New Jersey to Piermont Creek, in New York State should make accessible this fourteen miles of cliffs and river to the crowded denizens of our city and its suburbs, I am more than ordinarily interested in seeing this agreement fairly carried out.

While it would be an unpardonable sacrifice of the rights of the people to be deprived of the enjoyment of the three miles of park and roadway from the State line to Piermont Creek in New York, the still more serious question is involved in the breach of faith on the part of the State of New York in not carrying out her part of the agreement. This is embodied in the act of the Legislature creating the present Palisades Commission, and giving it authority to acquire the land in New York from the State line to Piermont Creek, and to build a road through it.

With identically the same authority granted to the Commissioners by each State, they have taken all of the eleven miles lying in New Jersey. As I have been officially informed by their Secretary, the road is not to be continued through the territory underneath the cliffs in New York. Presumably the park itself is to go no further.

I append hereto a copy of the letter of inquiry which I sent to Mr. J. Du Pratt White, Secretary, on April 20, 1910, which has not up to the present time been answered.

As the continuance of the park in New York as well as in New Jersey is of considerable public interest, perhaps THE TIMES may elicit a reply and obtain the desired information as to what is the intention of the Commissioners, which they certainly are not disposed to give to a private individual.

S. WOOD MCCLAVE,
Member New Jersey Palisades Commission of 1899.

New York, March 13, 1911.

Sir: I have before me the official map of the Palisades Commission, the original of which was sent by the Governor in a message to the Legislature, showing the proposed Hudson-Fulton Boulevard running at the foot of the Palisades along the river through the Inter-State Park from Fort Lee to Piermont Creek, as was intended in the original act of 1900. I have also your official statement that it is not the intention to so run the boulevard, but to turn it away from the river at or about the State line, and not to continue it through the Palisades slope in the State of New York.

This statement of yours has been confirmed by a report from the office of your engineer, to whom you referred me in your letter of Feb. 19.

Will you kindly inform me which is to be the way the road is to run? A question of such public interest should not be permitted to remain in doubt. Very truly yours,

S. WOOD MCCLAVE.

Art Objects "Loaned."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

At last! In your "Topics of the Times" today you differentiate between "loan" and "lend." It is curious that in catalogues, and even in the writings of art critics, pictures are always loaned and not lent. And they should know better. Why, even gridirons are lent! Lever's Irishman says: "Will yez lend me the loan of a gridiron?"

For the first exhibition of women's portraits in New York the catalogue was made by William A. Coffin and myself, but chiefly myself. All the pictures were "kindly lent" by their owners, and it made people very cross—you have no idea how cross. They said with a certain aggrieved scorn that "lent" was English, to which I replied with becoming humility, "That is why it is in the catalogue."

OUR WEST INDIAN TRADE THREATENED

Proposed Reciprocity Between Canada and British Islands May Cut Into It.

RICH LOAF ALREADY CUT

By Withdrawal of McKinley Plan That Lowered Sugar Duties in Return for Preferences on American Goods.

BARBADOS, B. W. I., March 5.

While the question of reciprocity in trade or, more carfully stated, in reductions in customs duties between the big Republic in the north and her young but virile cousin further north flying the British flag, is attracting a large share of the attention of the civilized world and fast becoming an international one, a smaller but very important point to some interests is looming up in the effect on existing trade between the United States and the British West Indies, as it stands to be affected by the scheme of mutual prefepence between Canada and the islands recommended by the West Indo-Canadian Commission, which recently reported.

Reciprocity under the McKinley tariff scheme resulted in the development and expansion of trade along several then new lines between the West Indies (British) and the United States. American boots and shoes, which were favored, came into notice, and have in certain grades maintained their position as a leading requirement of those markets, to the exclusion of European-made goods, which would otherwise have been supplying the demand, as had hitherto been the case. Other kinds of manufactured goods could be instanced as having been first introduced under that tariff, which favored American producers while practically penalizing European, and mainly British, suppliers. Some have been able to keep their hold of the markets on even terms as to duties; others have dropped out when deprived of the advantage of a favored position under the import tariffs.

These islands then sent their sugar crops almost entirely to the United States ports, the advantage under reciprocity being sufficiently ample to outweigh any apparent difference in markets elsewhere. The business to merchants, brokers and others in the United States arising from this source was of appreciable value.

With the acquisition of the Philippines and the reciprocal arrangement with Cuba the discontinuance of the favored position for the British West Indies became a political exigency of some importance, and the tariff amenities came to an end.

Canada thereupon some time after offered a preferential tariff to West Indian sugars and sugar products, which, while at first very disappointing to West Indian producers, has had the effect of making that country the market for a very large proportion of these sugar crops. Some New York mercantile houses have opened branches in Montreal and Halifax, presumably to retain their hold on the business which had been theirs when these crops were sold in the United States.

The whole proposition of reciprocity or preferential arrangements between Canada and the British West Indies, embracing as it must a very large proportion of the items now bought in the United States, is of some considerable importance to houses who have practically confined their operations to the commission business with these islands, making very comfortable earnings therefrom. Already one big item, in fact the chief item, in exports, wheaten flour, is being very much affected by Canadian competition. Thirty years ago there was none going direct to the islands; ten years ago it was only commencing; to-day a substantial proportion of the flour going into the West Indies is Canadian.

The shipment of flour and other wheat products has been further competed for within the past twelve months by the Argentines; large steamers going up to New York, almost empty, have been giving low freights to experimental shipments of flour, bran, pollard, &c., to Barbados, all of which have found a market. Such parcels going in for sale "on shippers' account" are almost invariably sold to the better advantage of the local traders than are ordered cargoes, as go from the north, and will undoubtedly lead to a share of the trade going in this direction, thus estabishing a regular business.

There are only two important items of export to the islands which do not stand to be affected by possible reciprocal arrangements on duties between them and Canada, viz., pitch pine lumber and petroleum products; neither of these need much caring for, they stand in such a position as to take care of themselves. There is, however, a long list of other items, representing a very respectable capital value and appreciable profit or commission to the middle man, which would be affected and mean loss of business to United States citizens if no active steps be taken to grapple with the situation.

The operation of the preference on sugars in making the amount of the preferential reduction of duty mainly a profit for the pocket of the Canadian sugar refiner and not for the West Indian grower has not created a feeling of liking for the Canadian as a business man, nor for Canadian methods; and the recommendations for further preferential relations have fallen flat in some cases, and except at Demerara have been received in a very lukewarm manner. Elsewhere the Imperial and Colonial Governments, or a strong section of officials on both sides, appear to have taken up the subject of West Indo-Canadian trade relations on preference lines very strongly and may carry their views; the latest phase being a suggestion from the English Colonial office (on lines of the commission's report) that an appointment be made of a representative to take charge of the interests of West Indian traders to reside in the Dominion and co-ordinate the wishes and needs of the several islands so as to be embraced in a uniform arrangement between the Dominion Government on the one side and the several island governments on the other.

The Barbados House of Assembly has already reported against such as an unnecessary expense on unrequired work, practically. If the right man were secured for the position of representative or Commissioner with the very strong influences on the other side, without doubt the preferential arrangement would become an accomplished fact. The British Colonial Office, however, does not show a vast amount of business ability in its methods, as witness the present fiasco over the mail contract, and it would occasion no surprise to see an appointment of one absolutely innocent of all knowledge of the history, conditions and requirements in the circumstances, whose wisest course would be to accept a decent retainer from an enterprising New York firm to report adversely and thereafter pose in a comfortable downtown office as manager, or other figurehead, at a good salary.

The position is one, however, fraught with weighty consequences to United States trade and citizens, and while politicians thrash out the pros and cons of the general question of reciprocity as between the States and the Dominion, it would be well for those interested in business with the British West Indies to consider how they stand to be affected individually, should reciprocity in tariffs become a settled matter between the Islands and Canada. It would mean a further reduction in the slice of an already cut upon loaf to the West Indian commission merchant and many others in the United States.

'SUSANNA'S SECRET' SUNG FOR FIRST TIME

A VERY CHARMING COMEDY

The Chicago Opera Company presented for the first time in America a new opera of a light genre at its performance last evening in the Metropolitan Opera House —Ermanno Wolf Ferrari's "Secret of Susanne." This little "intermezzo," as the composer has called it, served as a "curtain raiser," in the theatrical slang, for Massenét's "Le Jongleur de Notre Dame," which formed the main portion of the evening's entertainment.

"The Secret of Suzanne," which was first produced in Munich in 1909, is little more than a farce, set to music. It is in one act, and the original of it is to be found in French. In more than the descriptive title of "intermezzo," which the composer has given it, this mirthful little piece suggests an earlier period in Italian opera, that of the development of the opera buffa; long before the young Italian school came to the fore, with its burden of realistic tragedy, and its music of sultry passion. Wolf Ferrari has as little as possible in common with the ruling spirits of Italian dramatic music of the present time. He looks rather backward to a different sort of ideal. And yet his act is modern in its nature and essence, is full of modern resource, and of modern expression. It has freshness and spirit, and, most of all, it is in a true comic vein.

Nothing could be slighter than the theme of "The Secret of Suzanne." Count Gil and Countess Suzanne are newly married. Suzanne is a devotee of the cigarette; and the jealous Gil, becoming aware of the fragrance of cigarete smoke in the house, attributes it to the presence of a lover of his wife. His wife imagines his perturbation to be due to his hatred of tobacco; and her excuses for what she regards as a most venial sin—which, as she doesn't name it, he still considers to be her harboring of a rival to his affections—astonish and enrage him to a fury. He tracks the unknown disturber of his domestic peace by the odor of the tobacco smoke, believing himself to be hot upon the trail, till suddenly the secret is disclosed. The Count has not the least objection to cigarette smoking, and the restoration of peace in the family is instantaneous and accompanied by the burning of tobacco by the couple and their servant, Sante, who has taken part in the action of this drama but has had nothing to sing or to say.

Wolf Ferrari's music is charmingly melodious, wholly appropriate to the theme, accompanying and illustrating the progress of the action and the changing gusts of emotion, amorous and otherwise, that govern it. He has a style and expression of his own, an individual utterance. His music flows spontaneously, and he is not afraid of writing tunes and not unable to do so. The love duet of the married couple and the song of Susanna, when she makes a second attempt at solitary enjoyment of her cigarette, are conspicuous examples of it. The overture is a brilliant and fluent composition, foreshadowing the comic spirit of the work. The orchestration is everywhere delightfully clear and transparent, delicately yet richly colored, not without certain realistic touches. The music throughout shows the hand of one sure of his effects and abundantly supplied with the resources to achieve them. It is a pleasure to think that there is in Italy, or anywhere, a composer who has the originality and individuality to write music in this manner. The little opera gave obvious pleasure and was much applauded.

It is not easy to perform. It requires rather a lighter touch and a more positive comic power than are at the command of either Mr. Sammarco or Miss Carolina White, who respectively took the parts of Count Gil and Countess Susanna, excellent artists, though they both are. Miss White, who has gained success in some of the Chicago performances of the company, notably of "Il Fanciulla del West," took the situation a little too seriously. She shows some lack of experience in this genre, at least. Her vôice is of pleasing and vibrant quality; some of the unsteadiness it showed in certain passages may well have been due to nervousness at her first appearance in this house. Mr. Sammarco's singing was, of course, admirable; but a little more vivacity and humor would have befitted the part. Mr. Daddi, with nothing to sing, was characteristic as Sante. Mr. Campanini's share in the performance was most admirable. The orchestra played with beautiful finish, lightness, and elasticity.

Massenet's "Le Jongleur de Notre Dame" was given for the first time at the Metropolitan Opera House—an excellent performance of one of the most popular works of Mr. Hammerstein's repertory. Miss Garden was seen and heard in the part of the little juggler, that Massenet fitted for her, and of which she makes a pathetic and appealing figure, though somewhat tinged with feminine qualities that do not belong to it. Messrs. Renaud, Dufranne, Huberdeau, and Crabbe gave familiar impersonations of the inmates of the monastery; to whom were added Mr. Warnery, as the Poet Monk and Mr. Nicolay as the Sculptor Monk.

NEW SUFFRAGE COMEDY.

"Two Women" to be Presented for Party's Benefit on March 28.

Edith Wynne Matthison of The New Theatre will play the principal rôle in the new suffrage comedy of Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman, "Two Women," which will be one of the features of the benefit for the Woman's Suffrage Party at the Broadway Theatre on March 28. Olive Oliver will also have an important rôle in the play, which will be staged by Mrs. Beatrice Forbes-Robertson Hale.

The Committee on Arrangements, Mrs. Ruth Litt, Mrs. Edwin Arden, and Mrs. Hale announce that Mme. Lillian Nordica, who is an ardent suffragist, will be heard in selections from grand opera. Leading society women will appear in the "Pageant of Great Women," in which the speaking parts will be played by prominent actresses. Percy Haswell will be seen in a Shakespearean protean playlet, and Mrs. Alice Fisher Harcourt and company will present "Sunset Limited," a one-act play.

Miss Clements to Wed O. W. Knauth.

The engagement has been announced to their intimate friends of Miss Anna D. Clements, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Clements, to Oswald W. Knauth, second son of Mrs. Percival Knauth and the late Percival Knauth, the banker.

Miss Clements was educated abroad, and on the return last Autumn of her family to New York made her début at a reception followed by dancing at the Colony Club, but shortly afterward her young brother died after only a few days' illness and Miss Clements withdrew from the season's gayeties. Mr. Clements is a well-known artist.

Mr. Knauth is the second son of Mrs. Knauth, who before her marriage was Miss Mary I. Whitman. He was graduated from Harvard in 1909, as was his elder brother, Theodor W. Knauth. His younger brother, Arnold W. Knauth, is now a student at Harvard.

No date has yet been set for the wedding.

SOCIAL NOTES.

Edward R. Bacon of 247 Fifth Avenue, accompanied by his brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. W. Rathbone Bacon of Netherdale House, Turriff, Scotland, will arrive here from Europe to-morrow on the Lusitania.

Miss Florence Wyeth will sail on the Adriatic on Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Orr, 3d, and will spend the Summer visiting in England.

Mr and Mrs. Arthur Ryle are leaving to-day for Bermuda.

Senator and Mrs. Elihu Root are in town, and will spend the week-end at the Hotel Gotham.

Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan has returned to town after spending part of the Winter in Brunswick, Ga.

Mrs. Ida Husted Harper, who gave an informal talk yesterday at the residence of Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish on public questions, will speak to-day at Princeton, N. J., before the Present Day Club, of which Mrs. Grover Cleveland, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, and other well-known women are members.

Frank Buck of San Francisco, whose marriage to Miss Zayda Zabriskie is set for April 18, will have a number of his Harvard Law School classmates as his ushers and best man. They will include Daniel Lamont of San Francisco as best man, and Edward Clarkson Harris of Georgia, Glenn Dee Whisler of Boston, Raymond Gauche, Charles Henry Weerland, and George Keeler Bainbridge of New York.

A series of lectures with illustrative readings will be given by Evelyn Nicholas Kerr at 40 West Seventy-fifth Street at 11 o'clock on Thursdays during Lent, beginning to-morrow. The subjects are The Vision and the Dream, the Sagas of Selma Legerlof, and Sidney Lanier, the poet musician.

OGDEN MILLS REID WEDS.

Son of Ambassador Whitelaw Reid Married to Miss Helen M. Rogers.

Special to The New York Times.

RACINE, Wis., March 14.—One of the most notable events in this city of recent years was the wedding of Miss Helen Miles Rogers, daughter of Mrs. Benjamin Talbot Rogers, and Ogden Mills Reid, son of Ambassador and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid of New York City, which was celebrated at St. Johnis Chapel, Racine College, to-day at noon. The Rev. Dr. D. Talbot Rogers of Fond Du Lac, a brother of the bride, performed the ceremony, using the Episcopal service. The bride was led to the altar by her brother, J. Carson Rogers of Kenosha. The wedding was simple, only relatives and a few intimate friends being present. No wedding reception was held, because of the Lenten season.

Mr. and Mrs. Reid received many magnificent gifts, among which was a large silver piece inscribed "Ogden Reid," from the men who worked with him on The New York Tribune.

After the ceremony the bridal party and out of town guests left for Chicago on a special train en route to New York, except Mr. and Mrs. Reid, who go to Mexico for a six weeks' wedding trip.

Among the prominent out of town guests were Whitelaw Reid, Mrs. Reid, Hon. and Mrs. John Ward of London, England, the latter a sister of the bridegroom; Ogden Mills of New York, Miss Jennie Crocker of San Francisco, B. Talbot Rogers, D. C. and Mrs. Rogers of Fond Du Lac, Wis.; Mrs. Rush Winslow, sister of the bride, and Miss Winslow of Appleton, and Mrs. Frazier Bonnie of Louisville, Ky.

The bride, who is twenty-two years old, is a member of one of Wisconsin's oldest families. As Mrs. Reid's social secretary she was at one of the big house parties at West Park, where Ambassador and Mrs. Reid had for their guest the late King Edward.

CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Bang Lead Dance of Children and Grandchildren.

The golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Bang of Douglas Manor was celebrated yesterday at the home of their son, Henry J. Bang. At the wedding dinner were present the following children of Mr. and Mrs. Bang: Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Bang, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mager, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Mager, Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Bang, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Tucker, and Mrs. Edith Bang. There were present also these grandchildren: Miss Margie Tucker, Master Henry R. Bang, Miss Lillian E. Bang, and Master W. A. Bang. Mrs. Julia Bang, who was bridesmaid at the wedding fifty years ago, was a guest of honor. The dinner was followed by a reception and dance, which was led by the old couple themselves.

Mr. Bang was born in Bingen on the Rhine 75 years ago, and came to this country as a boy. He established a chain of restaurants on lower Broadway with his father and brothers, and a hotel at Sharon Springs, N. Y. In 1878 he retired from active business. Mrs. Bang, who is 69 years old, was Miss Sophie Roth, the daughter of John Roth, a well-known business man and a power in politics on the lower east side in the fifties and sixties.

Barnard Girls to Give "Jeanne D'Arc."

Shakespeare has been relegated to the background by the students of Barnard College, and instead they will present as their annual undergraduate show Percy MacKaye's version of "Jeanne D'Arc." The students realize what a stupendous undertaking they have assumed, but with Constance von Wahl in the title rôle they are confident that the performance will be successful. De Lancon, Jeanne's lover, will be portrayed by Miss Katherine Gay of the class of 1911, and the young King by Miss Dorothy Cheesman, who has acted the rôle of Phebe in "Quality Street." Miss Stella Block is Chairman of the Committee on Arrangements. There will be four performances, two afternoon and two evening.

In Aid of Hospital for Deformities.

Tickets are now on sale for the entertainment in aid of the Hospital for Deformities and Joint Diseases, which will be held at the New York Theatre on Sunday night, March 19. Among those who have volunteered to appear are Miss Christie MacDonald, Richard Carle, Elsie Janis, and Victor Moore, all of whom will produce a scene from the productions in which they are now appearing; also Laddie Cliff, Ethel Green, Belle Baker, Valeska Suratt, Mary Norman, Terry and Lambert, Pat Rooney, and Marion Bent and Pussey and Rayland. Charles J. Ross will be stage manager. Tickets may be obtained at the office of E. M. Gattle & Co., 2 West Thirty-eighth Street, and at the box office of the New York Theatre.

Their Tenth Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred J. Taupier celebrated their tenth wedding anniversary last night at Delmonico's. Mr. Taupier was appointed manager and Treasurer of Delmonico's last September. There were about eighty-five guests present at the supper, which was followed by vaudeville. An immense tin bell was suspended over the table of the host and hostess, and many flowers were received by them.

TISCH—DE VOS.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Tisch of 690 President Street, Brooklyn, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Gertrude Dorothy Tisch, to Milton De Vos of this city, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis De Vos. They will be at home from 3 to 6 Sunday, March 26.

Ocean Travelers.

Lady Allan, W. C. Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Barnum, Mr. and Mrs. Prescott Bigelow, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Brown, Mrs. Reginald W. Clement, Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. J. Johnson, J. G. Lamont, Alexander Young, J. H. McFadden, Mrs. Hester Makessie, Miss Maxine Elliott, David A. Dunlap, Philip Foster, Granville Farquhar, Joseph Drew, Mrs. Talbot R. Chambers, R. C. Campbell, John M. Woods, H. P. Watson, Mrs. James F. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Whiley, Harry Keating, Mrs. White Howard, and Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Cochrane.

Arriving on the Kroonland from Antwerp yesterday were:

Arthur Coates, Paul C. Shoen, Mrs. H. B. Spencer, Miss Ottilie Walter, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Delamater, and Miss Irene Haggin.

"Thais" in dramatic form will probably attract the town. All that portion of it at any rate that likes to give free rein to its emotions that is susceptible to the spell of fine and powerful acting, that likes to take its moral lessons in theatrical guise, or enjoys an impressive story told with a wealth of color in surroundings of great pictorial beauty. For there is something of all these in Mr. Wilstach's version of the play as it was presented at the Criterion last night, watched throughout with prolonged and growing interest, and punctuated at each curtain's fall by the sort of rapturous applause which provides the safety valve of feeling, while giving the joy that players and producers love.

Nor was all this difficult to comprehend. For "Thais" blends at once the very qualities to make a drama and a spectacle. Mr. Wilstach, like the librettists of the opera, found, then, richness of story, of characters, and environment ready to his hand. And he had enough skill to mould them into a play that should have form and substance and be a medium of appeal. That he has not turned out a prose or poetic masterpiece need not give him such very great concern. We have seen poetic masterpieces fail—fail at exactly the points where this dramatic version of the play is likely to succeed. For its texture is at least of the kind which admits the player into partnership in the result, and fortunately in this instance the right kind of players happened to be ready for the work.

It was, in fact, a night of deserved personal triumph for Miss Constance Collier and Tyrone Power, and it is to them that the success of the experiment is in greatest measure due.

Mr. Gaites's production is lavish, it is generally in beautiful taste and harmony, it has been stage managed with admirable skill and feeling. But when all is said and done, without these two splendid players to make the major figures vital the result would have been in doubt.

What promises to make "Thais" further appealing as a general entertainment is the clarity the story gains by its presentation in a familiar tongue, and with only so much music as properly serves to underline the action in important places and give the whole a sort of added atmosphere. Incidental music is so often a hindrance rather than an aid that one would rather do without it. But in this respect excellent judgment has prevailed.

At this late day it is scarcely necessary to go into lengthy details of the familiar tale of the visions of the anchorite, of his quest for a soul, of his transformation of the courtesan to saint, of his own temporary abandonment to the passion he had hitherto assailed, and of his final debt to her. The first act reveals the Theban Desert, stretching far out into the night, the vast plain broken here and there by jutting crags, with twinkling stars illumining the azure pall.

Here and there the poor huts of the hermits, from whence they are presently to come to bear the story of Daniel's vision, which you have previously seen, and to deplore his departure for Alexandria. To contrast with this splendidly sombre picture, the next scene shows the Marble Terrace before Thais's place, peopled and enlivened by the slaves and dancing girls, the young nobles, friends of Nicias, who presently arrives to meet his old friend Daniel, to give him garments in which to encounter Thais, and to make a jest of what he believes to be the hermit's passion.

A sumptuous picture this, full of life and movement and variety, but giving way in the next act to one of even greater richness and solidity in the scene of the Temple of Love in Thais's garden, where the Hermit, first supine, and turned away, is ultimately recalled to resist temptation and to win his spiritual victory for the woman.

There are the means to powerful acting in each of these scenes, which, happily, the principal players avail themselves of to the full extent, so that the progress of events, besides being something of a show of wealth and beauty and of richness in detail, has an absorbing, gripping hold on the emotions. Finally, of course, after the scene of the oasis in the desert, with the faltering Thais led by the dust-stained Daniel, and sinking by the wayside—a really lovely picture—the end in the retreat of the White Sisters, with the impressive incidents of Daniel's half-mad pursuit of Thais, her death, and his emancipation from temptation.

Miss Collier's performance of the title rôle is satisfying alike to eye and ear, a veritable joy in its remarkable plastic grace, and the varied melody of its elocution. If one recalls such a speech as that of "Yesterday" and the apostrope to Venus, it is only because here the opportunities for contrasted vocal expression are compressed, so to speak, into a smaller general compass. But what the actress does with these two speeches she does with the part as a whole, making it a medium for the denotement of temperamental richness, of varying moods and passions. She passes easily and with complete illustion into fitful gusts of anger, or softer plaintive sentiment, coloring each speech and action with variety of utterance and with movement that is grace incarnate. She is a lively picture to look upon in this rôle, and in her case one does not ask for silence lest illustion be destroyed.

The producers have been fortunate, too, in finding an actor of Mr. Tyrone Power's qualities for the rôle of Daniel. His performances of the anchorite is large in outline, heroic and noble in proportions, and highly impressive in its general effect. Mr. Powers's one besetting fault has always been his seeming inability to vary the key of his performance to suit the mood, and here again there are suggestions of this defect. But on the whole, it is an acting achievement of great depths of feeling and could not easily be duplicated.

To the rôle of Nicias, Mr. Arthur Forrest brings the results of long experience, and he is generally well in the successive pictures and the action. His playing is well up to the meaning of the rôle. For the others, the opportunities are too small to call for detailed comment, but in general the demands are agreeably met.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Rimond Diet, the European composer of ballet music, has devoted to Sherry B. Hardy and Jesse L. Lasky the complete score of his new ballet, "Temptation," which will be a part of the opening bill of the Folies Bergere.

Irene Grange, who has been appearing in vaudeville for the last two years, has entered the cast of "The Hen Pecks" at the Broadway Theatre. Last night she sang for the first time the "Wine Maid" song in the last act.

Albert Chevalier, the English character actor, who was here last year with Percy G. Williams in vaudeville, has been engaged by Mr. Williams for a limited engagement in vaudeville, opening at the Colonial Theatre next week.

DREAM PLAY AT THE LYCEUM.

Dr. Martin Barnhelm.....Sheldon Lewis
Lola, his daughter.....Laurette Taylor
John Dorris, her lover.....Shelley Hull
Dr. Paul Grosset.....Wilfred Draycott
Dick Fenway.....Gaston Bell
Mary, of the household.....Alice John
Mrs. Mooney of the East Side.....Mrs. John Findlay
Nellie, her daughter.....Gladys Smith
Ambulance Surgeon.....J. Allenton
Madam Zepia.....Carlotta Doty
William Barnes, U. S. N.....Bernard Thornton
Policeman.....William Carter

In "Lola," a new play by the hitherto prolific melodramatist, Mr. Owen Davis, a struggling doctor is introduced who, after many years' research, has perfected an instrument for bringing the dead to life. John Dorris, his daughter Lola's fiancé, is the first to take exceptions, urging that though the heart might be stimulated to renewed action, the soul would already have passed, so the thought is "horrible" to him. However, when Lola is brought in shortly afterward dead from shock, he is as ready as the others to take advantage of the invention. The girl presumably is saved by the invention, and everybody is consequently happy. But not for long.

By the time the next act has developed you discover that Lola's sweet and gentle disposition has given way to one in which quarrelsomeness and selfishness are dominant; she lies, steals, deceives her father and the poor young man—in short, is guilty of practically every sin on the calendar except murder, which one imagines might also be charged against her, but heart failure happily cuts her life short once again.

Then the doctor awakes. It has all been a dream. And you depart from the theatre in the hope that he will promptly destroy his invention and live healthily and happily ever after.

There is not much to the play that is not entirely obvious from incident to incident, entirely of the factitious sort, and hence creating practically no illusion. The play belongs, in fact, to the class in which green light properly introduced plays almost as important a part as any of the acting. This, by the way, was in several instances considerably more meritorious than the play itself, though why Miss Laurette Taylor, one of the most delightful ingenues, should be called on to portray hysteria and meanness and neurasthenic tendencies during the greater part of any play is something of a mystery. All these things, however, she did very excellently, giving color to her rôle, passing splendidly from its pleasant moods to the more disagreeable ones, and playing the latter with the dominating force and sincerity that commands attention and respect even when the situation is most forced.

Because the extent of her talents were less known, however, the performance was chiefly significant as revealing the very exquisite charm and deftness of playing on the part of Miss Alice Johns, who throughout showed insight, sympathy, and the sense of character, with real touches of a kind of emotion that is very rare. A particularly fine bit of acting was hers at the moment in the first act when the supposedly dead body of Lola is brought into the room.

Shelley Hull and Gaston Bell sketched juvenile rôles very well, and Wilfred Draycott, with a stubbornly English personality and speech, tried his level best, no doubt, to appear of foreign type. As the doctor, Mr. Sheldon Lewis played with staccato utterance in the conventional manner in which such rôles are familiarly projected. Mrs. John Findlay and Gladys Smith are others who deserve a word of recognition.

The performance was to benefit the Lenox Hill Settlement and will be repeated this afternoon.

KNEISELS PLAY NEW WORK.

Give First Performance Here of Frederick Stock's Composition.

Frederick Stock's quartet in C minor, opus 6, received its first New York performance last evening at the hands of the Kneisel Quartet in Mendelssohn Hall. Mr. Stock is, as is well known, the conductor of the Theodore Thomas Orchestra in Chicago, where he succeeded the director from whom the orchestra received its name. He has written a great deal of music, orchestral and otherwise, much of which has been performed in Chicago but little of which has found its way here. This Winter, however, there has been a performance of his symphonic waltz by the Symphony Society.

The quartet is divided into three movements, each bearing a formal German direction. The work is very long, especially the scherzo, and much of it failed to make a deep appeal. It seemed at times as if Mr. Stock would have been more happy if he had been writing for orchestra. There were passages which were singularly muddy and unattractive, and these were linked with other more limpid passages. The work could scarcely be called ultra-modern, and yet conventional would not be the last word to apply to it. The Kneisels played it as well as it could be played.

Afterward there were delicious performances of Schubert's "Trout" quintet, in which the Kneisels were assisted by Carlo Buonamici, pianist, and Max Pfeiffer, double bass, and Grieg's quartet in G minor.

PHILHARMONIC CONCERT.

The concert of the Philharmonic Society given in Carnegie Hall last evening was devoted to Slavic composers, and the names of Svendsen, Tschaikowsky, Sibelius, and Dvorak figured therein. It was doubtless in the Finnish composer, Sibelius, that the interest of the evening centred, because his violin concerto received its second New York performance on this occasion. Mme. Maud Powell, who had performed the work with the Philharmonic Society on Nov. 20, 1903, undertook a similar task last evening, and it was a task because all the programme notes said, from beginning to end it is more or less of a tour de force, without being a mere display piece.

Mme. Powell has made this concerto entirely her own in America, and consequently it is interesting to hear her play it. Last evening she was as successful as she was on the former occasion in bringing out its effect.

Dvorak was represented by his symphony, "From the New World"; Svendsen, by his "Carnival in Paris," and Tschaikowsky, by his symphonic poem, "Francesca da Rimini." Theodore Spiering conducted the orchestra, as Gustav Mahler continues to be indisposed.

HOME FOR AGED SINGERS.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, March 14.—"I want to be useful to humanity, and so I intend on my death to leave enough money for the establishment of a home for elderly singers and actors. I have eight children, and, of course, am planning to leave them comfortably situated so they will not want. But after taking care of them I propose to set aside the remainder of whatever fortune I may have for the establishment of a home for superannuated singers and actors."

This statement was made this afternoon by Mme. Schumann-Heink.

"I would like to see these older artists have a pleasant home in which to spend their declining years with their families, and not separated from them, as is now the case in many instances. The foundation of such a home is one of my fondest wishes and one that can be carried out."

Closes Theatre in Memory of Friend.

Out of respect to the memory of his lifelong friend, ex-Sheriff William J. Dutting, whose funeral will be held this afternoon, Joseph M. Weber has decided to close his theatre for to-day's matinée of "Alma, Where Do You Live?" Mr. Weber and the entire company, many of whom knew Mr. Dutting, will attend the funeral.

ALBERT LEWISOHN DEAD.

Albert Lewisohn, a member of the firm of Lewisohn Brothers, at 11 Broadway, and a son-in-law of the late Leonard Lewisohn, the copper magnate, died yesterday morning in the Red Cross Hospital, at 100th Street and Central Park West.

Mr. Lewisohn was taken to the hospital on Saturday to have a slight facial operation performed. His death was due to blood poisoning. He was 44 years old. He was the son of Samuel and Pauline Jessel Lewishon, and married Lily Lewisohn, one of the late Leonard Lewisohn's daughters. Mrs. Lewisohn was in the South when her husband was taken ill, and was delayed in reaching this city on Sunday night by a slight accident to the train. Besides having married their sister, Mr. Lewisohn was a distant blood relation of Walter and Frederick Lewisohn, who are partners in the Lewisohn firm, of which he was a member.

Members of Walter Lewisohn's family visited Albert Lewisohn at the Red Cross Hospital early yesterday morning, while he was in a serious condition. While returning from the hospital the Walter Lewisohn automobile took fire, and its occupants escaped with difficulty. The automobile, valued at $5,000, was destroyed.

Albert Lewisohn was prominent in financial and charitable circles. He helped to reorganize the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society, in which the late Leonard Lewisohn was closely associated. He was a member of the City Club and the Chamber of Commerce.

William P. Howe, 52 years old, Assistant Treasurer of the Standard Oil Company, was stricken with heart disease while at his desk, at the offices, 26 Broadway, at noon yesterday, and died an hour later. Mr. Howe had been with the Standard Oil Company for thirty years, entering the employ of the company as an office boy. He was also President and a Director of the General Appliance Company and had other financial interests. Mr. Howe, whose home was at 33 East Sixty-fifth Street, had been suffering from heart trouble for some time, and had recently been ordered by his physician to go on a vacation in the hope of regaining his health. He is survived by a widow and one daughter.

Daniel Nason.

Daniel Nason, 53 years old, a lawyer with offices at 55 William Street and former partner of William Travers Jerome, died yesterday at his home, 266 Lexington Avenue, as the result of a stroke of apoplexy he suffered last Thursday. Mr. Nason was born in Kennebunk, Me., and was graduated from Amherst College with the class of 1881. Mr. Nason was President of the Jerome Park Railroad Company, and President and a Director of the Eaton Gold Mining Company.

Noted Checker Player Dead.

SALEM, N. J., March 14.—Thomas B. Pancoast, one of the greatest checker players in the United States, died at Hancock Bridge, this county, to-day. Years ago he played draws with Mathew C. Priest, then champion of the United States, and also defeated James Wylie, the Scotchman, when he was considered champion of the world.

Judge William West.

BELLEFONTAINE, Ohio, March 14.—Judge William West, 80 years old, known as "the blind man eloquent," who lost his sight while a member of the Supreme Court of Ohio, is dead. During his career he was a member of the General Assembly, Attorney General, and candidate for Governor. He nominated Blaine for the Presidency in 1884.

Obituary Notes.

JENNIE JOYCE, once well known as a concert hall singer in this city, died yesterday in the Flower Hospital of pneumonia. She was taken to the hospital on Feb. 28. During the height of her career, while performing at Koster & Bial's, Miss Joyce married Phil Daly, a well-known sport. They were divorced, and then she married George Weeks, who committed suicide after suffering business reversals. Miss Joyce was little heard of after 1890.

Mrs. SARAH ELIZA DUTCHER, widow of Alfred P. Dutcher, for sixty years a merchant in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn, died at her home, 77 Powers Street, that borough, on Saturday from acute nephritis.

JOHN VINCENT WALLS, one of the best-known sporting men in New Jersey, died at his home, 777 Madison Avenue, Paterson, yesterday. "Jack" Walls was said to be worth about $100,000, all of which he made in Paterson. He was born there and lived there all his life. He was successful in speculating in real estate. His mother, two brothers, and four sisters survive him.

MICAJAH WOODS, one of the best known lawyers in Virginia, died in Charlottesville yesterday of the grip, after an illness of a week. He was a distinguished Confederate veteran.

The Rev. ALLAN McDONELL, one of the oldest members of the Jesuit order in this country, died at Woodstock College, near Baltimore, on Monday. He was 85 years old and a native of Prince Edward Island. He had held professorships at Fordham University and St. Francis Xavier College in this city, and was spiritual father at the Jesuit Summer home and school at Keyser Island, Cape.

Col. HENRY WAGNER, U. S. A., retired, is dead at the age of 78 years at his home, 56 West Eighty-fourth Street. He was a native of Germany, but came to this country at the age of 20 years and enlisted in the army. In 1863 he became Second Lieutenant in the Eleventh Infantry Regiment. He was transferred as Captain to the First Cavalry in 1871, became Major in 1890, and Lieutenant Colonel in 1896. In the following year he retired from active service. On April 23, 1904, he received the rank of Colonel for services he had performed in the civil war.

CHARLES R. PHILLIPS, for many years an employe in the Kings County Hall of Records, a veteran of the civil war, and a prominent Kings County Republican, is dead at his home, 255 Bisuben Street, Brooklyn, at the age of 75 years.

JOHN B. GILLETTE, a publisher of county maps and a manufacturer of paper car wheels, died at the age of 83 years at his home in Greendale, Columbia County, on Monday. He was born in Colchester, Conn., but removed to Philadelphia, where in 1850 he set up as a publisher of county maps. In 1879 he organized the American Paper Car Wheel Works, which later consolidated with the Hudson Paper Car Wheel Works at Hudson. He was a former member of the Assembly.

Senor DON EMILIO TERRY Y DORTICOS, one of the largest sugar planters of Cuba, died while on a visit to the Canary Islands last week. He was one of the wealthiest men in Cuba and the proprietor of the Central Limonar sugar mill at Havana.

WALTER H. HAIGHT, formerly an Under Sheriff of Westchester County and a friend of Judge William H. Robertson, Republican leader of Westchester County, died at his home in Mount Kisco on Friday. He was 83 years old.

Marriage and death notices intended for insertion in The New York Times may be telephoned to 1600 Bryant.

BANKS.—At the annual meeting of the Board of Directors of the United States Life Insurance Company in the City of New York held March 14, 1911, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the members of the board record with sorrow the death on the 4th of their annual meeting of David Banks, who was for so long their esteemed and valued associate. Mr. Banks had many splendid qualities. He was a man of indomitable will and tenacity of purpose, a fine example of the successful business man from whom the membership of this board had no doubt a keen incentive to duty and to worthy effort. He was, however, not merely a man of affairs, as the term is generally used, but was also openly interested in educational work, and his name will always be remembered in connection with the New York University, to which he contributed liberally from his private means.

MISSOURI PACIFIC STILL GOULD LINE

George Gould Retains Stock Control, but Retires from Active Management.

WILL NOT CHOOSE PRESIDENT

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 14.—George J. Gould, although consenting to retire from active railroad work, to-day retained control of the Missouri Pacific and the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern, despite forecasts to the contrary. Nine Gould Directors were elected to the Missouri Pacific board at the St. Louis meeting, and ten to the Iron Mountain board, while Kuhn, Loeb & Co., the Rockefeller interests, the Sage interests and Das Deutsche Bank jointly elected only four Directors in the Missouri Pacific and only one in the Iron Mountain.

Three of the Directors of the Missouri Pacific, which is the dominating corporation, will, it is understood, tender their resignations in a few weeks, when the board probably will be made up of Gould representatives and as many representatives of the opposition, with the new President holding the neutral vote.

The understanding between the Goulds and the group headed by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. contemplates that the Goulds shall retain stock control of the property, but that George J. Gould will relinquish active supervision. The Kuhn, Loeb & Co. group will select the new President, who will be acceptable to the Goulds and all parties concerned will have a voice in the management.

Essentially the result of the election is a victory for Miss Helen Gould and Frank Jay Gould, who are represented in the board by R. Lancaster Williams of Baltimore. These members of the family threatened to oppose George Gould if he relinquished control of the railroad, and thereupon George Gould formed a new agreement with Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and their allies.

Through the new agreement Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and their associates obtain sufficient power to assert authority in the actual management of the properties, to supervise the expenditure of money for improvements, and, in general, to safeguard the welfare of those to whom they sell securities. The Goulds, on the other hand, maintain their stock control, and Miss Helen and Frank are represented in the board, as well as George and Edwin Gould.

The new board of the Missouri Pacific comprises George J. Gould, who will be Chairman; Fred T. Gates, representing the Rockefellers; Cornelius Vanderbilt, representing Kuhn, Loeb & Co.; T. E. Jeffery, representing George J. Gould; Paul M. Warburg, representing Kuhn, Loeb & Co.; Edwin Gould, Edgar L. Marston of Blair & Co., a friend of George J. Gould; E. D. Adams, representing Das Deutsche Bank of Berlin; E. B. Pryor, S. F. Pryor, and Charles S. Clarke of St. Louis, representing Miss Helen and Frank Jay Gould, and numerous independent stockholders.

The board of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern consists of George J. Gould, J. J. Slocum, representing the Sage interests; Kingdon Gould, Frank Jay Gould, Edward T. Jeffery, R. M. Gallaway, Howard Gould, B. Nicoll, Jay Gould, C. S. Clarke, and O. L. Garrison, representing the Goulds. E. C. Simmons and B. F. Edwards of St. Louis, although not allied with any group, were put in the board by George J. Gould.

J. J. Slocum, the Sage representative, was dropped from the Missouri Pacific board, and so were O. L. Garrison and W. K. Bixby of St. Louis. C. S. Clarke will resign when the new President is elected, and so may E. B. and S. F. Pryor.

It was announced that several of the Directors were elected temporarily, and will resign when plans now being worked out by George J. Gould and Kuhn, Loeb & Co. are perfected. The Directors will meet in New York and elect officers. The new President has not been chosen.

The Executive Committee probably will consist of George J. Gould, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Fred T. Gates, Edward T. Jeffery, E. D. Adams, Paul M. Warburg, and the President. The Kuhn, Loeb & Co. group expect to dominate the road through the Executive Committee, leaving the stock control with the Goulds.

Mr. Clarke presided at the Missouri Pacific meeting, and Mr. Simmons at the Iron Mountain meeting. Mr. Clarke cast votes by proxy, representing seventy-five per cent. of all the stock.

H. S. Priest and F. N. Judson were present in behalf of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and Mr. Priest voted some proxies. Mr. Priest and Mr. Judson had copies of the slate voted by Clarke.

As several independent voters cast their ballots for Mr. Williams he ran ahead of the ticket. The utmost harmony prevailed, as the antagonistic parties had reached an agreement.

The slate originally devised by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and George J. Gould was not elected. The Kuhn, Loeb & Co. interests feared until Saturday that George J. Gould might abrogate his agreement, and instructed attorneys to prepare injunction papers to stop the election. But they then perceived that he desired to abide by the arrangement and was anxious to preserve harmony, so they made concessions to enable a compromise between George and Frank Gould.

Although the list of Directors chosen at the annual meeting of the Missouri Pacific at St. Louis yesterday differed partially from that upon which the Kuhn, Loeb & Co.-Rockefeller interests agreed with George J. Gould several weeks ago, representatives of the banking interests said that the make-up of the new board was entirely satisfactory to them. The three men directly nominated by them, Paul M. Warburg, Edgar L. Marston, and E. D Adams, have been elected, and C. S. Clarke, it is understood, will yield his place on the board to the new President. Further than this, one or two others of those elected yesterday are expected in banking circles to vote with the new interests on any disputed question, so that the success of the plans which the new interests in the property have outlined is regarded as assured.

FIRST NATIONAL PAYING 40%

Bank Stock Increased to 7% Quarterly and Securities Remains at 3%.

The First National Bank increased its dividend for the quarter 2 per cent. yesterday by announcing a disbursement of 7 per cent. on the bank stock and 3 per cent. on the stock of the First Securities Company, the holding company organized a few years ago to absorb the security holdings of the bank. The last quarterly dividend paid on the bank stock was 5 per cent. With the bank stock paying 7 per cent. a quarter and subsidiaries stock 3 per cent., the two combined are now paying 40 per cent. annually.

WABASH COMMITTEES BUSY.

Not Merged to Reorganize Pittsburg Terminal Road, but Agreed.

The Wallace and Chaplin committees of Wabash-Pittsburg Terminal bondholders announced yesterday that there had been no amalgamation of the two committees, but that they would work together in the formulation of a plan of reorganization.

It is understood that very considerable progress has already been made and that the chances favor an early agreement on the plan for the readjustment of the Wabash-Pittsburg Terminal and the Wheeling & Lake Erie. The two roads

MUST RETURN LETTER BOOK.

Plea It Might Incriminate Fails to Save Wireless Company President.

Christopher Columbus Wilson, indicted President of the United Wireless Telegraph Company, was ordered yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Gerard to return to the Directors of the company its letter copy book. Wilson sought to retain possession of the book on the ground that it contains matter which may incriminate him. The Directors of the company are in contempt of the Federal courts for not producing the book.

Wilson attacked the application by the Directors for a mandamus as insincere. He said it was made to aid the Government in prosecuting him, and that the Directors had no right to the book, which he had paid for and which contained his personal correspondence. These two contentions, Justice Gerard holds, are immaterial.

In respect to Wilson's contention that an order to compel him to give up the book would be an invasion of his constitutional rights, Justice Gerard said that though the courts have been very lenient in interpreting this provision, they have never yet held that a person wrongfully in the possession of the property of another person or corporation may continue his wrongful possession because the restoration of the property to its owner would facilitate his conviction on a criminal charge.

PROFANITY ON THE STAGE.

Aldermen Won't Legislate Against, Saying Public Will Deal with Offense.

The Aldermen discountenanced attempts to prohibit profanity on the stage by law by approving yesterday a report of their Law Committee, in which it was stated that public opinion could safely be trusted to deal with such offenses. The board had before it a proposed ordinance for the creation of a Board of Censors to pass upon all plays and another authorizing the revocation of the license of any theatre in which a play was produced in which "profane or vile language" was used. The committee's report was on the latter ordinance. It said:

> This proposed ordinance was undoubtedly introduced in good faith, as a means of checking a habit of loose speech which has unconsciously grown among a people addicted to the use of slang, and which is typified by those whose writings are portrayed upon the theatrical stage for public amusements. But such parts of speech may not be considered as coming within the definition of profane swearing as being irreverent toward holy things, or in manifest or implied contempt of things held sacred.
>
> Since the handing down of the Third Commandment on Mount Sinai, it has been unlawful to violate the name of God by irreverence, and the deep respect for all things holy is so inculcated in all the peoples of the earth professing a belief in the teachings of the Bible, that any public profanity, particularly on the stage, would be instantly hailed by the weight of public disapproval.

MUST 'SEAL' ICE CREAM CANS.

Dealers Besiege Weights and Measures Bureau to Comply with the Law.

Traffic in West Forty-ninth Street, between Eighth and Ninth Avenues, was practically blocked all day yesterday on account of the rush of ice-cream dealers to the headquarters of the Mechanical Division of the Bureau of Weights and Measures to have their cans "sealed" as to their true measure.

So great was the congestion that the Bureau of Incumbrances of the Borough President's office filed a complaint with Weights and Measures Commissioner Walsh, but he informed the bureau that the work must proceed as rapidly as possible and that the applicants could not be turned away. The rush season in the trade begins soon, and the dealers are anxious to comply with the law before that time.

The Commissioner issued an order recently under an opinion from the Corporation Counsel that all the ice-cream cans used in the city must be "sealed" in the same manner as other kinds of measures and scales.

INCREASE IN LOAN CO. ASSETS

$3,825,733 Greater Than at the Beginning of 1910, Says Cheney's Report.

ALBANY, March 14.—The State Banking Department for the first time in many years makes no special recommendations in its annual report relative to savings and loan associations. Supt. Cheney stated that the new law, which went into effect on Jan. 1, should have a fair trial first. The report, which was presented in the Legislature to-day, has nothing but praise for the new statute.

"The associations in all sections of the State have made unusual progress during the past year," says the report. "At the close of 1910 the reported assets of such associations were $3,825,733 greater than at the beginning. There was an increase in membership of 10,565, and an increase in the number of shares issued of 93,-081."

Supt. Cheney declares that savings and loan associations play a far more important part in the economy of the State than would be indicated in a statement of comparative resources. At present there are associations in fifty-four out of the sixty-one counties.

May Lose Arms by Brother's Prank.

GREENWICH, Conn., March 14.—Mary Fitzbane, the little daughter of a resident here, is in a critical condition owing to a prank of a younger brother who found some dynamite caps and placed them on the cellar floor for the sister to walk on. The caps exploded and the girl was burned in the face and her hands gashed to the bone. Blood poisoning has set in and physicians say there is grave danger of having to amputate the arms.

OPPOSE NEW FRANCHISE ACT.

Civic Bodies Don't Want Them for Exclusive Use of Applicants.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 14.—Assemblyman Donnelly's bill, giving sweeping powers to the Board of Estimate of New York City, enabling it to grant temporary franchises for bridges, tunnels, sidings, and spur tracks for the exclusive use of individuals and corporations, was opposed before the Senate Cities Committee to-day by representatives of several civic bodies. The general criticism was that the powers given were too broad and that the bill was unconstitutional.

Among those who opposed the bill were J. O. Hammitt, Secretary of the Citizens' Union; Harold A. Coparn of the West End Association, and the American Society of Landscape Architects; Frederick H. Cox of the United Civic Associations of the Borough of Queens, and Beverly R. Robinson, representing Edward F. Hatfield. Mr. Hatfield fought the granting of the franchise under existing law, and his contention was sustained by the Court of Appeals.

Edward McGoldrick, Assistant Corporation Counsel, representing the New York City government before the Legislature, spoke in support of the measure. He explained that the bill was framed by all the members of the Board of Estimate, and said that in the interest of commerce the board should have the power which the bill would confer.

It was suggested that the bill should contain a provision for a court review of the proceedings of the board in connection with the granting of franchises, and that the proposed law should require that the consent of property owners affected should be obtained before any privileges under the law are granted. It was stated that these and other amendments would be considered by the Cities Committee before action is taken on the bill.

The Donnelly bill provides that franchises for private purposes may be granted for terms of not more than ten years at a rate of compensation to be fixed by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

RISKED $15,000 FOR $750 LOAN

Bischoff Heir Now Seeks to Save Estate from Money Brokers.

A statement that he had assigned his rights in a $15,000 share in an estate for a loan of $750, figures in an injunction suit brought by Ernest W. Bischoff, a relative of Supreme Court Justice Henry Bischoff, and in which Justice Bischoff, as executor of the estate, is a party defendant.

Bischoff wants to restrain any payment by the executors to Nathan J. and Moses Pickhard, money brokers. He says he gave them a note for $1,100, and assigned his rights as collateral for the loan of $750, in February, 1907.

The estate was that of Henry Bischoff, the plaintiff's grandfather. Bischoff also sues to cancel the note as usurious. The Pickhards plead that they obtained a judgment on the note in 1908, and that the matter is closed.

Supreme Court Justice Guy denied yesterday the motion of the Pickhards to dismiss Bischoff's suit on the pleadings.

APPROVE P. R. R. STOCK ISSUE

Stockholders Sanction Increasing Capital to $600,000,000.

PHILADELPHIA, March 14.—At the annual meeting to-day of the stockholders of the Pennsylvania Railroad, the recommendation in the annual report that the capital stock be increased from $500,000,-000 to $600,000,000 was approved.

This increase will be made from time to time when, in the judgment of the Directors, money may be obtainable for the needs of the company.

There is at present outstanding $412,763,-600 stock, the balance being reserved to provide for convertible bonds. Vice President Rea said it was proposed to issue only $41,276,000 of the new stock this year, which would make a stock allotment of 10 per cent. at par to the present shareholders, but President McCrea corrected him and stated that really only $18,000,000 would be issued immediately, for the reason that the company now has on hand $22,000,000 from a previous stock issue.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 14.—There was more activity in to-day's market than there has been for some time. The opening was steady, but soon buying orders came in in good numbers, and these, finding but little stock offering, resulted in a steady advance throughout the session. Amalgamated sold up to 64¾, North Butte to 69½, Lake to 35½, and the balance of the list is all proportionately higher. The close was steady.

COMMODITY MARKETS.

WHEAT.—After a morning of uncertainty the wheat market turned strong, advancing late, closing at about the best prices of the day and at a net gain of ⅝ to 1c. The cables were very steady and for several days Europe has been showing a hardening tone. The European visible showed a small increase against large increases last week and last year. The receipts were small West, while the shipments from the interior were of good volume. There were exports of 183,000 bushels of wheat from Philadelphia and the American visible showed a loss of 2,151,000 bushels in the United States following a loss of 2,053,000 bushels the preceding week. There was a small increase of 243,000 bushels in Canada. The receipts for the day were small in the Northwest, and Minneapolis stocks are steadily decreasing. The Northwestern markets showed strength all day, leading the advance, and the reports from the Northwest were of dry soil conditions, claiming an absence of subsoil moisture. A report from a crop expert who has been making an inspection of Kansas claimed a loss of 10 per cent. in the area this season with a loss in conditions compared with the Government December figures of 4½ per cent. The Government December figures pointed to a crop of 88,700,000 bushels and the report on the present condition was figured as indicating from 75,-000,000 to 80,000,000 bushels. When the market turned to advance the offerings were rather quickly absorbed and prices advanced without much difficulty. Some improvement in milling demand was claimed, and the local mills were reported to have bought about 100,000 bushels of hard wheat from Buffalo. Exporters were still out of the market. No. 2 red was quoted at 95¾c. free on board; No. 1 Northern, $1.00¼; No. 2 hard Winter, $1.01¼, and No. 1 Manitoba, $1.02¼.

CORN.—There was considerable selling of corn during the morning and prices declined under these offerings and reports of slow cash demand. Western receipts were, however, small for the day and in two days have decreased about 700,000 bushels, while shipments have been excellent from the West and exports have been liberal. There was, however, an increase in Bradstreet's figures of 660,000 bushels, compared with 922,000 bushels decrease the previous week. Late the market hardened in sympathy with wheat and the close was at only a small net loss. No export business was reported. No. 2 corn was quoted at 53c, free on board; No. 3, 54½c; steamer, 53c, and No. 4, 49¼c bid, all in elevator, export rate.

OATS.—There was some little pressure on the oats market in the early trading influenced by the heaviness in wheat and corn and the reports of slow cash demand. The visible showed a decrease of only 225,000 bushels, compared with a decrease of 1,262,000 bushels the previous week. Late there was a good rally helped by decreasing receipts West, and the close was at a slight net gain for the day. Cash oats were dull with standards quoted at 36½c; No. 2 white, 37c, and No. 3, 36c.

PROVISIONS.—Hog products were heavy all the session, closing with a little rally, although still at a net loss for the day. There was further selling on the hog movement and slow demand for hogs by packers and there were reports of rather disappointing demand for product.

COTTONSEED OIL.

There are no indications of the market emerging from its present rut, and the backing and filling tendency which has been witnessed recently is expected to continue until crude mills offer more freely or else consumers are compelled to pay asking prices. In the meanwhile professional operators dominate the trade, and while the easiness of lard yesterday prompted free offerings for a time, buying by shorts and some new speculative buying were sufficient to absorb these sales and also others for the account of refining interests. Conditions in the cotton belt are beginning to attract a little attention. Quotations follow:

COTTON.

Irregularity continued in the cotton market during yesterday's session, but it was evident that offerings increased on the advance, and at the high level scored profits were attractive to many of the prominent longs. The close was at the low, with a good deal of selling by professional traders inspired somewhat by a dispatch from Memphis predicting a bearish census report next Monday. It is difficult to conceive, however, whether it is the trend of the market that influences the character of advices received relative to the probable showing of the Census Bureau, or whether the dispatches influence the market, as, while a strong tone was witnessed, there seemed to be a disposition to modify bearish crop views.

The Liverpool cables accounted for the higher opening of from 4 to 9 points, with that market favorably affected by Neill's figures estimating the crop at 11,750,000 bales, and minimum consumption at 12,250,000 bales. Manchester advices were also more encouraging, with a fair demand reported for both yarns and cloths. Foreigners were good buyers in the local future market, during the morning, taking approximately 15,000 bales, but this furnished the principal support, and when the demand was filled a heavier undertone prevailed. Bears seemed encouraged by the action of bull interests in taking profits on their spread, which operations were easily discernible by the narrowing of the premiums. Reports of rains in different parts of Texas also had the effect of inducing sales, and while there were still complaints received from that State, and also from Georgia and Mississippi, there seemed to be less apprehension. The average monthly precipitation for Texas was given by the Houston Weather Bureau for February at 2.77 inches, which is .88 inches greater than the February moisture for over twenty years.

Sentiment is mixed, but the public continues quite apathetic receiving but little encouragement from trade advices. On the other hand selling is restricted by the knowledge of well concentrated holdings, and the realization of a firm statistical position existing. New York stocks continue to decrease liberally, but are still larger than at any time for this season in a good many years. Early predictions are that this week's into-sight figures will for the first time this season run behind those of last year. Exports show a natural falling off.

COFFEE.

Coffee early declined 7@12 points, but at the close had regained most of the loss, final figures being unchanged to 3 point net lower. Total sales aggregated 45,250 bags. Foreign selling at the start was mostly in the October position, 5,000 bags being sold at 9.80c. The foreign markets were easier early, especially in Havre, but at the close there was a better feeling. Havre being ¼@½f net lower, while Hamburg was ¼ lower to ¼ higher. Rio was steady, unchanged, while Santos declined 50 reis. Spot coffee, 12¼c for Rio No. 7, and 13¼c for Santos 4s.

PRICE IS $246 A SHARE

Metals Company to Get $12,300,000—It Has Paid $11,750,000 in Dividends—Stock Sold Recently at $375.

The expected absorption by the Amalgamated Copper Company of the United Metals Selling Company, which has marketed the Amalgamated's copper output since its organization in 1900, was arranged for yesterday by the sale of $12,-500,000 5 per cent. Amalgamated Copper Company notes, which were purchased by the National City Bank and the Guaranty Trust Company. The notes are to run for two years and the proceeds will be used for the purchase of the United Metals Selling Company's $5,000,000 capital stock. The Selling Company's stock is valued at $246 a share, and if all of it is turned in under the terms of purchase, soon to be announced by the Amalgamated, $12,300,-000 will be required to absorb it.

Although no formal announcement was made by the Amalgamated Copper Company yesterday it is expected that, following the plan used in the absorption by its subsidiary, the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, of all the operating companies of the Amalgamated, the United Metals Selling will be liquidated and its business turned over to the Anaconda. The United Metals Selling Company has received a commission from the sale of the Amalgamated's output, and this selling business, supplemented by trade arrangements with various independent companies, was practically its only asset, except the Raritan Refinery which, a couple of years ago, was disposed of to the International Smelting and Refining Company.

The International Smelting and Refining Company, originally organized by the Amalgamated interests as a rival to the American Smelting and Refining Company, and which took over the contracts for smelting Utah Consolidated ores, has since developed a considerable custom business. The United Metals Selling Company received for its Raritan plant 40,000 shares of International Smelting and Refining stock, which were carried on its balance sheet of Dec. 31, 1910, at $4,000,-000. Its other assets on that date were cash and accounts receivable totaling $14,-029,490, and "other investments" placed at $202,000. Against these total assets of $18,231,490 were charged accounts payable of $7,270,779.

The price paid for the Amalgamated short-term notes by the purchasing banks was not stated yesterday, but they are being offered at 99½ and interest, "when and as issued." They will be dated April 1, 1911, and will mature April 1, 1913. It was stated yesterday that the entire issue had been oversubscribed.

With capital and surplus of the United Metals Selling Company standing at $10,-960,718, it was estimated yesterday that the Dec. 31 balance sheet showed a book value of $220 a share, which, however, is increased to $246, which is said to be the Amalgamated's purchase price, when it is considered that the $4,000,000 of International Smelting and Refining stock, carried at par has been selling around 130, and that there are valuable considerations in unexpired contracts for selling metals.

The income of the United Metals Selling Company has been estimated at between $1,000,

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Strong and More Active—Call Money Rates, 2@2½ Per Cent.

FEBRUARY TRADE SHOWING

Exports Exceeded Imports by $54,000,000—Eight Months' Record Makes Excellent Showing.

The forward movement on the Stock Exchange gained headway yesterday, accompanied by an increase in activity which before the end of the session had brought the trading up to a figure very close to double that of the previous day. The market was particularly strong at the close, the final prices in nearly all the active stocks being the highest for the day. Such gains as 1¼ in Atchison, ⅞ in New York Central, 2⅝ in Northern Pacific, 1⅞ in Reading, ⅞ in Southern Pacific, and 2⅝ in Union Pacific, with the industrials contributing such net gains as 1⅝ in Amalgamated Copper, 1 in General Electric, and 1⅝ in United States Steel, indicated the strength of the day's upward movement. Any increase in the more cheerful sentiment, which had begun to show itself the previous day, stimulated by further short covering, found the market readily responsive to the increased buying, and as the day advanced the dealings extended to a larger number of issues, so that the record of transactions included more stocks than have appeared in a single day's record for some time. The banks again lost cash to the Sub-Treasury, though in smaller volume, but despite this fact time money became still easier. The over-subscription of $12,500,000 of notes issued by the Amalgamated Copper Company was announced during the day, and other smaller offerings were readily absorbed. The stockholders of the Pennsylvania in approving at their annual meeting yesterday the proposed increase of $100,000,000 in the company's capital paved the way for future financing through an issue of stock, but the understanding was that the offering to the shareholders will not be made in the immediate future. The election to the Missouri Pacific Board of Directors at the annual meeting yesterday of the representatives of leading financial interests assures to that property the effective banking support which it needs and promises fuller realization by the company of the opportunities which are open to it.

The country's foreign trade in February, the full figures of which were made public yesterday, shows that the month yielded a larger excess of exports over imports than in any previous February with the single exception of 1908. As against an excess of imports of $5,559,000 in February, 1910, there is shown for February this year an excess of exports of $54,230,000. This was the combined result of a large increase of exports and a decrease in imports and brings the excess of exports for the eight months of the fiscal year up to $418,145,000, compared with an excess of only $187,933,000 for the corresponding period a year ago. These figures set side by side bring out strikingly the change for the better which has occurred in recent months in the country's foreign trade.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Broader Market.

Trading was broader and more active in yesterday's market than has been the case for weeks, the favorable reaction on the trading mind of much of the morning's crop of news, coupled with necessities of the short interest, playing, no doubt, a large part in the result. Another, and not a small factor, seemingly, was the general and growing belief that the market may have a breathing space of some weeks yet, before the anti-trust suit decisions are handed down. When the corporation tax decision came out on Monday, instead of the anti-trust rulings which had been expected by trading talent, there was a disposition to believe that the Easter vacation of the Supreme Court might intervene before the important decisions, which have been a bugaboo to the market off and on since last Spring, are handed down. Yesterday the wiseacres went even further and took comfort in the theory that the decisions need not be expected until the end of April. Although Wall Street's sources of information on what may be expected from the Supreme Court have been wide of the mark recently, the argument that the enormous volume of data bearing on the trust cases to be digested by the new members of the court does not favor a decision quickly, following that on the corporation tax, found ready acceptance in the Street.

Little Interest in Amalgamated Move.

Although trading in Amalgamated yesterday was active compared with what in these days has become a typical market for that stock, the announcement of the absorption of the United Metal Selling Company was received with little real interest. Transactions were not quite double what they had been on Monday. It is true that for weeks such a move on the part of the Amalgamated had been expected, but the flatness of the market for this one-time leader of trading, during the period when the deal was being consummated, is a commentary on the market's jaded interest in the copper merger, which in 1909 served to launch a boom in coppers. During all of last week Amalgamated gained ⅝. On Monday the advance was ⅜. Yesterday the net gain was 1⅝.

Slow Up in Steel.

What may be put down as a natural reaction was reported yesterday by those in close touch with Steel Corporation affairs. It was said that since the first of the month the new business coming in has slowed up and shows a moderate falling off from the rate of the previous month. February's average daily tonnage exceeded the best expectations, it will be remembered, and with the anti-trust decisions, which have been second only to the rate cases in carrying blame for hesitation among buyers, still ahead, there is nothing that can be regarded as disappointing in a reaction in steel buying, particularly since inquiries are reported large and specifications continue to come in freely.

Banking Interests in M. O. P.

Although as a natural result of the cumulative voting in Missouri Pacific the alliance of Frank J. Gould's personal holdings of the stock with Mittendorf, Williams & Co. gave the Baltimore firm one of the Directors, the banking domination of the road's affairs is assured with the election of five representatives of the Kuhn, Loeb-Rockefeller interests, coupled with the terms of the agreement between George Gould and the bankers, about the hardness and fastness of which there has remained no doubt since the late misunderstanding was adjusted.

Agricultural Prosperity.

Coming right after the Government report showing that the grain held back on the farms of North Dakota, heart of the parched area in last season's drought, is less than a quarter of that held at the same time last year, reports from merchandise centres in that region that the farmers are buying more freely than in the Spring of 1910, illustrate the large reserves of the agricultural community. The trade reports credit the confidence of the farmers and their willingness to spend to the remarkably favorable weather and soil conditions this year. Observers say that with rain enough in April nothing can hold back the crops this year.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 14.—Seaboard shares were strong, and the common and the second preferred moved up about one point each. Consolidated Power shares were again moved up, the common gaining 2 points, and the preferred almost two points, the latter touching a new record at 99¾. Maryland Trust preferred was better on favorable prospects, in connection with the Houston Oil reorganization. Shares, 3,155; bonds, $45,000.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Walter E. Orthwein & Co., bond brokers, of St. Louis, have opened a branch here at 27 William Street, under the management of Alexander C. Bates. They are offering at par 6 per cent. City of Oklahoma bonds in denominations of $500.

Fisk & Robinson are offering the unsold portion of Gulf & Ship Island general and refunding 6 per cent. bonds, maturing 1912, at 100.93, and those maturing in 1914 at 101.37, at which prices the bonds yield 6% per cent.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

Happenings of a Day in London, Paris, and Berlin.

LONDON, March 14.—Money and discount rates were quiet to-day.

The stock market was quiet and irregular. Home rails and gilt edged securities were steady, but foreign shares and Kaffirs declined in the afternoon on Paris selling. The Russo-Chinese situation was partly responsible for a loss in Consols, while rubber shares were weak in sympathy with the lower auction prices. Mexican issues closed firmer.

American securities opened quiet and a fraction higher, but declined during the first hour from lack of support. In the late trading the market strengthened on Wall Street buying and closed firm.

The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 2⅝@2¾ per cent.

The rate of discount in the open market for three months' bills is 2½@2 9-16 per cent.

PARIS, March 14.—Prices opened irregular and closed weak on the Bourse today.

BERLIN, March 14.—The Mexican and Russo-Chinese situations caused weakness on the Boerse to-day. Trading was dull.

CHICAGO STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 14.—Elevated railroad shares were active to-day on prospects of a favorable conclusion of negotiations in New York for a consolidation. Advices from the East to-day were that Samuel Insull, President of the Commonwealth Edison, reached New York to-day, where he met Henry A. Blair and other interests concerned in the syndicate plan to consolidate the elevated railroads. Commonwealth Edison would derive considerable benefit through an amalgamation of elevated roads, but it will not be an integral part of the unification. After an opening on a par with the previous close at 122¾, the quotation for Commonwealth Edison rose to a fraction above 125. There was heavy trading in Sears-Roebuck common also, though the price range was within rather low limits.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 14.—Under the lead of such arbitrage shares as United States Steel, Reading, Pennsylvania, and Lehigh Valley, nearly all purely local issues displayed some improvement, but gains were chiefly confined to small fractions. Cambria Steel, Lake Superior, and United Gas Improvement hardened more or less and there was a continuation of the demand for the Asphalt issues. Nevertheless the trading was exceedingly light and commission houses reported very little increase in local business despite some broadening out in orders for New York.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

William Waldorf Astor Buys a Slice of Chapin Horne Property—Benjamin Thaw Residence On Fifth Ave. Sold—Another Madison Ave. Plot Sold—New Times Square Restaurant.

The real estate market showed greater activity yesterday than on the previous day. William Waldorf Astor figured as a buyer, securing a twenty-foot slice of the Chapin Home property, running through from Sixty-sixth to Sixty-seventh Street, between Lexington and Third Avenues. The most interesting feature, however, was the sale of the Benjamin Thaw house at 1,055 Fifth Avenue, between Eighty-sixth and Eighty-seventh Streets. This is the largest sale of high-class Fifth Avenue residential property that has occurred in some time, and it is of particular note in that the residence was purchased for occupancy. Pease & Elliman negotiated the deal, the buyer being a client of the firm.

Plans for the house were filed in 1906, but it has never been occupied. The architect was Henry Ives Cobb. The house occupies a large plot, fronting 87.10 feet on the avenue and 102 feet deep. It was constructed with the greatest care to every detail, and ranks among the finest and largest residences on the avenue. It has been held at $350,000. The Thaws formerly owned 1,046 Fifth Avenue, on the block below, but this was sold a short time ago, and Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Thaw now reside in a leased house at 854 Fifth Avenue. Benjamin Thaw is a half-brother of Harry K. Thaw. In 1907 he made a gift of $50,000 to the Western University of Pennsylvania at Pittsburg.

Astor Buys From Chapin Home.

William Waldorf Astor has purchased a 20-foot slice of the Chapin Home property, extending from Sixty-sixth to Sixty-seventh Streets, between Third and Lexington Avenues, acquiring the easterly 20 feet adjoining the Hamilton flats, which occupy the entire Third Avenue frontage between the streets mentioned. By the purchase Mr. Astor acquires a depth of 100 feet for his plot, beside getting ample protection for light and air in case the remainder of the property is secured for a large apartment house. The Chapin Home owned a parcel fronting 170 feet on both streets and 200 feet deep. The remaining 150 feet on each street is in the market, as the home is erecting a series of new buildings at Jamaica, which will be ready for occupancy this coming Fall. The Chapin Home for the Aged and Infirm was incorporated in 1868, the city giving the organization a grant of the land on a leasehold of $1 or so a year. About two years ago the city transferred the title to the property to the home. It is a valuable plot in a section of the city which has shown considerable activity in high-class improvements. Mrs. Horace E. Fox is President of the home.

West Side Apartments Sold.

Apartment house buying on the upper west side figured in the notable transactions of the day. The seven-story house known as the Harold, on the northwest corner of Manhattan Avenue and 118th Street, was sold by the Ledyard Construction Company. It is assessed at $230,000, and was acquired by the sellers a year ago from the Remsen Realty Company of Brooklyn. It occupies a plot 100 feet on the avenue and the same on the street.

Two new five-story apartment houses at 623 to 627 West 136th Street, between Riverside Drive and Broadway, known as Riverview Court, were sold by Solomon & Greenbaum to an investor for the Emerson Realty Company, of which Edgar A. Levy is President. The consideration is said to be $170,000. Each house occupies a plot 54.6 by 99.11.

New Times Square Restaurant.

Times Square is to have a new restaurant on the northwest corner of Broadway and Forty-seventh Street. Plans were filed yesterday for altering the southern half of the old Brewster carriage factory into an office building with stores and a large restaurant on the ground floor. The factory, which occupies the entire block on the west side of Broadway, between Forty-seventh and Forty-eighth Streets, is held by different owners. The portion about to be extensively altered comprises nearly three-fourths of the block. The cost of the changes will be $200,000. A marble entrance will be built for the offices, and an extension will be made in the interior court for the garden restaurant. New passenger and freight elevators will be installed. William H. Birkmire is the architect, and the Atlas Development Company is the lessee of the property, having taken a long lease from the owners, the Sutphin estate. Several negotiations have been under way for the last year to secure the property for theatrical and restaurant purposes, and it is believed that the present changes are virtually of a temporary character, until the time comes when some large improvement will demand the property.

Another Madison Avenue Deal.

Several private dwellings changed owners yesterday, the most interesting sale being that of 182 Madison Avenue, which was sold by Louise M. Pollock through George R. Read & Co. The building, which is a four-story structure on a lot 28.9 by 85, adjoins the Wysong property at the southwest corner of Madison Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street, which was sold several months ago. It was rumored that the party who purchased the Wysong property also purchased 182 Madison Avenue, but the name of the buyer was withheld. 178 Madison Avenue was purchased last week by Dr. Pearce Bailey, and the F. A. Palmer trust holds title to 180 Madison Avenue, with twenty-five feet front on Thirty-fourth Street.

The four-story dwelling, 32 East Sixtieth Street was sold by Dr. Joseph Kucher. It occupies a lot 20 by 100.5.

The James Carlew Construction Company sold to Henry Goldman 47 West Eighty-fifth Street, a five-story American basement 20 by 60 by 102.2. This house is the last of a row of sixteen which Mr. Carlew recently completed on the north side of Eighty-fifth Street, between Central Park West and Columbus Avenue. Shawson & Hobbs negotiated the sale.

Two Sales in Old Silk District.

There were two sales in the old wholesale silk district yesterday. The estate of James R. Smith sold 302 Church Street, southwest corner of Walker Street, together with 27 Walker Street, adjoining. The property forms an "L," and has frontages of 24 feet on Church Street and 75 feet on Walker Street, with a westerly line of 106.4 feet.

The sale involves the land only, the six-story structure on the property being under lease to Brandes Brothers for twenty-one years with the privilege of renewals. The buyer is an investor, who is said to have taken the property on less than a 5 per cent. basis. E. H. Ludlow, in conjunction with the Charles F. Noyes Company, negotiated the deal.

The Central Trust Company sold to Lieberknecht & Co. 45 and 47 Crosby Street, a five-story building, on plot 50 by 100, near Broome Street, for $107,500. The buyers are the present tenants.

Tenement Property in Demand.

Tenement house property continues to interest investors, as shown by yesterday's market, when several parcels were disposed of both on the east and west side of the city. In Harlem Porter & Co. sold, for the estate of John B. Haskin, Inc., to an investor a row of five four-story tenements located at 2,516, 2,518, 2,520, 2,522, and 2,524 Park Avenue.

Goodwin & Goodwin sold for Aaron Guedalia 17 and 19 East 117th Street, two five-story tenements on a lot 25 by 100.

In the midtown section the Maze Realty Company sold to George Stuckey the two four-story flats, 161 and 163 East Forty-ninth Street, on a plot 40 by 100.5, adjoining the corner of Third Avenue.

Chris Schierio has sold for Terence F. Gallagher the four-story brick tenement, 605 West Forty-fifth Street, on a lot 25 by 100, to John C. Forster. This property has not changed hands in over twenty-five years.

G. Carluccd & Co., in conjunction with L. Marinelli, have sold for J. Chaimowits & Carrol to Charles Salomone the six-story tenement with stores at 824 East 113th Street on lot 25 by 100.

West Side Corner Resold.

Max Marx has resold to an investor the southwest corner of Amsterdam Avenue and 158th Street, 100 by 100, occupied by three-story frame stores and dwellings, through David Stewart and James E. Barry & Co. This is part of the Buckley estate block front, purchased by Mr. Marx last week through David Stewart.

$1,100,000 Building Loan.

A building loan of $1,100,000 has just been made by the United States Realty and Improvement Company to the Trustees of the Masonic Temple on the property and new building to be erected thereon at the northeast corner of Sixth Avenue and Twenty-third Street, 98.9 by 141 feet and irregular. This is one of the largest building loans that has been made this year, and it is also interesting in that it was made by a large realty company and not by one of the big insurance companies which usually figure in loans of this character. The new building is to be nineteen stories high and will occupy the site of the old Masonic Temple. The new building was fully described in last Sunday's TIMES, with a history of that well-known corner.

Nelson Estate Sells Big Plot.

A builder has purchased for immediate improvement with an apartment house the plot of four lots, 100 by 100, on the south side of 123d Street, adjoining the southwest corner of Amsterdam Avenue. The Thomas Nelson estate is the seller.

Bronx.

Kurz & Uren, Inc., have sold for a client 821 East 241st Street, Woodlawn Heights, a one-family dwelling, on lot 25 by 100.

D. I. Tobias has bought the plot, 200 by 89, on the east side of Bathgate Avenue, about 100 feet north of Wendover Avenue. The purchaser will erect stores and flats.

Brooklyn.

Frank A. Seaver has sold for M. P. Hickey to J. C. Brown a plot, 40 by 100, on the north side of Eighty-second Street, 280 feet west of Third Avenue.

Arthur T. Weygandt has sold for Mrs. F. R. Baker the four-story and basement brick and brownstone dwelling, 540 Bedford Avenue, on the corner of Wilson Street, to a client for residential purposes.

James J. Connor and James J. Crowe have sold for Patrick J. Igoe a four-story flat, including the café business, at 498 Smith Street. The purchaser, John Sullivan, paid all cash.

Burrill Brothers have sold the three-story American basement house at 548 Third Street, between Seventh and Eighth Avenues for H. A. Bade to a client for occupancy.

Suburban.

I. J. Auerbach has sold at Borough Park the residence of Mrs. P. Segallar to Mr. August Herbst; at West Norwood, Bergen County, N. J., the country home farm, nine acres, of Dr. Judson C. Palmer, to J. Kaufman; at Emerson, Bergen County, the country home of Mrs. W. W. Serviss to Mrs. Mary E. Attwood; at Bayshore, Suffolk County, L. I., fifty acres, comprising 600 lots, property of Bayshore Terrace Company, to a client.

Robert Plaut, Reinhart Stork, Herman Krollage, and others have sold to the Long Island Railroad Company a parcel of 1 1-10 acres, having a frontage of 108 feet on the east side of Trotting Course Lane, with a depth of 589 feet, adjoining land of Mr. Plaut at Glendale, L. I.

Mary McNamara has sold to Edith May Long a parcel having a frontage of 60 feet on the west side of Twentieth Street, 280 feet north of State Street, Flushing.

Frederick H. and Alrich H. Man have sold to Martin Schmand of Richmond Hill a parcel having a frontage of 113 feet on the south side of Beverly Road, 200 feet east of Lefferts Avenue, adjoining land of J. Ellis at Kew Gardens, Richmond Hill; subject to a mortgage of $6,684.

James J. Connor and James J. Crowe have sold for John McGovern a four-story frame house, on plot 28 by 180, at 703 Nepperhan Avenue, Yonkers.

Brooklyn Factory Leases.

Herbert Russell Ludder has made several important leases of factory property in Brooklyn recently. The largest is that of the building at 156 Sands Street, containing 54,000 square feet, for the Unitype Company to F. Bischoff for a term of twelve years. The H. Bridgman Smith building at Division and Kent Avenues, containing 12,000 square feet, has been leased for three years to the Unitype Company, and the building at the foot of Twentieth Street, containing 22,000 square feet, has been leased for ten years for the Hamilton Docks Company to a manufacturer.

Private Dwellings at Auction.

Bryan L. Kennelly will sell at auction to-day several valuable Manhattan and Brooklyn properties, including 31 East Sixty-first Street, a dwelling, between Madison and Park Avenues, on a lot 16.6 by 100.5, at executor's sale for the estate of Della Smith. For the estate of Anna Bernstein, 106 East Nineteenth Street, a dwelling, on a lot 23 by 92; also, 6 Gramercy Park, a large four-story residence, on a plot 26.3 by 110; to close the estate of Daniel O'Farrell, 855 West Fifty-fourth Street, a tenement, on a plot 25 by 100.5, and on the same day 140 East Twenty-seventh Street, near Lexington Avenue, a three-story brick dwelling, on a lot 20 by 98.9, and for the estate of Susan A. Austin, 26 Bay Seventeenth Street, near Eighty-sixth Street, Brooklyn, a frame dwelling, with a two-story stable, on a plot 75 by 96.8.

Large Bronx Parcel to be Auctioned.

Joseph P. Day will offer to-day, in the Vesey Street Salesroom, a large plot of about thirteen lots, located on East 184th Street, Willis Avenue and Southern Boulevard, by order of William Klein, Esq., in a partition action of Westerfield vs. Central Trust Company of New York. They will be offered singly and then as one parcel. He will also offer at Supreme Court partition sale, on the same day, 1,450 Cromwell Avenue, a two-story and basement frame dwelling, on a plot 28 by 111.

Fine Madison Avenue Improvement.

William H. Gompert is preparing plans for a sixteen-story office building, to be erected on the northeast corner of Madison Avenue and Thirty-third Street. It will be in the Italian Renaissance style, with a façade of brick with limestone, terra cotta and granite trimmings. It will front 50 feet on the avenue by 100 feet on the street, and is estimated to cost, including the land, about $800,000. No form of manufacturing will be allowed in the building. Loton H. Slawson, who recently bought the property, is the owner.

Columbia's Architecture Building.

Plans have been filed for the erection of the architectural library and school building of Columbia University, to be built on the grounds of the university, opposite 118th Street, 149.6 feet west of Amsterdam Avenue and south of the main library building. It will be known as the Avery Building. It will be in the old Colonial style, with four massive Doric columns in front, the façade being of brick and limestone. It will have a frontage of 150 feet and a depth of 57 feet, four stories high, equipped with elevators and fireproof, the floors being of cork. McKim, Mead & White are the architects. The cost is $200,000.

Fifth Avenue Alterations.

Plans have been filed for making alterations to the two five and six story and loft buildings at 381 and 383 Fifth Avenue at a cost of $40,000. The smaller building will be increased in height to that of the larger, and a pent house for studios built on the roof. Isaac H. Peller is the owner.

Enlarging Storage Warehouse.

Plans have been filed for enlarging the capacity of the seven-story storage warehouse of the Bowling Green Storage and Van Company, on the south side of Sixty-fifth Street, 175 feet east of West End Avenue, by building a seven-story side extension, 25 feet front by 100.5 deep, at a cost of $40,000. Tucker & Vinton are the architects.

Notes.

John H. Fife Company leased the Ferncliff Hotel, Greenwood Lake, N. Y., for the estate of James W. Whiteside, for the coming season, to Wesley B. Chauncey, with an option to purchase the property during the season.

Kirkpatrick & Urquhart were the brokers who negotiated the sale of the Bonnefoi apartment, reported sold Monday.

Plans have been filed for a two-story brick Sub-Post Office station, to be built on the west side of Broadway, 188.7 feet south of Terrace View Avenue, at a cost of $10,000. Daniel J. Mahoney, Jr., is the owner of record. Joseph Wolf is the architect.

The BELNORD

BROADWAY TO AMSTERDAM AVENUE
Eighty-sixth to Eighty-seventh Street

¶ The BELNORD is essentially a place in which refined people may live quietly and privately and still enjoy every modern living convenience.

¶ Subway Stations and Surface Cars are but a step from all six entrances; the Elevated is but a few blocks distant.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

The New Tariff Changes Rate on Flax Card Waste.

The Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday made a ruling under the new tariff affecting a variety of flax waste commonly known as card waste. The protest is still in the name of Charles H. Wood. In each case the articles were assessed for duty under Paragraph 479 of the Tariff act of 1909, as "waste not specially provided for in this section, 10 per cent. ad valorem." The importers claim that the merchandise is free of duty in each instance under Paragraph 644 of the act, which among other things provides for paper stock waste and other articles.

Judge Somerville in his decision for the board, partly sustaining the protests, points out that the provision in the act of 1897 corresponding with Paragraph 644 of the act of 1909, placed on the free list articles essentially of the same description, with the qualification, however, that they were to be "fit only to be converted into paper." The new tariff act, the decision notes, makes an essential change in that the articles described in Paragraph 644 of the present act must be "chiefly used for paper making." Prior tariff acts, including the act of 1897, confine the free list of articles of the kind described to those which are used only for paper making.

The decision says that taking into consideration the entire testimony and having due regard to the apparent experience and knowledge of the witnesses called before the board, certain of the protests are sustained while the remainder are overruled.

Condition of the Treasury.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—At the beginning of business to-day the condition of the United States Treasury was:

The deficit to date this fiscal year is $6,774,065, as against $24,178,511 at this time last year.

BANKRUPTCY NOTICES.

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES for the Southern District of New York.—In the matter of LOUIS LEMONOFF and ABRAHAM SILVERMAN, trading under the firm name of LEMONOFF & SILVERMAN, Bankrupts.

It appearing to the satisfaction of this court by the petition of Miles Rosenbluth, the attorney for one of the bankrupts herein, dated the 28th day of February, 1911, that a petition was filed in the office of the Clerk of this court on the 26th day of October, 1910, praying that the above-named bankrupts be adjudged bankrupts herein, and that a subpoena directed to Abraham Silverman, one of the above-named bankrupts, was duly issued out of this court to the Marshal, for service upon him, and that the said Marshal has been unable to serve the said subpoena personally upon the said Abraham Silverman, and that he is not within the district, so that personal service may be made upon him, and that diligent efforts have been made to ascertain his whereabouts, but that he is not within the jurisdiction of this court; now, on motion of Miles Rosenbluth, Esq., attorney for Louis Lemonoff, one of the bankrupts herein, it is Ordered, that the above-named bankrupt, Abraham Silverman, plead, answer, or demur on or before the 27th day of March, 1911, to the petition herein, filed in the office of the Clerk of this court on the 26th day of October, 1910, and in case of his failure to plead, answer, or demur thereto, adjudication shall be made according to the prayer of said petition, and it is further Ordered, that this order be published in The New York Times once a week for two successive weeks, said publication to commence not later than the 9th day of March, 1911, and that a copy of this order be mailed to the said Abraham Silverman at his last known residence, at No. 327 East 157th Street, in the City of New York, Borough of the Bronx, on or before the date of the first publication.

Dated the 1st day of March, 1911.

CITY HAS A PROBLEM IN CARE OF STREETS

PAID $90,000 LAST YEAR

Relations between the street railroads and the City Government in the matter of street paving have developed a discussion among city officials, owing to the surprising fact that the city has to stand suits for damages where accidents are due to the railroads' neglect to keep their part of the roadway in repair.

Under the State railroad law the surface roads are compelled to pave and keep in repair the spaces betwen their tracks and a two-foot strip on each side of them. Until recently the city has had a great deal of trouble with the companies over damage suits brought as a result of accidents from bad pavements within the area for which the railroads are responsible.

Most of the street accidents happen near the centre of the thoroughfare. Practically all the serious ones do, such as a man being knocked off a wagon and run over by a car. Suits brought for street accidents, whatever their real cause may have been, are almost always based on "the bad condition of the streets.

According to the law, the city is not released for liability in any action of this kind even if the accident occurs as a result of a hole in the pavement in the area of the railroad company. Sometimes the city and the company are made co-defendants in such suits, but more frequently the city is sued first, and then, if the action is successful, it has to attempt to collect from the railroad.

Under the old system, when the city obtained a maintenance guarantee from a paving company for a certain section, it was made to apply as well to the railroad area within the district. This resulted in the neglect of their obligations by the companies. It was found difficult to get even the courts to allow reimbursement to the city after recovery had been made on an accident in the railroad areas.

All this resulted in the piling up of a large number of damage suits against the city in which the liability really rested with the railroad companies. Then Cornelius F. Collins, chief of the Torts Division of the Law Department, devised a scheme by which the railroads were cotoprolled to make their own maintenance agreements with the paving companies. This is resulting in a reduction of the suits against the city in which the primary liability is with the companies and also in the giving of better attention to the matter by them. Of the $90,000 collected in damages for street accidents against the city last year, probably not more than $20,000 will be recovered by the city from the railroads.

Damage suits are considered an excellent means of guaging the condition of the streets. Mr. Collins said yesterday that he believed that it may be shown now that things are not so bad as they might be. Last year suits for street accidents, the majority of them based on holes in the pavements, totaling $2,400,000 were brought against the city. Out of this amount only $95,000 was recovered or about two and two-thirds per cent. Nineteen appeals were taken which brought a reduction in the recoveries of $24,000.

The Torts Division also brought about the dismissal of 199 suits for lack of prosecution and three discontinuances.

Mr. Collins said yesterday that the number of suits being brought this year on account of the bad condition of the streets is no greater than usual and less than in some years in the past. The number of medical examinations held by the Division in January and February of last year was thirty-seven and thirty-eight respectively. For these months this year the totals were forty-one and thirty-three.

Borough President McAneny also says that a great deal of good could be accomplished by an arrangement between the city and the railroad companies by which the entire paving would be done at the same time. He is trying to bring this about. He said that he has the entire available force of the four paving companies which do business with the city at work on the streets. Forty-two of the forty-nine steam paving rollers in the city were at work yesterday.

"FARMERS" AT THE WALDORF.

They Weren't Real Ones, Being Merely Members of the Sphinx Club.

It was "farmers' night" at the one hundred and fourteenth dinner of the Sphinx Club given at the Waldorf last night without a single farmer being present and without one word about reciprocity. An attempt to get Sir Frank Newnes, publisher of The Strand Magazine, an eleventh hour guest of the club, to give his views on the subject proved fruitless.

"Reciprocity," said Sir Frank, "is a nation's own business. If your country can prosper thereby, that prosperity will be reflected all over the world."

"We are all agriculturists," said John J. Dillon, publisher of The Rural New Yorker, "bearing in mind the distinction that the farmer is the man who works the soil, whereas the agriculturist is the man who works the farmer." Indeed the purpose of the dinner was to discuss ways and means whereby the army of advertising men, manufacturers, and business men can reach the farmer and sell him their goods. Following in the wake of the lightning-rod man, the piano man, and the cream separator man, the advertising men say they also may be able to share in the farmer's prosperity and get part of his money.

The speakers included G. B. Sharpe, Montgomery Hallowell, and Frank B. White, advertising managers, and T. D. Harmon, editor of The National Stockman and Farmer, of Pittsburg.

7-FOOT-4 GIANT MISSING.

Absence of George Lanz, Canadian Walker, Reported to Police.

George Lanz, the Canadian giant, who landed here from abroad on Feb. 17, accompanied by his nieces, Paula and Alice Von Crombrugghe, who had joined him in Antwerp on a walking trip round the world, is missing, and the two girls are nearly distracted. His disappearance was reported to the police last night by James J. Hackett, who lodges at 150 Lexington Avenue, where Lanz and his nieces have had rooms since their arrival here.

Mr. Hackett said that Lanz, who is 7 feet 4 inches tall, had been gone since Feb. 27, when he left the Lexington Avenue house, saying he was going to get work in a restaurant. The sisters hunted for him in vain, but concluded finally that he must be all right, since any accident to a man of his unusual size would be sure to become public.

Both girls obtained employment in the city and earned enough to support themselves. They were not exceedingly worried over Lanz until the other day, when they heard a rumor of an extremely tall man killing himself in a restaurant. Last night Hackett accompanied the girls to the Morgue, where they insisted on searching for Lanz's body. They did not find it and Hackett volunteered then to report his absence to the police.

Lanz was formerly a guide in Winnipeg and started on a walking tour, when a relative died recently and left him $25,000.

WIFE WANTED ALL THE CASH.

Because Mr. Gall Kept 15 Cents for Tobacco Mrs. Gall Wouldn't Kiss Him.

Mrs. Mary Gall, a young married woman, of 77 West Forty-third Street, Bayonne, had her husband, Alexander Gall, before Recorder Mara in that city yesterday and charged that he had threatened her life and failed properly to provide for her. Gall denied the charge, and said:

"Your Honor, the first month we were married I handed over all of my $65 wages, except 15 cents for tobacco, to my wife, and she went on awfully because I kept the 15 cents. She refused to kiss me and then I began to love her less and less. Guess you would under the circumstances."

Mrs. Gall admitted she was somewhat put out because she didn't get the full $65. She declared that she still loved her husband, and Gall said he guessed he loved his wife, after all. Then at the suggestion of the Recorder the couple shook hands and Mrs. Gall leaned from the witness chair and kissed her husband on the lips while the spectators applauded.

SAYS WOMAN TOOK $400 BRIBE

Miss Feist Agreed to Drop a Charge Against the Giver's Son, It Is Said.

Miss Emily Feist of 24 State Street, Newark, N. J., who was arrested last Monday charged with accepting a bribe of $400 from Robert Turk of 35 Nassau Street on Monday for promising not to testify against William Fuerst whom she had charged with disorderly conduct, was arraigned yesterday before Magistrate McAdoo in the Tombs Court and pleaded not guilty.

Turk, who is counsel for Antone Fuerst, a musician at 562 West 148th Street, father of the man she accused, said he gave Miss Feist the money in his office, after she had held a telephone conversation with his client in which she agreed to drop the charge against his son, who is to be placed on trial in General Sessions this week, and leave the country.

PRISON FOR BALLOT FRAUD.

Four Election Inspectors Get Two Months Each in the Penitentiary.

Frank Zerillo, Dominico Dalessandro, James Elia, and Nicolo Savignano, the four Republican Election Inspectors of the Fifth and Sixth Election Districts of the First Assembly District, who were convicted last week of making false statements on the vote cast in their district at the primary contest in 1907, were sentenced to two months each in the penitentiary yesterday by Judge Crain in General Sessions.

At the time of their offense a fight was on between George S. Husch and Rocco Dalessandro, who were contending for the Republican leadership. It was alleged that the votes in the Fifth and Sixth Districts would decide the fight. Husch got 60 votes and Dalessandro 17. The four Inspectors reported the contrary. Husch contested the case in the courts and Justice Seabury ordered the ballot boxes opened and the fraud was discovered.

Helpless with $184, a Will, and Stock.

A woman found helplessly intoxicated at 116th Street and Eighth Avenue last night, who said she was Catherine Ferguson, refusing her address, carried three handbags. In one of them the police found $181 and in another $3 and some change. In the third was a will made in 1907 by Patrick Fealey, leaving his estate to his wife Catherine. There were also eight certificates for stock in small mining companies, made out in the name of Catherine Fealey of Chatham, N. Y. The woman was locked up.

Privacy Act Does Not Protect the Dead

Ruling that the personal privacy statute does not protect the dead, or their portraits, Supreme Court Justice Seabury denied an application yesterday by Minnie Hyatt, administratrix of the estate of Helen Wyatt, to continue the decedent's suit against a portrait studio for unauthorized use of the decedent's picture. The suit was begun in the decedent's life time, but Justice Seabury holds that such a suit is of a personal nature and dies with the individual.

Martha Washington Allowed to Dock.

Dr. Doty, Health Officer of the Port, did not discover any cases of spinal meningitis on incoming ships yesterday. He made bacteriological tests of five cases classed as pneumonia aboard the Austro-American Lloyd liner Martha Washington and satisfied himself that the disease was really pneumonia. The meningitis cases had been removed on Monday. The liner was allowed to proceed to her dock at Brooklyn late yesterday afternoon.

Secretary McVeagh Returns.

Franklin MacVeagh, Secretary of the Treasury, arrived yesterday from Washington and spent several hours at the Waldorf-Astoria. He had a long conference with William Loeb, Jr., Collector of the Port, on customs affairs. Secretary MacVeagh did not go to the Custom House. He said that he was on his way to his country home at Dublin, N. H.

FIRST DAY'S SALE OF SCHEMM PICTURES

"AMUSING THE BABY" LEADS

Josef Israels's Work Brings $1,300—Craven's "The Drinking Pool" Fetches $1,200—Some Go for $30.

The first sale of the collection of the pictures of the late Peter A. Schemm of Philadelphia, sold by order of his executors at the American Art Galleries last evening, was a very satisfactory one. There was a good audience, and the pictures, all water colors, were attractive. The pictures were largely by modern Dutch artists.

"They were the pictures," said Mr. Kirby in opening the sale, "which Mr. Schemm kept near him for his personal pleasure. He had purchased them of the artists himself, and they were kept in his own chamber in portfolios where he could examine them at his pleasure, and only a few of them framed until they were prepared before leaving Philadelphia for this sale."

The prices were apparently uneven, ranging from $30 to $1,300, the work of the better known and older artists bringing the best prices. The Josef Israels, the only water color by the artist in the collection, "Amusing the Baby," went to Knoedler & Co. for $1,300. "The Drinking Pool," by Willem Maris, went to N. A. Craven for $1,200, and one of the few water colors by Neuhaus, "Contented," brought a comparatively small price, going to C. Fliermans for $180. The same buyer paid one of the higher prices of the evening, $850, for "Unloading the Fishing Boats," by Johannes Hendrik Weissenbruck.

There were a number of Philadelphia people at the sale, and others will be present at Mendelssohn Hall to-night and to-morrow night, when the more important oils will be sold. The family and executors were both represented at the sale last evening.

Joseph Wittman of Philadelphia bought a number of pictures—a "Landscape" by William Cornelius Rip for $40; "Orchard Pasture," De Hoog, $40; "Saying Grace," Kever, $115; "On the Scheldt," Du Chattel, $60; "Dutch Canal," De Hoog, $80; "Hauling Timber," Kakken, $80; "River Scene," Du Chattel, $90; "Approach to a Town," Mastenbrock, $455; "Landscape with Cattle," Groenewegen, $65; "Harbor Scene," Van Mastenbroek, $75, and "Old Windmill," Charles Paul Gruppe, $65.

Following is a list of pictures bringing the highest prices, with names of artists and buyers:

Young Mother—Blommers; C. Fliermans	$175
Saying Grace—Kever; Wittman	115
Ferry Landing—De Bock; A. J. Cameron	125

Landscape with Cattle—Groenewegen; W. H. Johnson	125
A Happy Home—Kever; George P. Millick	250
Returning Home—Valkenburg; Emma A. Capp	95
Dutch Pasture and Cattle—Poggenbeek; Knoedler & Co.	410
Scene in a Dutch Town—Le Comte; C. J. Ulman	100
Fishing Boats—Mesdag; P. J. Cameron	125
Contented—Neuhuys; C. Fliermans	180
Unloading the Fishing Boats—Weissenbruch; C. Fliermans	850
Return to the Barn—William Steelink; Emma A. Capp	180
The Drinkink Pool—Willem Maris; N. A. Craven	1,200
Ducks—George Poggenbeek; Knoedler & Co.	170
The Cobbler—Tony Offermans; C. J. Ulman	205
Amusing the Baby—Israels; Knoedler & Co.	1,300
Winter Scene—Leonard Ochtman; Mrs. Frederick F. Thompson	275

WOMAN A MURDER WITNESS.

Tells of the Shooting of Peter Carralo at Richmond, S. I., in 1903.

The trial of Romeo Magnotti, accused of the murder of Peter Carralo on Aug. 15, 1908, began yesterday before a jury at Richmond, S. I. The principal witness was Mrs. Catherine Whellihan of Amity Street, Rosebank, S. I., who testified that she had seen Magnotti fire two or three shots at Carralo, who fell dead at her feet. The defense had maintained all along that there were only Italian witnesses to the shooting.

Magnotti and his alleged victim were at one time partners in the baking business at Rosebank. Then Carralo started a business in competition, and it is alleged that this rivalry led to the shooting. Magnotti fled to Italy and thence to South America. Recently he returned to this country and went into the baking business at Newark, Ohio, where he was arrested.

American Locomotives for Jamaica.

American locomotives for use on the Government-owned railroad in Jamaica are being loaded on the steamship Santa Marta of the United Fruit Company. They will be assembled at Kingston and run to their destinations under their own steam. American fuel will be used in operating them, rather than the English coal, now used in locomotives there. This is an experiment which, if successful, will result in the ordering of more engines for the roads. The Santa Marta leaves for West Indian ports to-morrow.

VON ARKOVY HAS DEPARTED

Not Liking America and Boasting About Himself to the Last.

Richard von Arkovy, the young Hungarian who called himself "Baron," and to whom several other names have been applied during his lurid sojourn in this city, sailed yesterday for Europe on the North German Lloyd liner Kronprinz Wilhelm in a condition that might be described as peevish. He spent half an hour before he sailed in abusing the United States in six languages—English, French, German, Hungarian, Italian, and Spanish—changing from one to another when at a loss for a word to express the intensity of his feelings regarding this country and its people. Among other things he said he would never come back.

"Since my arrival here," said von Arkovy, "I have been a mark for grafters at every turn. I was arrested on the complaint of an irresponsible man, who admitted in court that he had no case against me. Miserable Hungarians jumped into the limelight to denounce me after I had picked them up in the gutter and kept them from starving. I did not pay a cent to 'square things,' in spite of all that has been said. I was vindicated, however, and I am heartily glad to shake the dust of this accursed land off my feet."

He explained that the "brass knuckles" were placed in his pocket by his faithful valet that he might defend himself from attacks. Then he went on to tell of losing large sums in gambling. And finally he sailed away.

Announcement No. 47

The North Western Limited to St. Paul and Minneapolis

Make sure your ticket reads: "The North Western Line." Then you travel aboard a train that is matchless in luxury and solid comforts—affording in point of equipment and convenience an unequalled service Chicago to St. Paul and Minneapolis. Leaves 6.35 p. m. daily.

Or, if you prefer a scenic ride, the Badger State Express, leaving Chicago 9.00 a. m., has finest standard observation drawing-room parlor cars, and its dining car service is the height of excellence.

Take Pleasure and Pride in Announcing Mr.

HEREWITH THE VERDICT OF THE MEN WHOSE BUSINESS IT IS TO THINK AND WRITE ABOUT THE PLAYS:

LOUIS DE FOE, "World." "Most powerful drama of the season. Finest example of acting of the year."

ARTHUR WARREN, "Tribune." "Most absorbing, most vital play that has been written by an American dramatist."

"EVENING TELEGRAM." "Worthy to rank with 'Alabama' and 'The Witching Hour.'"
